Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Four days in advance of Memorial day the orders began to pour in by mail, telegraph and telephone, indicating at an early date that the trade would be heavy, and up went the price of most items, though carnations remained about the same. But the choice of flowers mattered little to the patrons; therefore all kinds of flowers sold at a fair price and late comers had to take what they could get. Everything was sold and on the following Wednesday there was a clean sheet to begin with. No more sleepy carnations, no more flat, wide-open roses staring one in the face and giving one the blues; no bedraggled iris, snowballs and peonies to take up valuable space. All flowers were gone and the fresh, crisp new stock was indeed welcomed.

The warm spell previous to Memorial day had put an end to even the late varieties of tulips which usually find a place with Decoration day stock, and various other old standbys, such as forget-me-nots, snowballs, dogwood and late lilac, had passed their prime; so the assortment was small this year. Plants of all descriptions sold well, and in some instances took the place of flowers.

Sweet peas last week were small and short-stemmed, and in some cases the heavy rains had injured them. Peonies are coming in greater quantities now and are good, large flowers. They bring a good price. A few days of cool weather have had a splendid effect upon the roses and they are richer in color, with firmer stems. Bermuda lilies are plentiful. Beauties are better in color and a little scarcer on account of the cool weather. Cattleyas are larger and are bringing a better price this week. Cypripediums are scarce. Plants for veranda and window boxes are in great demand. So are Boston and Whitmani ferns.

Various Notes.

George Boucher reports that business was exceptionally good for Memorial day and he had extra help in the store.

Salter Bros. had a good Memorial day trade, but they do not regard it as any larger than in previous years.

E. C. Campbell did a nice business this year and says that things are moving.

The Rochester Floral Co. found Memorial day trade extra good and they are still hustling.

J. B. Keller's Sons were greatly rushed. They report a large gain over the business of last Memorial day, and they still have a busy month before them.

H. E. Wilson was one of the busiest florists during the week and did a tremendous business.

George Hart and his men are still hustling, getting out big shipments of plants. Memorial day business was good.

The Robinson-Macomber wedding was the largest wedding Rochester has had in several years. J. B. Keller's

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

THE earliest shipment of Japanese lily bulbs is due to leave Yokohama in about a fortnight.

THE Iowa Seed Dealers' Association held its fifth annual meeting at Des Moines, June 6.

THE United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin entitled "Grimm Alfalfa and Its Utilization in the Northwest."

THE prospect is for an exceptionally good convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Marblehead, Mass., a fortnight hence.

THE Rochelle Seed Co., of Rochelle, Ill., is erecting another 2-story brick building, 48x82, the same size as the present structure, which it adjoins.

CARLOS JENSEN, export manager for L. Dæhnfeldt, Odense, Denmark, sailed for home June 8, on the S. S. Oscar II, after a trip extending to the Pacific coast.

THE United States Seed Co. has been incorporated at Memphis, Tenn., with a capital stock of $500, by F. D. Craig, R. Wormely, W. E. Rhodes, J. S. Crofford and John W. Apperson.

ONE seedsman, but so far as known, only one, now prints the non-warranty on his letter-head in a position to comply with the legal necessities as outlined in a number of recent court decisions affecting other lines of trade.

CONDON BROS., Rockford, Ill., is a new firm in the jobbing and contract growing seed trade. John R. Condon has been with H. W. Buckbee for twenty years, recently as superintendent, and Leonard Condon has been for sixteen years salesman with the same house.

ADVICES have reached the trade from the pea growing districts in Germany which are discouraging. The weather has been so dry that the outlook at the end of May was not so good as it was a year ago. Estimates that are now being made on the crop run from twenty to forty per cent, which would be an average of less than one-third of a crop; this, however, is provided there is no further damage done. This will have considerable influence on the market price of peas in Europe.

House of Purity Freesia, as grown for the Stumpp & Walter Co.

PURITY

The best and most salable Freesia in the American and European markets. Our stock of this now popular and famous Freesia is the largest in this country. We have bulbs that have been grown under glass (the illustration shows one of our houses), also bulbs grown by the originator, R. Fischer. Both of these stocks are the true Purity stock, from which we receive our bulbs. The very highest quality is guaranteed. The demand for this variety in all the wholesale markets is persistent and universal. Its popularity is undiminished; practically it has no competitor.

during the months of July and August, the facilities of the Seed Laboratory of the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., will be available, as far as space permits, to anyone wishing to become familiar with the practical methods of seed testing. There will be an opportunity to observe the laboratory methods of testing for germination and mechanical purity, including the recognition of crop seeds and the commoner weed seeds.''

ENGLISH DISCLAIMER FALLS.

In England the Lords' Bench has overridden the lower courts and the seed trade's disclaimer. The case was one in which a retail seedsman bought sainfoin, Onobrychis viciæfolia, from a wholesale dealer in grass and clover seeds, parceling the stock out to a number of his customers. It proved to be seeds of giant sainfoin, a less desirable variety, and the farmers applied to their local seedsman for compensation. He settled with them and passed the claim back to the wholesalers, who stood on the non-warranty on the invoice. On the first trial the plaintiff was awarded damages. On advancement, the court of appeals, by two to one, reversed the earlier judgment. The Lords' Bench now restores it.

There was no imputation of fraud in the transaction, but the error of sending out the wrong seed arose from the fact that the seeds of common and giant sainfoin are not distinguishable by either eyesight or touch, and it seemed probable from the evidence that the original grower, a farmer, who supplied the seed to the wholesale seedsmen, was not aware of the difference between the two races of sainfoin. Lord Justice Fletcher-Moulton, one of the appeal judges, gave his reasons at length for differing from his two learned brothers, which, briefly stated, were that as the buyer could not determine, without growing the seed and seeing the plants resulting, whether the seed was true or not, he was compelled to accept it, and that this fact overrode the disclaimer behind which the seedsmen sought to shelter themselves from any consequences of mistake on their own premises. The Lords' Bench seems to have taken the same view.

HOLLAND'S BULB EXPORTS.

The General Society for Bulb Culture at Haarlem publishes statistics of the foreign bulb trade of Holland by years since 1899, showing the exports and imports by countries in kilos (1 kilo=2.2046 pounds). Following is the record of exports for the last two years:

EXPORTS TO—	1909 Kilos.	1910 Kilos.
United States	3,483,200	3,071,000
United Kingdom	6,478,800	6,446,400
Germany and Austria	4,733,500	4,432,200
France, Belgium, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Greece and Turkey	945,100	937,900
Scandinavia and Denmark	1,709,400	1,725,000
Russia	519,100	578,500
Japan	.....	.....
Other countries	53,400	46,900
Total	17,922,500	17,237,900

These figures do not include shipments by parcel post, making a large additional amount to the European countries. The table shows decreased exports in 1910 as compared with 1909, but this has no special significance, as the same has occurred in preceding

ROSA CANINA (Dog Briar) Stocks

They are extremely low-budded on the collar of the roots, which makes SUCKERING PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE.

In 2-year-old, strong field-grown plants, we have in stock for Fall 1911-Spring 1912 delivery such varieties as American Pillar, Leuchtfeuer, Lyon Rose, Jessie, Prince de Bulgarie, Lady Ashtown, Mme. Ravery, Mme. Cæ. Testout, Kaiserin Aug. Victoria, Gruss an Teplitz, Druschki, Pharisaer, etc., etc.

The Dog Briar is the very best stock for out-of-door roses. They outlive any other stock, and the color of flowers is more brilliant and true. Roses on this stock are far superior to those grown on own roots—Manetti, Rugosa, Multiflora, Sweet Briar.

years. On the whole, the trade has greatly increased in the last ten years—doubled in exports. The records show a large increase of imports from Japan. These began in 1902 with 3,311 kilos, and were more or less in quantity during each of the intervening years till 1910, when, apparently, Japanese bulbs suddenly sprang into great favor. The largest growth of imports is from the British Isles, the amount increasing 800 per cent in ten years. In the last ten years the exports to the British Isles and to Germany and Austria have doubled and to the United States and the other countries in the list have nearly trebled.

"Freezing weather the first week of April seriously threatened the bulb crop in this district," writes Consul Frank W. Mahin, at Amsterdam. "Developing tulips and hyacinths were nipped by the frost and total destruction was feared. But an abundance of sunshine and fairly warm weather since then have improved the situation, and it is now probable that the crop will be normal, though retarded in development."

association by the secretary within a few days. A most excellent program has been arranged and some well-known seedsmen and instructors in agricultural work are to appear. There are three entirely new features this year, which should prove of much benefit to all members in attendance. Telegraphic crop reports will be received from most of the growers in the United States and also some from Canada, giving the latest crop conditions up to Tuesday, June 20. A question box will provide for general discussion and be the means of obtaining information on any subject that is of particular interest to any member of the association. Questions may be mailed or handed either to the president or secretary. Each state correspondent is asked to make a verbal report if he is present, or otherwise a written report, of all legislative matters that have come up in the last year within his state or states. The social features of the program have not been forgotten and arrangements have been made to enjoy as much as possible of the delightful summer resort at which the meeting will be held. The annual banquet will be given on Wednesday evening, June 21, and arrangements have been made with the hotel so that there will be no extra charge to the seedsmen who are guests of the hotel.

BURNETT BROS.
SEEDS :: BULBS :: PLANTS
72 Cortlandt St., NEW YORK CITY

The man who knows everything has not been born; but the man who thinks he does is born at the rate of a dozen a minute. As he grows older, however, he realizes how little he knows or rather sees how much he doesn't know. The bull-headed kind are ashamed to admit it, but the real wise man you will always find seeking knowledge, asking questions and reasoning out things continually.

The reason why Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are superior to most brands is principally because a shrewd Japanese grower and exporter reasoned carefully years ago, and rightly came to the conclusion that it paid to throw away defective plants in the lily fields rather than to allow them to be marketed as his product. Moreover, he reasoned further and concluded that it was policy to spend more money for fertilizer and labor in cultivating the bulbs to avoid being obliged to stand a loss for crippled plants, until at the present time his crops are perhaps the finest in the world. There are no better bulbs produced that we know of, and they are offered to you as reasonably as we can afford to sell them. Just try the Horseshoe Brand next fall. Cold storage bulbs ready for future or immediate shipment.

PACIFIC COAST.

Portland, Ore.—The Gibson Rose Nurseries have been incorporated, with a capital stock of $50,000.

Garfield, Wash.—Scott Bros., of the Roselawn Greenhouses, have purchased J. L. Bourn's range of 10,000 square feet of glass at Moscow, Idaho, and will run it in conjunction with their establishment here.

Spokane, Wash. — M. Armstrong, Hoyt Bros. Co. and the Spokane Florist Co. unite in reporting Memorial day sales as the heaviest for the season in the history of the city. An immense stock was on hand and was about exhausted during the day.

San Gabriel, Cal.—R. Fischer, originator of Purity freesia, was much pleased with the illustration of William Nicholson's stock in The Review of May 25, especially as he had supplied Mr. Nicholson with a part of his bulbs for last season. Mr. Fischer says there are numerous growers all over the country who have fine Purity, as it is of easy culture and responds quickly to good treatment.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week was considered a harvest for the florist. Several weeks of cold and rainy weather retarded all outside stock, so it was up to the florist to supply the major part of the flowers for Memorial day. Carnations realized $1.50 per dozen and were sold out several days in advance. Roses were in full crop and yet not equal to the demand. Sweet peas, iris, gladioli and poppies were disposed of at top prices. The shipping trade was unusually active. It was necessary in many cases to substitute when the specified flowers were not procurable. Considerable stock was shipped from California, but everything was cleaned out before the day was over.

The closing days of the week find a considerable change in the weather; it is extremely warm, for which we are grateful, for it was sadly needed to bring out the roses, as the rose festival commenced June 5.

Water lilies are arriving in limited quantities and find ready sale.

Various Notes.

John R. Fotheringham, representing the F. R. Pierson Co., is calling on the trade this week. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

From all accounts, Memorial day trade, in general, was not ahead of that of last year. There was a shortage of common flowers, such as stocks, candytuft and gaillardias, but it is not clear whether the big demand for cheap blossoms was to blame or whether there is less of this stock grown now than formerly. Bride gladioli were late again this year, owing to the continued cold weather, and they will not be in their prime for another week. This is small satisfaction to those who grow them, as they have been in big demand for the last two weeks. Sweet peas were not as plentiful as usual, for the same reason, and the prices consequently ranged higher than last season. Peonies, except a few late patches, are out of the race for this year. Bulbous stock, with the exception of gladioli, is over or not yet ready. Outside roses sold well, but inside stock of the same flower moved slowly. Carnations were in about sufficient quantity to fill all demands and outside carnations were not used except for the cheapest cemetery bouquets.

Those dealers who cater to the out-of-town shipping trade report that, as already stated, the demand was almost exclusively for cheap stock, and although the bulk of flowers sent may have been equal to that of last year, the gross sales will hardly exceed it. There is a slight diversity of opinion on this, however, as several shippers had a healthy increase in business.

Various Notes.

The Golden Gate park commissioners have brought suit against S. L. Goldstein, a well-known San Francisco merchant, for $250, claiming that damage

PLANTS YELLOW AND STUNTED.

What conditions cause tomato plants to become stunted and get off color, when grown in the bench, in flats or in pots? What causes celery to act in the same way? Would a weak solution of nitrate of soda be of any benefit?

A. B. R.

The cause of the plants turning yellow and looking stunted is usually a lack of sufficient fertilizer for so many plants in a small quantity of soil. If more fertilizer were added before putting the soil into the boxes, it would be better. A weak solution of any fertilizer will help, but I believe that you will find dried blood more satisfactory than any other. Dissolve a handful in a sprinkler can half full of warm water; add a little cold water to cool it before using, and use about that much to every flat of plants. The benefits will be noticeable in three days. H. G.

MILLEPEDS ON CUCUMBERS.

How can I get rid of insects like the ones I am sending under separate cover? My benches in the greenhouses are just covered with these worms and in the evening they come out of the ground and they eat into the cucumber stalks. They eat up from the bottom of the roots and kill the plants. My whole crop will be gone in a short time.

W. K.

The pests are millepeds, more commonly called thousand-legs. Tobacco dust scattered on the surface will destroy many. They can also be poisoned by laying a mash of fresh shorts, sweetened with molasses and mixed with Paris green, but if they are in the soil in such numbers the quickest and most effectual way to clean them out will be to secure some carbon bisulphide and pour a teaspoonful into holes bored in the soil, eighteen inches apart each way. Avoid using any lights when pouring out this liquid, as it is of an explosive nature. Cover the holes firmly as soon as the carbon has been poured in, and do it preferably while the soil is quite damp, when the fumes will penetrate better. It will be well to sterilize your soil before planting cucumbers another season. This will insure your getting rid of all insect pests, as well as all weed seeds. C. W.

STRAWBERRIES FROM SEED.

How can I gather strawberry seeds, and when should they be planted without the aid of glass? E. W. C.

The best time to sow strawberry seed is as soon after it has been cleaned as possible. The fresher the seeds, the better they will germinate. Select only large and perfect fruit for seeds. You can dry these on paper or wash. Seeds which float on the water are of no use. Those which sink are good. Select a sheltered and rather shady spot for the bed. Pulverize the soil well. Cover the seeds lightly and keep well watered. All the seedlings will fruit next season. If raised early under glass, many will fruit the same year.

EUROPEAN NURSERY CONDITIONS

In the recently issued government bulletin on the danger of the spread of gipsy and brown-tail moths through imported nursery stock, C. L. Marlatt says in part:

"During the summer of 1909, and also again in 1910, Dr. L. O. Howard, who was in Europe principally to supervise the introduction of parasites for the gipsy and brown-tail moths into Massachusetts, made a careful inspection of the nursery regions of Holland, Belgium and northern France, and also England.

"The writer was in Europe, on a personal trip, in the summer of 1909, and made an examination of similar conditions in Holland, Belgium and parts of Germany.

"Holland probably presents the cleanest bill of health in the matter of insect pests, and particularly of the gipsy moth and brown-tail moth. This country enjoys a good inspection service, and all Dutch nurseries are carefully inspected twice each year, so there is probably less danger now from shipments from Holland than from any other country.

"Belgium, in 1909, was in very bad condition, and the writer found the brown-tail moth more abundant there than he had ever seen it, hedgerows often being plastered with the winter nests. One such row the writer noted was only a few miles from the border of Holland and within easy flight of the moths to large Dutch nurseries. Belgium has, however, since September, 1909, established an inspection service, applying only to nurseries exporting to America and limited to field examination, twice yearly, of growing stock. While a distinct improvement, the inspection as indicated is still inadequate, as shown by much infested stock still coming to this country under official certificate.

"In France, in 1909, Dr. Howard found no governmental inspection system of nurseries. The certificates attached to shipments of nursery stock received in this country from France were signed, as a rule, by men connected with agricultural schools, and probably in the case of most of the certificates the stock had never been seen by the expert. The general infestation of the stock coming from France to this country during the last two years made it abundantly plain that these certificates were absolutely valueless.

"Dr. Howard found that nursery stock for export was in many cases grown in the vicinity of hedges and trees infested with the brown-tail moth and gipsy moth and other injurious insects not yet introduced into the United States, and no special precautions were being taken by the nurserymen to prevent the infestation of export stock by injurious insects. The brown-tail moth nests are so characteristic and noticeable that it is only by absolute indifference on the part of French exporters that they are packed for shipment without removal.

"As a result of the agitation of 1909, the French exporters promised to take all possible precautions, and the French ministry of agriculture promised to found a governmental inspection service. The Chamber of Deputies, however, failed to pass the inspection law proposed by the ministry of agriculture, and, as already noted, the condition of the 'inspected material' of 1910 was no better than in the previous year.

"The director of agriculture of France, however, continued to urge the need of a plant-inspection service for export nursery stock, and early in November of 1910 this department was advised, through the Department of State and the ambassador of France to the United States, of the final establishment of such service. Later the details of the law were communicated to Dr. Howard by Dr. Paul Marchal, who is charged with its execution.

"Dr. Marchal's high reputation gives a guarantee of thoroughness, and a great improvement has actually taken place in the condition of the nursery stock coming from France." The rank infestation of 1909-10 has given place to moderate infestation of 1911, but there is still decided room for betterment.

"In England Dr. Howard found that, as in France, there was no governmental nursery inspection. The nursery conditions there are somewhat better than in France, but the brown-tail moth and other injurious insects which might easily be imported on nursery stock occur in England. The officials of the government had the establishment of a governmental inspection service under consideration, and were willing to establish such a service, but stated that the demand for it must come from British nurserymen. An attempt was therefore made by Dr. Howard to get these interests to ask for such service, and, while no action has yet been taken, it seems probable that the English government will move in this direction."

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Speaking of Decoration day trade, we can say it was quite satisfactory in most respects. The demand was fine, but it did not exceed the supply, as there was plenty to go around. Hot and dry weather, such as has not been experienced in May for many years, was what the florists had to contend with; consequently stock, and perfectly fresh at that, only lasted a short time.

Peonies could be seen everywhere in great quantities and were hard to keep, causing many to find their way to the ash barrel. It seemed that this year everybody had peonies for sale, not only the florists, but farmers, market gardeners and private individuals, and the price by the dozen varied from 15 to 75 cents, which is the cheapest they have ever been known to sell.

The weather also had a telling effect on roses, which looked more like August blooms than like those of May. The majority were small and burnt looking, while the supply was heavy; nevertheless, there being none better on the market, they sold remarkably well, as it was a case of take them or none. These conditions were especially true with Brides and Maids, while Maryland, Killarney, Rhea Reid and Kaiserin held up fairly well. Carnations also came in quite small and burnt on the edges. The hot weather seemed to come so suddenly that neither flowers nor growers had an opportunity to get adapted to it.

Gladioli and lilies held up well and were really the most presentable of all the flowers, except peonies, which were also of good quality. Good ferns were difficult to find, most of them coming in soft and burnt. Smilax was scarce, likewise Sprengeri and plumosus. Small flowers, such as daisies, stocks, etc., sold well in mixed bouquets.

While stock was in many respects poor, and the weather also was against us, nevertheless results were good and the sales figured up to a good Decoration day business.

The pot plant trade has kept up a steady pace, and as it started earlier than usual this year the choicest varieties of stock have been cleaned out and at the present time there is nothing but the leavings hanging on, and these are being sold in job lots to the street fakers.

Trade since Decoration day has kept up remarkably well, owing to the June weddings, commencements and confirmations, and it promises to be quite a busy month.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. has already benched several thousand carnation plants, in order to be able to start cutting new carnations in August. This firm is also busy planting chrysanthemums and roses.

F. Lembke spent a night in Dayton last week.

Harriet Van Meter, of Springfield, O., who has been in Oklahoma for the last two months, reported for duty just in time to help out with the Decoration day rush. She reports a royal good time.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson says she had a fine trade for Memorial day, cleaning out on both cut flowers and plants.

It is Not Too Late to Plant

DREER'S SELECT POTTED ROSES

We can still supply, in prime condition for immediate planting, strong 5 and 6-inch pots of the following choice lists of roses. Do not discourage late planting, but supply the stock while your customers are in the humor for buying, which always occurs when roses are in flower in the garden during June. We are prepared to meet this late demand and your customers will be pleased and will not only gain a season's growth, but from the Hybrid, Tea and other free flowering varieties they will secure a sufficient number of flowers to not only satisfy them, but also stimulate a desire for future plantings.

FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING

The Roses here offered are field grown plants which have been potted into 5 or 6-inch pots (according to the growth of the variety) during the winter months. They have been stored in cold houses and cold frames and are in the best possible condition to turn over to your retail customers for outdoor planting, giving an entirely different result from stock carried over winter in storage. For best results the plants should be shipped in pots; in this shape they will carry safely to reasonable distances by freight.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Last week's business was fair as to volume, with the seasonable and inevitable downward tendency of prices, and the stocks on hand at the end were closed out by liberal concessions on figures, but we now seem to have reached the acme of dullness. At this writing, June 3, the Baltimore Florists' Exchange is loaded up with all kinds of flowers, with few buyers, and the street men are wary of purchasing in heavy lots. Peonies are to be had at a low figure and are arriving from every point of the compass.

While there are a number of small wedding decorations called for, the big jobs are few and far between. A number of our society buds are being married, but they are not making as much show this year as in the past. With all holidays now behind us, and only commencement exercises and June weddings to follow, the present season is coming to an end, after which time alterations, vacations, etc., are in order.

Various Notes.

Halliday Bros., who conduct one of the oldest florists' establishments in Baltimore, have disposed of all of their greenhouses and land, and the property will be improved with cottages. Halliday Bros. were among the largest growers of carnations in Baltimore.

Q.

WATERBURY, CONN.

The Market.

Business last week was most satisfactory. Funeral work has been heavy. June weddings are now demanding large supplies of peas and valley, both of which are scarce. Not only is business active, but prices remain up. Peonies are abundant. Memorial day business was much greater than most florists looked forward to. Everything in cut flowers and bedding plants was readily sold. Lilacs were gone. Some iris and snowballs were about all the garden stock obtainable.

The florists are now looking forward to the June weddings and high school commencements.

Various Notes.

Alexander Dallas had his stores on Grand street and North Main street prettily arranged for the Decoration day trade, which kept his help on the jump for a few days.

The Flower Shop, at 144 Bank street, did a big business in cut flowers.

Saxe & Floto certainly got their share of sales, both in cut flowers and bedding plants.

B.

Bluffton, Ind.—Myers & Co.'s spring business has far exceeded that of last year, especially in bedding plants.

Pansy Plants

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

June 1 finds our plantsmen pretty well cleaned up after a most satisfactory season. There is still enough work in the way of planting and filling of window and porch boxes, but the houses are about emptied of anything good, and all report a fine season.

Decoration day was really a surprise this year. Everything one could think of was in bloom outdoors and it was thought that would pretty nearly supply the demand, but, on the contrary, the demand on the wholesalers was never so great as this year and stock was surprisingly good considering the extremely hot weather of the previous two weeks. Roses, of course, were smaller, but still good, and carnations have stood the heat finely. Business generally has been good since Decoration day; weddings and commencements, no doubt, have made the greatest demand, but a couple of good funerals have helped.

Home peonies were in for Decoration day, the first time in years. For some reason outdoor flowers did not seem to have as good keeping quality as usual, and their season has been considerably shorter.

Various Notes.

T. P. Langhans has moved to his summer home and has added a new Cadillac auto, from which he is getting a good deal of pleasure these fine evenings.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a beautiful window of gloxinias, ferns and Kalmia latifolia in bloom.

Randolph & McClements made a special run on hydrangea plants for Decoration day, and their show last week was grand. They still have all hands working overtime on porch boxes.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has been carrying a fine lot of Beauties and lilies, which are good stock this hot weather.

Wilbert Berger, age 17 years, an employee of the A. W. Smith Co., was injured on the freight elevator Monday night, May 29, and died in the Homeopathic hospital Thursday. Burial was from his home, 3864 Douglas avenue, Sunday, June 4. Hoo-Hoo.

HOW ABOUT YOUR EMPTY BENCHES?

After Decoration Day you have empty benches. Will it pay you to have them empty? Take a few minutes to think and consider which will pay the best. Chrysanthemums? No, I know something better. I plant a bench or two with asters, in July, and in August I cut them. That gives me time to refill my benches with a fine lot of fall and holiday plants, such as cyclamen, ferns and poinsettias, roses and other plants suitable for my fall business. I am going to write an order right away to Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, for his GIANT CREGO ASTER. It is the best early branching cut aster in the world.

Yes, we have it for sale in four separate colors; 20,000 of them in white, purple, rose and pink, very strong plants, 2½-inch pots, $3.00 100; $25.00 1000.

WORCESTER, MASS.

The Market.

Decoration day business was a record breaker. The weather was perfect. The good reports come from all sides, combined with the general complaint of not having enough stock. Some of the people who put off getting their flowers until the last minute were greatly disappointed. Though there was a large supply of carnations, they brought good prices and more could have been sold had they been at hand. The rose crop was also heavy, but the trade did not seem to run in that direction until the supply of other stock was exhausted. Great quantities of sweet peas and jasmines were shipped into this market and were readily picked up. Ferns were so scarce that it was almost impossible to get them, which proved a great inconvenience to those who had a heavy demand for bouquets.

Besides the Decoration day rush, there was a big demand for funeral work, and the florists were kept on the jump from early morning until late at night.

Various Notes.

The Protective Union, on Main street, had about all the business it was possible to handle, disposing of a great many blooming plants. This city is about cleaned out of good geraniums and bedding plants.

The Pierce Floral Co. reports business fine for Memorial day.

H. F. A. Lange had a big share of the trade. He had a fine supply of bedding plants and cut flowers.

F. Sokol, the wholesaler, was kept busy for a few days carrying stock to the retailers in this city.

Mr. Cook, the Marlboro carnation grower, did a fine business in Decoration week. He certainly had no trouble in disposing of his carnations. He sends supplies to Springfield and Worcester.

A. George, whose greenhouses are at Marlboro, reports business for the last winter as "the best ever." He has the reputation of being one of the best violet growers in the New England states. He is busy now getting his asters ready for the summer trade.

H. F. Littlefield is still doing business at the old stand. He reports that last season's business was one of the best he ever had. He has built up a fine trade. He reports a fine Memorial day business. B.

THE EDGEBROOK GREENHOUSES AND NURSERIES

OF THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO., EDGEBROOK, CHICAGO, ILL.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The debutante season will begin this month in Cleveland, to avoid such an overcrowding of events as was the case two years ago. Kaiserin roses are extremely scarce and White Killarney roses are short-stemmed, which makes the June wedding orders hard to fill. There is plenty of good valley, maidenhair ferns and orchids. American Beauty roses are a little off color, but plentiful. June business is holding up well and nobody seems discouraged.

Various Notes.

The Cleveland Florists' Club and the Flower Club will hold a picnic sometime in July. The same committee which so ably conducted the May dance will have charge of the arrangements for the picnic, and it is expected that every florist in and about Cleveland will be on deck.

Mrs. A. Lincoln Brown has an exhibit at the Ideal Home show. While, owing to the extreme heat, she is not making an elaborate exhibit, she is the only florist represented, and her bridal table attracts a great deal of attention.

Otto C. Knoble has moved to his country home for the summer.

Several of the florists were guests of Frank Friedley for a fishing party along Rocky river on Saturday night, June 3. They say the fish were biting in fours, threes and a pair.

The Ohio Floral Co. and Knoble Bros. are closing at noon on Sundays during June, July and August. C. D. F.

Kankakee, Ill.—Splear Bros., owners of the Whittemore farm, east of town, are building a greenhouse, 50x200, which will be completed this summer. Next winter they will grow lettuce for the Chicago market and in the following season they will grow carnations.

In Small Plants

We have the following in 2½-in. pots, $2.50 per 100; 25 at 100 rate:

Verbenas, assorted.

We have a house of Lemon Verbenas, the well-known plant of sweet-scented foliage. Some people call it Lemon Trifolium, 4-in. pots, bushy, $7.00 per 100.

Torenia Fournieri.

Phlox Drummondi, dwarf and grandiflora.

Tagetes French Dwarf Marigold (African marigold).

Marigold, large African, in bloom, 1 ft. high, 3-in. pots at only $3.00 per 100, worth $7.00 per 100.

Sweet Alyssum Little Gem.

Coleus, Verschaffeltii, Golden Bedder and Queen Victoria, $2.50 per 100; fancy colors, $4.00 per 100. Brillancy, large, 3-in., 10c; 4-in., 15c.

Tradescantia, Parlor Ivy and Kenilworth Ivy.

Thunbergia or Black-eyed Susan.

Nasturtium, dwarf, 4-in., 6c; 3-in., 4c.

Pyrethrum Aureum (Golden Feather), 2½-in., $2.50 per hundred.

Lobelias, Compacta and trailing Crystal Palace.

Centaurea Gymnocarpa (Dusty Miller).

Petunias, Dwarf, Inimitable; California Giant, 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Cornflowers, blue, large plants, $4.00 per 100; assorted colors, $2.50 per 100.

Antirrhinum, or snapdragons, assorted, 2½-in., 4c.

Cobaea Scandens, staked up, 4-in., 10c; 3-in., $4.00 per 100.

Acalypha, 2½-in., $2.50 per 100.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white Moonvine, for which I have a world-wide reputation. I have made a specialty of it for the past 16 years and am known as the Moonvine Grower of America and grow yearly about 20,000. In 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-in., 8c; 4-in., staked up, $12.00 per 100. Now ready.

Bedding Plants

Geraniums. S. A. Nutt, Alphonse Ricard, Mme. Buchner (white), 4-in., $6.00 per 100.

Ivy geraniums, assorted, 4-in., 6c.

Double Petunias, assorted, 4-in., 6c.

Salvias, Scarlet Sage, Clara Bedman and Bonfire, 4-in., 6c.

Heliotropes, 4-in., 6c.

Ageratums, blue, 4-in., 6c.

Begonias, Vernon (dark red) and Erfordii (best pink). Our begonias are well known and are an improvement over the old Vernon type. One bed of these once seen in bloom will speak for itself, stands the sun and the hottest weather when nothing else blooms, and begonias will outlast all the bedding bloomers in the garden, lawns or in pots. 8000 now ready, 4-in. pots, 6c.

Begonia Erfordii. This so well known strain is another new, improved pink variety of ours, makes smaller leaves, but an abundance of pink flowers, never ceases to bloom summer and winter; plants medium height, but bushy; 4-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

Lantanas, assorted colors, 4-in., $6.00 per 100.

Fuchsias, assorted colors, $7.00 100; 5-in., 10c.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

Business last week exceeded expectations. There seems to be a satisfactory report from all sides in regard to Memorial day. Most of the growers and retailers had to work two or three nights in the effort to fill their orders. Funeral work kept coming in, to help make things interesting.

Bedding plants sell well and at good prices. Pansies and daisies are fine. These sold fast at Memorial day, as well as geraniums, forget-me-nots and hydrangeas in pots. Valley has been in splendid demand. Weddings are numerous. Sweet peas are still good and there is a persistent call for them for the June weddings.

Since the Memorial day rush there has still been a large supply of roses, and they are of fine quality. The Maid and Bride roses are the rage for the June weddings, though White Killarney is also a favorite. There is a good supply of carnations, at moderate prices.

Various Notes.

J. N. Champion & Co. did their usual big business for Memorial day. They sold quantities of roses and carnations. Their stock of plants was complete and seasonable.

James Bruce had a large stock of plants and had no trouble in disposing of them. He also sold lots of cut flowers.

A. O. McCrea disposed of lots of plants and cut flowers.

Alfred Ostermann says business was fine and he could have sold many more plants, especially geraniums.

Mrs. Robert Arnold says she could have done a much larger trade had the flowers been at hand.

Charles Munro was kept busy during the rush trying to supply the public with bouquets, which were sold about as fast as they were made.

William Long reports good sales of bouquets and plants.

S. H. Moore, of Chapel street, put in a busy week. Several large wedding decorations, with the Memorial day business, kept him hustling. B.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

THE COAL MARKET.

The situation in the coal market this spring is exactly the reverse of the situation one year ago. Last season many mines were tied up by strikes. This was especially true of the western district, and the eastern mines, producing such coals as Pocahontas, had the field almost to themselves. Coal was in short supply all through the summer, and there were dire forebodings as to what would happen once winter set in. At no time during the season were there any car shortages or freight blockades, and once the western mines got their labor troubles settled production was so heavy that coal was at a discount all season long. Consumption averaged less than usual, and this spring the market has been in a condition some coal men describe as bordering on demoralization. There are more cars of coal on track at practically all the centers than there are buyers who care to take them in. This looks like a favorable time for florists to fill their bins.

TWO CONNECTED HOUSES.

We are building two houses, each 30x150 feet. The houses will be connected. They will be built on ground that slopes to the east. There is about four feet of a drop in the 150 feet. The boiler will be at the east end of the houses. The walls of the houses are six feet high and the ridge is thirteen feet from the ground. We want a temperature of 65 degrees at night and 70 to 80 degrees in the daytime, at 5 degrees below zero. There are four beds on the floor, the full length of the house. How many 2-inch flows and returns will be needed and where would you place them to get the best results? Where would you place the expansion tank? We want to use the gravity system, to help the flow of water. The supply tank will be above the houses, on the higher ground. What size of feed pipe will be needed? What size of boiler? H. B.

To heat a house 30x150 feet to 65 degrees in weather 5 degrees below zero would require either nineteen or twenty 2-inch pipes, according to the exposure and condition of the houses. Except under exceptionally favorable circumstances, not more than 250 square feet of radiation should be supplied by a 2-inch flow pipe. Too few flows give a sluggish circulation and lessen the efficiency of the system. Not less than seven 2-inch flows should be used and eight would be better, but when a greenhouse is more than seventy-five feet long I think it is more satisfactory if 2½-inch flow pipes are used. A desirable plan would be to start from the boiler, either with one 4-inch or two 3-inch main flow pipes for each house, and break these up so as to have four 2½-inch flows and fifteen 2-inch returns in each of the houses. The flows should have a slight fall and two can be placed on the side walls, and two on the purlin posts or suspended from the roof. To supply the two houses the boiler should be of sufficient size to supply 4,000 square feet of radiating surface.

A TILE AND CONCRETE STACK.

We built a smokestack, thirty-two feet high, of 15-inch terra-cotta pipe, cementing all the joints thoroughly. Then, procuring some 16-inch boards, we made a wooden form, two and one-half feet square and sixteen inches high, around the terra-cotta. Having a supply of coal ashes that contained plenty of fine dust, we mixed the ashes with cement in the proportion of one part of cement to five of ashes, making the mixture almost as thin as water. We hoisted this to the top of the 16-inch boards, poured it in and continually kept tamping it with a long pole. When this form was filled we made another, and so on to the top of the stack. After two weeks we took the forms down and we had a good and cheap stack.

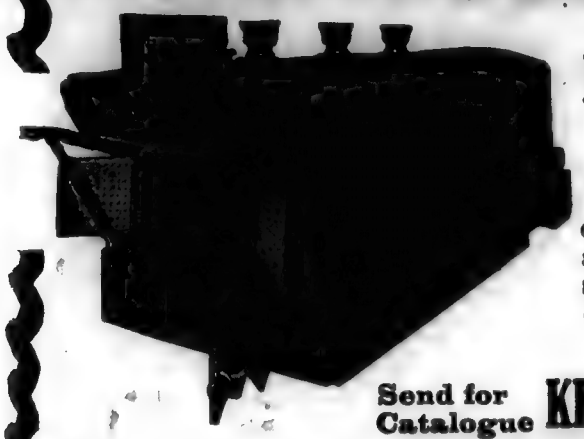
A stack of any ordinary size could be built in this way, and the price of the terra-cotta would be about the same as the cost, in labor, time and material, of inside forms.

Benj. J. Passmore.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The Market.

Memorial day business, on the whole, was highly satisfactory. All fears that flowers would be scarce proved groundless. Carnations were of good quality. There was a large amount of funeral work, and many wedding bouquets were also made during the rush. This is the month of weddings, and business, as a consequence, should be good.



Various Notes.

Olson & Lunden had great success in disposing of their large supply of cut flowers. Their Shasta daisies looked fine last week, being one mass of blooms.

Otto Glueck, of Marion, hit it right with his sweet peas for Decoration day. They were in great demand.

Fires Once Every 4 to 6 Hours in Coldest Weather; Kroeschell Better than Other Boilers

I am fully satisfied with your No. 2 Kroeschell boiler. I have had different kinds of saddle and tubular boilers, but none of them give such satisfaction as yours. I have 7000 sq. ft. of glass, and your boiler would take care of 8000 sq. ft. of glass. I maintain 50° temperature and fire every four to six hours in cold weather; otherwise from six to eight hours.

ing cut flowers at retail, a suit has been filed in the district court asking that Mr. Walter's 1,000 shares of stock in the concern be forfeited as liquidated damages and be turned back to the company.

The Denver Wholesale Florists' Co. is the plaintiff in the action. It sets forth that June 30, 1909, an agreement was entered into by seven local florists not to sell cut flowers to any other persons or firms than the plaintiff company. Each of the seven florists held 1,000 shares of stock in the concern and each agreed to place his stock certificate in the hands of Ernest Morris as trustee.

It is alleged that, April 1, 1911, Mr. Walter opened a flower store in the business section of the city and has been selling cut flowers in violation of his agreement. The court is asked to decree that Mr. Walter has lost the right to his stock and that Trustee Morris is ordered to surrender the certificate to the plaintiff concern. The other stockholders in the company are Ben Boldt, Emil Glauber, N. A. Benson, L. C. Waterbury, Fred Hall and F. C. Maler.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

There is a large supply of carnations arriving, but they are feeling the effects of the hot weather. Roses are in plentiful supply, but of poor quality. American Beauties are exceptionally good for the season, and will be in great demand for commencements, Friday, June 9, which will relieve the overstocked condition of the market. New eastern ferns arriving are good.

Various Notes.

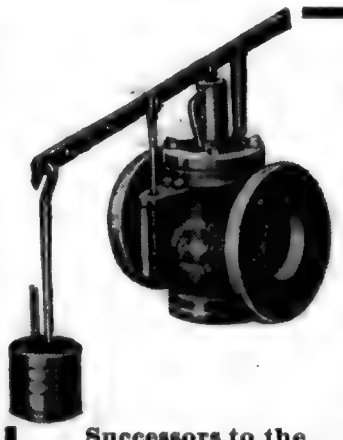
William Murphy reports some extra large orders of carnations for June 9.



The florists of the Sixth street flower market are still selling geraniums as fast as they can bring them to market.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

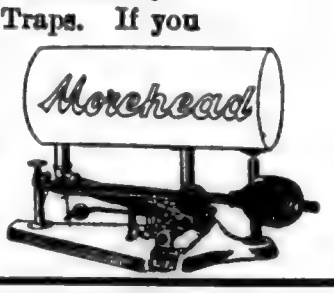
GREENHOUSE HEATING



is a perplexing question to all florists EXCEPT those using

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS

¶ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.

¶ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.

¶ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.

¶ By way of getting acquainted, just send your name and address and ask for "Trap Book."

The Market.

The continued warm weather has changed the market considerably. Stock comes on with a rush and then flies open so quickly that the dealers sell a dollar's worth and waste 50 cents' worth. Some varieties of peonies are flowering which in other years we are cutting June 20. Carnations are small and the rank growth makes them hard to move. Outdoor stock for Memorial day was a thing of the past—that is, lilacs, snowballs and other such flowers. Of course, this was not much loss to the trade, as such flowers move in large quantities and at low prices. Peonies sold well at a good price. Carnations, roses and peas were the leaders and the market was cleaned early. The day was ideal, as also were the previous days, which made the work handier for the vase and pot business. The earliness of the season brought out all the work at once, but this gives the advantage of a longer season.

Various Notes.

The local trade was much surprised last week by the announcement that Miss Rachel M. Rebstock had been married to Capt. Johnson. Miss Rebstock has been connected with the florists' business in Buffalo for a good many years and during the latter part of the time has been in business for herself. She has attained wonderful success and has one of the largest retail businesses in Buffalo.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held this week, to discuss the flower show for the fall season.

YONKERS, N. Y.

A regular meeting of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held in Wiggins hall on Friday, June 2. The executive committee made a most satisfactory report with regard to the coming show, all prize money being already assured.

H. Nichols, superintendent for H. Trevor, exhibited a fine collection of sweet peas in twenty varieties, and received a cultural commendation. A similar award went to L. Melliot for some fine gloxinias.

The next meeting, July 7, will have a social character. W. Macdonald, T. Mahoney and F. Hoffman were appointed a committee to make arrangements for it.

TORONTO.

The Market.

June has opened with more than the usual rush of business. Weddings have been numerous and stock has been in big demand. There have been a few large affairs and several of the florists have received big orders. Roses are quite plentiful. Killarney is holding up well in spite of the hot weather. Richmond is quite good, but Bride and Maid are inclined to be poor. Carnations are commencing to get small. A few lilies are still coming on the market and these are eagerly sought for design work. Funeral work has been quite plentiful. Sweet peas shortened up during the hot weather, but two or three days of cooler weather brought them on again. Some fine orchids are seen in the various stores.

Various Notes.

S. A. Frost has disposed of nearly all of his importation of boxwood and bay trees. In the last shipment he received some blue spruce and some fine magnolias. These sold well and brought a good price.

J. H. Dunlop and Wm. Fendley, of Brampton, are sending some fine sweet peas on the market.

Grobba & Wandrey, of Mimico, have a big crop of peonies. The cut is just now coming on the market in quantity.

Charles Turp, Sr., of J. H. Dunlop's, is lying ill at his home on Bloor street. Geo. Sewell, who has been in England for the last five years, is again with Mr. Dunlop.

S. Tidy motored to St. Catharines June 4, returning on Monday. Had a fine trip, only the roads were muddy.

WESTERLY, R. I.

The Market.

If business continues as active as it was for the first week of the month of weddings, it will certainly make the local florists happy. Roses were never better than at present. Maid and Bride seem to be the favorites. The outdoor stock is coming along in fine shape. Lilacs are gone. There is still a good amount of funeral work. Decoration day business, on the whole, was highly satisfactory.

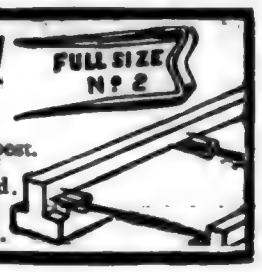
Various Notes.

The Westerly Burial Co. did a fine Decoration day business in cut flowers and potted plants. They also had some fine hydrangeas for sale.

S. J. Reuter & Son were certainly rushed. Besides supplying their regular trade, they sent large shipments to Boston and New London. They have stores in both of these cities.

Victor Schousboe, formerly employed by S. J. Reuter & Son, is about to erect a large greenhouse on Beach street. During the last winter he grew valley.

Conrad Schultz had a heavy business on Decoration day and for several days before, in both retailing and wholesaling. He has been shipping fine carnations to New York. B.



KALISPELL, MONT.

Memorial day cleaned out stock in this town, and the rapidly increasing population in the Flathead valley will undoubtedly keep local florists busy for all time. Kalispell Gardens withstood the onslaught for some days, but had to admit defeat, and even this firm's big stock of plants looked sad when the rush was over.

A joke is told at the expense of the Kalispell Gardens, although their stock was quite above reproach. A boy, looking at the Narcissus poeticus in the Gardens' retail window, remarked to his mate: "Gee! They're pickin' potato flowers and sellin' 'em!"

The Market.

Business for Decoration day was great and all dealers were well satisfied. Stock was none too plentiful, as there were not many outdoor flowers. Peonies sold well. Carnations were also disposed of without any trouble, as the price was reasonable. Many bouquets of mixed flowers were sold. Cheap flowers were in great demand, as is usual at this time. Window and veranda boxes are again coming into favor and considerable work of this kind is being done. This, with the June weddings and some funeral work, made the week a good one for the florists.

Various Notes.

John Bonell was kept busy during the Memorial day rush, getting rid of all his fine stock of plants.

The Blatchley Co. had a handsome window display of bedding plants last week.

R. W. Barrow did a big business in cut flowers and design work.

Joseph Greenbacker and his force of men were kept busy making bouquets, which were quickly taken.

William Woodley did a fine business in bedding plants. He had a large stock of plants and had no trouble in getting rid of them. B.

TRENTON, N. J.

The Park Floral Co., of this city, had a week or so of strenuous business in connection with Decoration day and part of the work was somewhat unique in character. They received from the memorial committee of the G. A. R. an order for 2,000 small floral wreaths, to be made from natural flowers, and to be used in decorating the soldiers' graves. Seven-inch wire frames were selected for the purpose. These were mossed and tin-foiled and then covered with arbor-vitæ for greens. The flowers used were snowballs, weigelia, iris, roses, etc. The wreaths, though not expensive, were artistic in appearance and served the purpose well.

In making the wreaths, only inexperienced help was employed, but the order was executed on time and in a manner that was highly satisfactory to the committee. The board of freeholders of the county makes the appropriation to the committee of the G. A. R., to furnish flowers for the occasion.

The best Labor Saving device on the place

Charles Moebius, West Toledo, Ohio, writes us:

"We find the Skinner System the best labor saving device we have on the place, and in fact we could not do without it. It will water the ground evenly and will not cake the soil. We think the man away out of date that uses a hose, as he will not be able to grow such fine stuff without your watering device."

Pure—dry—uniform and reliable. The best of all manures for the greenhouse. Florists all over the country are using it instead of rough manure.

Pulverized Sheep Manure

Absolutely the best Sheep Manure on the market. Pure manure and nothing else. The best fertilizer for carnations and for liquid top-dressing. Unequaled for all field use. Write for circulars and prices.

The Pulverized Manure Company

Nature's Best Fertilizer is Sheep Manure

Sheep's Head Brand furnishes the valuable organic matter and humus necessary to grow crops. It improves the mechanical conditions of the soil.

Makes compact clay more open and porous, makes light, sandy soils more retentive of moisture, keeps soluble plant foods within reach of rootlets of growing vegetation.

Farmers, orchardists, florists, truck and market gardeners should send for our book "Fertile Facts" to learn how properly and most effectively to fertilize the soil.

The Steel U-Bar and cypress core together are no larger than the ordinary roof-bar

THIS IS THE U-BAR

The Bar That Makes U-Bar Greenhouses The Famous Greenhouses They Are

THE U-BARS are the vital part of the framework of U-Bar Greenhouses. The steel bars give the supporting strength needed. Galvanizing protects them against rust. Aluminum coating gives them an enduring, brilliant finish. The chemically treated cypress core bar and galvanized steel U-Bar is no larger than the smallest wooden roof bar used in other constructions. The glass is two feet wide. The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Fostoria, O.—About 5,000 square feet of glass in the greenhouses of the Fostoria Floral Co. was broken by hail at 7 a. m., June 3, and about 10 a. m. a second storm broke some more panes.

Little Rock, Ark.—R. A. Garrett, proprietor of the Cottage Floral Co., at 1224 Johns street, is erecting another greenhouse, across the street from the present plant. The new house will cover half an acre.

THE AMERICAN PEONY SOCIETY

THE PHILADELPHIA MEETING.

Officers Elected.

President—Bertrand H. Farr, Reading, Pa., re-elected.

Vice-president—C. J. Maloy, Rochester, N. Y., re-elected.

Treasurer—J. H. Humphreys, Germantown, Pa., re-elected.

Secretary—A. P. Saunders, Clinton, N. Y.

Next Meeting Place—Ithaca, N. Y.

The Exhibition.

The eighth annual meeting and exhibition of the American Peony Society was held in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, June 8 and 9. The exhibition was the largest in point of number of flowers and number of varieties in the history of the society. Over 300 varieties were staged. This is most encouraging to peony lovers, because the unfavorable season, the extremely hot weather accompanied by drought that prevailed all over the country during May, and the heavy rains immediately preceding the date of the exhibition were disastrous, preventing many exhibitors from sending flowers and interfering greatly with the exhibits of others. Under these circumstances the exhibition was little short of remarkable, covering the lower hall, the stairway and the balconies. The art exhibition held in connection with the show was in the main hall.

Credit for the success of the show is due to the out-of-town exhibitors, particularly to E. A. Reeves, of Cleveland, who had the largest exhibit. His flowers were well packed and arrived in excellent condition. In the exhibit were a number of rare varieties. Time of cutting and distance considered, this exhibit was the best.

Bertrand H. Farr, Reading, Pa., and the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., in their exhibits brought together one of the best collections of rare varieties that has ever been exhibited in this country. Mr. Farr exhibited 178 varieties and the Cottage Gardens over 200, these being shown one flower of a variety. In the collection of the Cottage Gardens the following varieties were of special merit: Victor Hugo, a full built deep red; Vulcan, another red of great merit, and Neomie Demay, pale rose pink. In the Farr exhibit a bloom which attracted the attention of all the peony growers was Stanley, a pale flesh rose of large size and of great substance and fragrance. Mr. Farr received a prize for the best new American seedling. It is named Carl Rosenfield. Mr. Farr fully endorses the description given to this variety by the originator, Rosenfield, and states further that of all his reds this is the best built, strongest grower, and is superior to anything he has seen; it is a wonderfully good keeper as a cut flower.

The exhibit of George H. Peterson, of Fair Lawn, N. J., was not at its best by reason of the season being so late. Mr. Peterson was obliged to cut everything in tight buds and then, because of the cool Philadelphia weather, the flowers did not open to their best. The exhibit comprised a large number of good varieties.

The Andorra Nurseries, Chestnut Hill, made a comprehensive exhibit for exhibition only, showing many fine varieties in as good form as possible considering the rain.

John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., made an effective exhibit of fine gladioli and yellow calla lilies that was particularly well staged.

Henry A. Dreer had a beautiful exhibit of 124 different varieties of hybrid tea roses, grown at the trial grounds at Riverton. This exhibit attracted much attention.

Hoopes, Brother & Thomas, West Chester, Pa., had a pretty exhibit of outdoor roses.

S. G. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y., and Thomas Meehan & Sons, Germantown, Pa., exhibited fine vases of peonies. The latter firm also exhibited evergreens.

The art exhibition was a novelty. It originated in the fertile brain of S. Mendelson Meehan and has, Mr. Meehan says, never been tried before, either in Europe or in this country. The idea is to enlarge the field of the peony by interesting lovers of art. It was carried out by offering prizes to the students in the art schools, the competition to be held in connection with the peony show. There were twenty-three exhibits, all of them showing ability in oil and water colors that gave the expert judges trouble to decide the prizes.

The Awards.

The awards were:

Class 1.—Peonies, largest and best collection of named varieties, one flower of each, first prize, Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y.; second prize, Bertrand H. Farr, Reading, Pa.

Class 2.—Peonies, best fifty blooms, one variety, named, white, first, Geo. H. Peterson, Fair Lawn, N. J.; second, E. A. Reeves, Cleveland, O.

Class 3.—Peonies, best fifty blooms, one variety, named dark pink or rose, first, E. A. Reeves; second, Cottage Gardens Co.

Class 4.—Peonies, best fifty blooms, one variety, named, flesh or salmon pink, second, S. G. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y.

Class 5.—Peonies, best fifty blooms, one variety, named, crimson, first, Cottage Gardens Co.; second, E. A. Reeves.

Class 7.—Peonies, best collection of not less than twelve varieties, named, one of each variety, second, F. B. Van Vorst, Hackensack, N. J.

Class 15.—Peonies, best vase of twenty-five pink, of one variety, first, E. A. Reeves.

Class 16.—Peonies, best twelve pink varieties, six blooms each, first, S. G. Harris.

Class 18.—Best American seedling peony, not in commerce in 1908, B. H. Farr, first on Carl Rosenfield.

Thomas Meehan & Sons prizes for painting of peonies: Elizabeth Chase Burt, first; Helen K. McCarthy, second; Florence M. Miller and Elizabeth Schwarz, honorable mention.

The Business Session.

The annual meeting of the American Peony Society was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall at 10:30 a. m., Friday, June 9, President Bertrand H. Farr in the chair. The secretary's report was read by W. Thurlow, in the absence of A. H. Fewkes, and showed a membership of sixty-three, divided as follows:

New York	18	Iowa	2
Pennsylvania	8	Illinois	6
Massachusetts	12	Missouri	2
New Jersey	2	Minnesota	1
Ohio	7	Nebraska	2
Canada	2	Michigan	1
Maine	1

Also five honorary members.

George Hollis, a charter member, was eulogized, Mr. Fewkes stating that his death was a serious loss.

Mr. Thurlow read the treasurer's report, as follows:

Balance from last report	$300.96
Receipts this year	312.60
Total	$613.56
Expenditures this year	$215.77
Balance	397.79
Total	$613.56

After President Bertrand H. Farr had read his address, published elsewhere in this issue, a letter was read from Prof. John Craig, of Cornell University, who is in charge of the nomenclature of the peony, stating that he was unable to be present because of the illness of Mrs. Craig. In reply to the request for the art committee's report, Mr. Humphreys said that the pictures were painted especially for this premium and that the judges, five of the best Philadelphia artists, found it hard to decide, so keen was the competition. One of the art judges, by the way, is a near relative of Jackson Dawson, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston.

It was proposed that the American Peony Society work in connection with the various local shows in order to bring out and properly judge the peonies in different sections of the country, because of the impossibility of getting peonies from all sections of the country into one great show, owing to varying weather conditions. Ithaca, N. Y., was selected as the meeting place for 1912. The society has for a number of years been working on the peony question at Cornell University, where it has a collection of 2,000 varieties. It had been hoped to have an exhibit from this collection, but as the Cornell season is from three to four weeks later than at Philadelphia, only a few varieties were fit to send. Among these were James Kelway, one of Kelway's introductions, wrongly known as Lady Alexander Duff, and Martin Cahuzac, a deep bronzy red. The blooms of Cahuzac are said by the growers to be the finest they had ever seen.

A letter was read from A. H. Fewkes, Newton Highlands, Mass., declining renomination as secretary. This was accepted with regret, as the work of Mr. Fewkes has been of great value to the society.

A vote of thanks was passed to the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society for the use of Horticultural hall, and to David Rust for the many courtesies shown the exhibitors and members. Mr. Rust said that it was a pleasure to do all he could for the members of the Peony Society and that the members of the Horticultural Society were happy to have them there.

After the adjournment of the meeting many of the members went out to the Andorra Nurseries as the guest of J. H. Humphreys, where a pleasant afternoon was spent on the banks of the picturesque Wissahickon.

PRESIDENT FARR'S ADDRESS.

[Delivered at the annual meeting of the American Peony Society, in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, June 8 and 9, 1911.]

The passing of another year marks the ninth in the history of the American Peony Society, and it is gratifying to see again so many faces that have become familiar from having met them as regular attendants at so many former meetings. This loyalty of the older members, the steady increase in membership of the society and the interest taken in the present exhibition are encouraging evidences of the continued popularity of the peony and of the enthusiasm which still animates the members of its society. Though but a handful in numbers, you are to be congratulated on the success which has so far attended your efforts, for the solution of the problem of peony nomenclature is so vast and difficult an undertaking that it would not have been surprising had the work ended in failure.

That such is not the case is due to the perseverance and determination of the members of the society, aided by the efficient support given by the authorities of Cornell University and the generous contribution of plants from the most prominent growers in this country and in Europe. Small as our membership is, it is doubtful whether any similar society has ever conceived, carried out and concluded an operation of this kind on anything like as complete and comprehensive a scale as the peony test at Cornell.

Work of Nomenclature Committee.

For the information of those who have not kept fully in touch with the work at Ithaca, I will state that two bulletins have been published in addition to the preliminary check list, and a third is now ready for the printer, covering the work accomplished to date. The first bulletin, prepared by Dr. J. Elliott Coit, contains a history of the peony, notes on cultivation, etc., and the preliminary work of nomenclature, with a description of some fifty varieties. The second bulletin, known as No. 278, covers the work of the special committee in 1909, when the principal work of identifying the vast collection in the Cornell plots, consisting of 1,933 lots under approximately 1,000 names, was seriously begun. Descriptions in detail were taken of 235 varieties, besides revising the descriptions of the fifty varieties of the previous bulletin, which were taken before the plants were mature, and it was found necessary to alter the descriptions in many cases after seeing the mature plants, making altogether 285 varieties of which descriptions were published up to 1910.

Some of the Exhibits by the Andorra Nursery at the Philadelphia Peony Show.

In the year 1910, 285 additional varieties were identified and described, together with fifty-five synonyms; also a list of 100 best varieties for cut flower purposes and 100 best varieties for landscape effects was added, all this to be comprised in the next bulletin, soon to be printed, making altogether about 570 varieties that have been described in every detail of foliage, habit of growth, fragrance, value commercially, and accurate records taken of the colors as compared with the color chart of the French Chrysanthemum Society, which has been adopted as the official color chart of the American Peony Society.

Elimination of Synonyms.

A large number of names appearing in the Cornell plots cannot be traced to any authentic origin and are undoubtedly, in most instances, old varieties renamed. A still larger number were recognized as synonyms of well-known varieties, such kinds as P. edulis superba, Whitleyi, fragrans, etc., appearing under as many as twenty-five to thirty different names each. After eliminating all of these synonyms, there are probably not more than 400 or 500 distinct varieties in the Cornell plots, excluding Mr. Hollis' collection of upward of 100 seedlings which have been named, and a collection of seedlings under number from Goos & Koenemann. It will be seen at once, therefore, how thoroughly this committee has covered this field with the upward of 600 varieties that have been described—more varieties, in fact, than are actually to be found at Cornell. This is accounted for by the fact that many well-known, authentic varieties were not included in the Cornell planting and the committee has supplemented its work at Cornell by visits to other large collections where these additional varieties could be found. Among the places visited by the committee in 1910 were the peony fields of Wyomissing, Andorra, Cottage Gardens, Geo. E. Hollis, T. C. Thurlow's Sons and E. J. Shaylor. The few varieties still unidentified at Cornell are mostly inferior sorts or those of such obscure origin that identification is practically impossible.

The first collection at Cornell having, therefore, served its purpose, steps should be taken to bring this portion of the test to a close and to dispose of the plants, which, according to the original agreement, belong to the society, except three of each kind, which are to belong to the university for a permanent planting of established varieties. This has already been accomplished, for three of all varieties described in the original plot have been planted in a new section and represent the completed work and at the same time the share of the peonies which are to belong to Cornell.

A Hundred Commercial Varieties.

In addition to the original planting, there is another later one, consisting of a series of collections from a number of growers of their best varieties, for the purpose of determining by comparison the varieties best adapted for commercial use and for landscape work, and then compiling a list of 100 of the best varieties for these uses. According to agreement, these plants are to be eventually returned to their original owners. They have reached full development and from them the committee has prepared a tentative list of 100 varieties, to be submitted to the society for discussion and approval.

Under the circumstances, it would seem as if Ithaca would be the logical place for the society to hold its next business meeting, as by that time the new lots will have reached perfection and members may then have an opportunity of seeing and judging the completed work of the committee. Whether it would be advisable to hold a competitive exhibition there at the same time, or to depend for an exhibit on the flowers from the Cornell plots, is a matter to be considered. A suggestion has been made that it might be well to exhibit in several places next year, selecting points east, west, north and south, so that all members might have an opportunity to exhibit at a point easily accessible and within their latitude.

Time and Place of Meeting.

Our experience in Philadelphia this year shows the futility of attempting to arrange a date to accommodate a latitude different from that in which ety, named, crimson, first, Cottage Gardens Co.; second, E. A. Reeves.

Class 7.—Peonies, best collection of not less than twelve varieties, named, one of each variety, second, F. B. Van Vorst, Hackensack, N. J.

Class 15.—Peonies, best vase of twenty-five pink, of one variety, first, E. A. Reeves.

Class 16.—Peonies, best twelve pink varieties, six blooms each, first, S. G. Harris.

Class 18.—Best American seedling peony, not in commerce in 1908, B. H. Farr, first on Carl Rosenfield.

Thomas Meehan & Sons prizes for painting of peonies: Elizabeth Chase Burt, first; Helen K. McCarthy, second; Florence M. Miller and Elizabeth Schwarz, honorable mention.

The Business Session.

The annual meeting of the American Peony Society was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall at 10:30 a. m., Friday, June 9, President Bertrand H. Farr in the chair. The secretary's report was read by W. Thurlow, in the absence of A. H. Fewkes, and showed a membership of sixty-three, divided as follows:

New York	18	Iowa	2
Pennsylvania	8	Illinois	6
Massachusetts	12	Missouri	2
New Jersey	2	Minnesota	1
Ohio	7	Nebraska	2
Canada	2	Michigan	1
Maine	1

Also five honorary members.

George Hollis, a charter member, was eulogized, Mr. Fewkes stating that his death was a serious loss.

Mr. Thurlow read the treasurer's report, as follows:

Balance from last report	$300.96
Receipts this year	312.60
Total	$613.56
Expenditures this year	$215.77
Balance	397.79
Total	$613.56

After President Bertrand H. Farr had read his address, published elsewhere in this issue, a letter was read from Prof. John Craig, of Cornell University, who is in charge of the nomenclature of the peony, stating that he was unable to be present because of the illness of Mrs. Craig. In reply to the request for the art committee's report, Mr. Humphreys said that the pictures were painted especially for this premium and that the judges, five of the best Philadelphia artists, found it hard to decide, so keen was the competition. Our experience in Philadelphia this year shows the futility of attempting to arrange a date to accommodate a latitude different from that in which the exhibition is to be held, emphasizing the fact that the show should be held, as far as possible, at such a time as to give the best accommodation to the local competitors, upon whom the exhibit must depend for its best display. The unforeseen and unprecedented weather conditions are largely at fault this year, but the fact remains that the season for our local growers is so nearly over that it is difficult for them to show any but their latest varieties. That we are able to have so good a display is due to the energy and enthusiasm of exhibitors from a distance, to whom we are greatly indebted for their contribution to the success of this exhibition.

Regarding the future work of the society, much remains to be accomplished. There are still many varieties that are well known and in commerce, especially among the later introductions, that it is desirable to add to our official list. The committee is still engaged in this work, which must be done by individual effort in the various collections. This work is comparatively easy, being merely to have the opportunity of seeing and describing these remaining varieties, which, being of later origin, are not difficult to identify, and we are assisted in the remaining part of the work by the long list of varieties we now have, which serve as a key for comparison and make the remaining task comparatively simple.

(President American Peony Society.)

Publication of a Peony Manual.

The next great work which the society, in my opinion, should lend its efforts toward is the publishing of a peony manual, which should be the final revision of all the work heretofore accomplished and which should stand as the official manual or catalogue of the American Peony Society. The publishing of this work should, in my opinion, be done by the society and, when completed, can be made a valuable work that will find a ready sale, sufficient, eventually, to repay the cost of publication. The cost of such a work will be considerable and it should not be undertaken until the present work has withstood the test of criticism and all possible corrections have been made, and until the finances of the society are in a condition to carry out the project.

It was with some such thought in mind that a number of the members, in going over the matter, volunteered to make contributions toward the premium list this year, which would save, to some extent, the depletion of the treasury of the society, which has necessarily followed each year the offering of a long premium list by the society and which had to be made up from the small income derived from the annual dues of its few members. When this matter was mentioned to others, a generous response was made and the society has reason to feel grateful to those who have so generously assisted in raising the premium fund this year, as by so doing they have helped greatly toward the fulfillment of the ultimate end in view.

HAIL.

[A paper by John G. Esler, secretary of the Florists' Hail Association, Saddle River, N. J., read before the New York Florists' Club, June 12, 1911.]

What General Sherman said of war applies as well to hail. A few weeks ago I visited St. Louis and saw some of the disaster caused by the storm of April 13. A breakage of over 37,000 square feet of glass, nearly all double-thick, out of 50,000 square feet in one range, will give you some idea of what hail can do when it gets busy.

This storm was three miles wide by forty miles long and broke seventy-five per cent of the glass in the fifty or more greenhouses in its path, and the Florists' Hail Association paid for nearly all of the loss without a quiver.

As to the formation of hail, nearly every scientist has a theory all his own, but in my estimation they have about as much evidence to convince the man from Missouri as have the various gentlemen who describe the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, that their guess is correct.

It would tire you to enumerate the freaks of hail storms, but suffice it to say that the storm that does the most damage is the one that has wind enough to carry the stones so that they hit the glass at right angles.

Impractical Protective Devices.

Various devices for protection have been tried, but nearly all have proved either too costly or too cumbersome to be practical, and hail insurance still remains the best and easiest way for the person who owns a glass house to recoup himself for damage by hail. Therefore it will not be irrelevant to say a word or two about the mutual benefit conferred by the Florists' Hail Association of America.

It is nearly twenty-five years since the S. A. F. christened the Florists' Hail Association and placed the infant upon its doorstep, with the admonition to go forth into the world and be a good Samaritan, but on no account to come back and trouble its dad. June 1, 1887, the state of New Jersey adopted the orphan, and for twenty-four years it has gathered experience, in which this fact has been developed, that a majority of the owners of glass are much more interested in hail insurance after than before a hail storm.

Economical Management.

Since the day of its incorporation this association has never paid a dollar for attorneys' fees, notwithstanding the fact that up to date over $213,000 has been disbursed to its members for glass broken by hail. Likewise it has never paid a single cent for office rent, fuel or light, for its officials. And here comes our loudest whoop: Not a dime has been paid to an agent for commissions. We sell our insurance direct. We employ no agents. We do business only in the state of New Jersey, and are not amenable to any other state. He who wishes to come, or rather send, to New Jersey for hail insurance can procure the same without any rake-off to anyone.

Reformers take notice, and when you plan to eliminate the middleman think of the F. H. A. as one organization that has wiped that individual off the slate.

By prompt payment of losses and straightforward dealing, the F. H. A. has won an enviable place in the insurance world, and with its 1,600 members, insuring over 35,000,000 square feet of glass, and a reserve fund of over $25,000 for a backbone, it can afford to sit quietly by and wait until a hail storm drives the uninsured into its fold.

In conclusion, allow me to advise: Don't shingle your greenhouse with single-thick glass, and "be sure to lock the door before the horse is stolen."

ADVERTISING.

[Extracts from a talk by L. W. C. Tuthill, of the Tuthill Ad Agency, before the New York Florists' Club, June 12, 1911.]

Your good committee man, Shaw, is to blame for this!

Honest Injun, cross-my-heart, I am guiltless.

Take it out on him, and jolly me along; for Ad men are a thin-skinned, sensitive lot.

Their business makes them so.

They have to tell the truth.

That is, if they want to stay in business.

Hot Air Never Pays for Long.

Three years ago a boiler man blew into our office and said he had some money to spend, telling the good, dear public that his boiler was the best on earth, a world-beater, a nine-day wonder, and all that sort of bombast.

After a couple of hours' talk we told him we would take his account under one condition; and that was that he send, at his own expense, one of his wonder boilers to my home in the country, and install it. Then I would give it a month's test of every conceivable kind. If the boiler panned out as he claimed, we would frame up the ads accordingly. If it didn't, we would tell exactly what it would do—and no more.

Did he stand for it?

He certainly did not.

Why?

Because he knew his boiler would not stand up to his extravagant claims. And he knew we knew it.

Still he thought his exaggerations on paper would sell his boiler.

He thought that was what one was licensed to do in an ad.

He went to another agency and placed the business with them. For two years they have been running "hot air" ads of the most virulent type.

Yesterday that same man walked into the office and said his company is now ready to do business with us, based on our original proposal.

The "hot air" hadn't paid.

This incident illustrates in a nutshell the advertising situation of today.

Exaggerations must go.

The truth, only, pays.

All Real Advertising Truthful.

Last week I was standing on the corner of Twenty-eighth street, talking to one of our prosperous commission men, when one of the "has beens" passed along.

I remarked: "Brown isn't the man he used to be, is he?"

To which our friend replied: "No, and he never was."

Advertising, real advertising, never was anything but telling the truth.

It never was a mystic something, into

June 1, 1887, the state of New Jersey adopted the orphan, and for twenty-four years it has gathered experience, in which this fact has been developed, that a majority of the owners of glass are much more interested in hail insurance after than before a hail storm.

Economical Management.

Since the day of its incorporation this association has never paid a dollar for attorneys' fees, notwithstanding the fact that up to date over $213,000 has been disbursed to its members for glass broken by hail. Likewise it has never paid a single cent for office rent, fuel or light, for its officials. And here comes our loudest whoop: Not a dime has been paid to an agent for commissions. We sell our insurance direct. We employ no agents. We do business only in the state of New Jersey, and are not amenable to any other state. He who wishes to come, or rather send, to New Jersey for hail insurance can procure the same without any rake-off to anyone.

Reformers take notice, and when you plan to eliminate the middleman think of the F. H. A. as one organization that has wiped that individual off the slate.

By prompt payment of losses and straightforward dealing, the F. H. A. has won an enviable place in the insurance world, and with its 1,600 members, insuring over 35,000,000 square feet of glass, and a reserve fund of over $25,000 for a backbone, it can afford to sit quietly by and wait until a hail storm drives the uninsured into its fold.

In conclusion, allow me to advise: Don't shingle your greenhouse with single-thick glass, and "be sure to lock the door before the horse is stolen."

ADVERTISING.

[Extracts from a talk by L. W. C. Tuthill, of the Tuthill Ad Agency, before the New York Florists' Club, June 12, 1911.]

Your good committee man, Shaw, is to blame for this!

Honest Injun, cross-my-heart, I am guiltless.

Take it out on him, and jolly me along; for Ad men are a thin-skinned, sensitive lot.

Their business makes them so.

They have to tell the truth.

That is, if they want to stay in business.

Hot Air Never Pays for Long.

Three years ago a boiler man blew into our office and said he had some money to spend, telling the good, dear public that his boiler was the best on earth, a world-beater, a nine-day wonder, and all that sort of bombast.

After a couple of hours' talk we told him we would take his account under one condition; and that was that he send, at his own expense, one of his wonder boilers to my home in the country, and install it. Then I would give it a month's test of every conceivable kind. If the boiler panned out as he claimed, we would frame up the ads accordingly. If it didn't, we would tell exactly what it would do—and no more.

Did he stand for it?

He certainly did not.

Why?

Because he knew his boiler would not stand up to his extravagant claims. And he knew we knew it.

Still he thought his exaggerations on paper would sell his boiler.

He thought that was what one was licensed to do in an ad.

He went to another agency and placed the business with them. For two years they have been running "hot air" ads of the most virulent type.

Yesterday that same man walked into the office and said his company is now ready to do business with us, based on our original proposal.

The "hot air" hadn't paid.

This incident illustrates in a nutshell the advertising situation of today.

Exaggerations must go.

The truth, only, pays.

All Real Advertising Truthful.

Last week I was standing on the corner of Twenty-eighth street, talking to one of our prosperous commission men, when one of the "has beens" passed along.

I remarked: "Brown isn't the man he used to be, is he?"

To which our friend replied: "No, and he never was."

Advertising, real advertising, never was anything but telling the truth.

It never was a mystic something, into the hopper of which we could pour a few plugged dollars, and get a bag of golden coins at the other end.

It never was a gamble.

But it is the biggest, strongest factor in business today.

Next to money, it is the most essential.

Science records things, but advertising makes things live.

Elbert Hubbard, in one of his recent preachments on "The Red Blood in Advertising," says: "The reputation that endures, or the institution that lasts, is the one that is properly advertised." Also: "All literature is advertising, and all genuine advertising is literature."

And Hubbard ought to know, for he doubtless does more successful advertising, both personal and otherwise, than any other one man in the country.

Everybody His Own Ad Doctor.

The peculiar thing about advertising is that pretty much everyone thinks he knows just how it ought to be done. If you and I were to start in the business of growing roses, the first thing we would do would be to get a good foreman—a man who thoroughly understood roses and how to grow them.

If we want an automobile we don't go to a blacksmith—but if we want to do some advertising, then that's different—we can do that ourselves. That's easy!

Or we ask some friend who is free with his pen, to get up something snappy.

What happens?

In the first place, the man who owns a business is generally so near his business that he can't see it. He has lost the sense of how the other fellow—the fellow he wants to land—looks at his proposition from the outside. So he starts off with his wonderful ad with the usual extravagant claims, and says:

My rose is the only rose for you to grow this season. It has 49 petals to every bloom, against 42 3/16 of its nearest competitor.
Get in line.
First come, first served.
Don't delay! Send your order today!
If they are good enough for James Birnie, they are good enough for you. Greatest money-maker of the season. Order now!

Now, every word of that ad is true.

But what selling power has it?

What actual reasons has he given why you should let loose your good money for his blooming old rose?

Suppose he had told a frank story, just like he would if talking directly to a customer; suppose he had said:

Last season it was plain to be seen that the public had grown tired of pink roses, and wanted yellows.
That's why I am so happy: I have a yellow that's going to be a winner—and it's a Killarney, too.
It's an unusually free bloomer, has long stems and a deep, rich green foliage.
Its silken-sheened petals glow like gold.
Its buds are big, solid, dependable ones that ship splendidly and stay half open for a surprisingly long time. Remember that last point—it's a thing your commission man is always howling for.
I am going to sell 150,000 of my stock of 250,000 cuttings.
How many do you want?
Better step lively—you know that a new Killarney always goes like wild fire.

Such an ad actually tells something about the rose, its qualities, its superior points; it has some selling power.

In your opinion, which ad gets the business?

Eschew Jokes; Use White Space.

On the other hand, your friend with the easy pen writes the ad and feels that it is of first importance to make it funny. He says: "That is the thing that attracts the public."

So you stand for a joke of the vintage of 1812, and then lug in by the nape of the neck your little business story.

The result: The funny story seldom is funny in advertising.

Everybody knows you get red in the face to bring it in, and the ad, instead of being a good, serious, earnest, business appeal to men in business houses, is more apt to be smiled at over the cheese sandwich and beer.

Hit a business man at his business in a business way. That's the way!

Now, just one word more:

When you buy space in a trade paper, for heaven's sake don't fill it as full as you can with text.

If your space is small, better tell one thing, and tell it well, and leave plenty of white space around the text. The white space sets it off. Makes it look interesting.

For example: Three or four roses in a vase is a beautiful sight—each rose presents its individuality, its grace. A vase crowded full is just a vase of roses—one grand big bunch, a mass that neither attracts nor impresses.

THE LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE AUCTION BUSINESS.

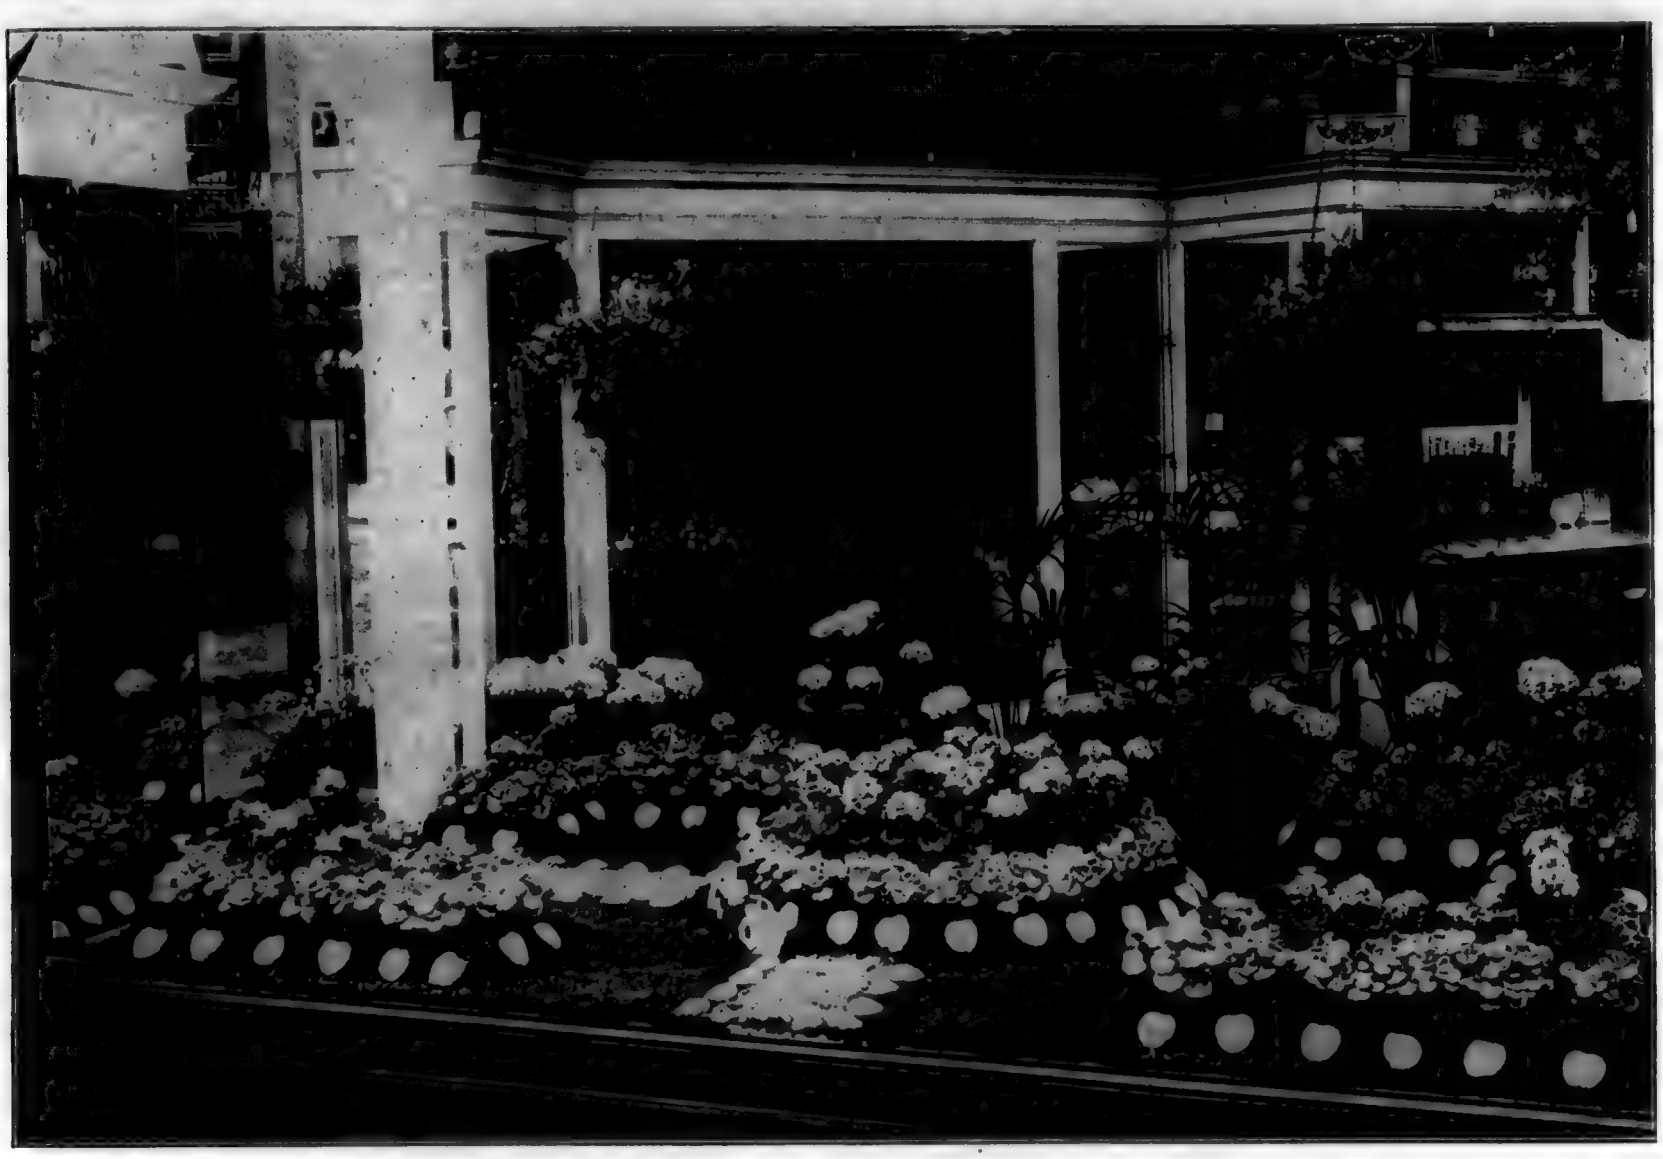
[A paper by R. W. MacNiff, of the MacNiff Horticultural Co., read before the New York Florists' Club, June 12.]

The auction business is as old as the world. Adam bid one of his ribs for the first lady ever known to be on the market, and as there was no opposition, he got her at his own offer. Now, there must be two offers to make a sale legitimate. If anyone else had been at the first garden auction, he and old Adam would be bidding yet.

Imagine such a valuable flower as Eve being advertised for sale next Tuesday or Friday! Madison Square Garden wouldn't hold the crowd of florists.

The devil, in the form of a snake, made a bid of some apple trees for Eve, but she was knocked down before he caught the eye of the auctioneer. So the horticultural auction business, you perceive, has the merit of antiquity.

My subject, however, deals with modern plant and flower auctions, and these are full of lights and shadows. The lights include the light prices obtained, the limitless field that is developing, the return of humanity to the farm, and the consequent needs of the suburbanite; the joy of being instrumental in fostering a love for the beautiful; the consciousness of sending out our monuments in every direction, knowing that the trees and plants we sell will grow and blossom, and cheer with their perfume and beauty unborn thousands after we are safely planted under the daisies.



Then, there is the joy of standing in the limelight, mesmerizing, by voice and persuasive smile, the multitude; soaking the fresh guys or the wealthy widows with something we see they want no matter what the cost. These are real lights that help to lighten our burdens, and to dissipate the gloom in our otherwise shadowy occupation. There is the light of knowledge we acquire every week—knowledge of plant life, of new varieties, of insects and insecticides, of the frailties of humanity—all most interesting to the inquiring mind. Then, there is the velvet in our business; 17½ per cent on every dollar's worth we sell, whether the grower receives the cost of production or not.

Only three or four hours' work a day, and only two days' work a week, the strengthening of our vocal chords, fitting us later on for ministerial work when the great profits of the auction business inevitably draw too many enterprising opponents into the field!

Is it any wonder we grow fat and our bank accounts increase and we ride in autos, and life is one sweet song?

But there are two sides to everything and everybody.

Listen to the shadows, and then rejoice that you are now in the place Providence intended you should fill; and cease to envy the men who are wasting their energies and nerves and talents in your behalf.

The path of the auctioneer is not strewn with roses. More likely dead rose bushes with their thorns pierce his weary feet.

His season is limited.

If he makes any money he must crowd into weeks the labor that should be spread over months of ordinary toil. He must win and hold his growers against falsehoods and unreasonableness and misrepresentation—he must be ready to give minutest details of every transaction; he must create confidence in foreign exporters whom he has never seen, and he must be financially strong enough to meet promptly every demand of his shippers.

All these clouds must have silver linings, or shadowy indeed is the outlook otherwise.

He must have a deep knowledge of human nature, a memory so keen that he never forgets a face or name, and tact and patience that preserve a smiling countenance when his heart is bursting with cuss words and justifiable indignation.

All these shadows must be seen and blown away before success is even possible.

The auctioneer must keep his temper, and, in a word, become all things to all men, if he would win them. His mind must be clear, his physical strength unimpaired, his constitution of iron. He must avoid artificial stimulants, never descend to offensive repartee, always give the retort courteous no matter how his dignity may be imposed upon.

Now you know some of the shadows that hover over the auction business, and there are many others.

There is the late season, with spring lingering long in the lap of winter; the long drought, the late or early Easters, the missent shipments, the express overcharges, the unwatered plants, the careless handling by railroad ignoramuses. Then come the long office hours, the burning of the midnight oil, the innumerable details, the unavoidable mistakes, the impatient shippers, the slow collections, the betrayal of confidences, the carelessness of employees.

Well! Now you have both sides of the burning subject. Aren't you glad you are not a horticultural auctioneer?

FEATURING THE BEDDING.

With bedding out a large item in the spring work of many florists who run retail stores, it is strange that so few push this department of the business—the average florist waits for the orders to seek him out. George Boucher, however, has found it worth while to feature his facilities for doing bedding; Rochester people spend a lot of money for the planting of flower beds and they quickly respond to any reasonable effort to secure their orders. Mr. Boucher has a big window in his downtown store and in the bedding season has found it a means of selling bedding stock, just as at other times he finds it a means of interesting the people who pass in the flowers of the day. The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph made in May, showing one of Mr. Boucher's bedding stock window displays. The floor of the window is covered with green moss, making an admirable representation of a lawn, with miniature flower beds. The work was by J. H. Werdein.

PLANTS FOR WINDOW BOX.

Will you name some winter-blooming plants that I can use in a window box? C. A. W.

If you want plants which will flower for a considerable time, the begonias are unexcelled. Fibrous varieties of the Vernon and Erfordii type will flower all winter. The popular Gloire de Lorraine will also bloom a long time. These and, in fact, nearly all winter-flowering plants will do better kept in pots, rather than planted directly in the boxes. Among other satisfactory plants are Primula obconica and P. Sinensis. These are better if kept moderately cool, and if carefully tended they will flower the greater part of the winter. Bulbous plants, such as tulips, narcissi, etc., may be used, but of course they require more frequent changing. Zonal geraniums are beautiful and flower persistently in the cold months, if not subjected to a higher night temperature than 55 degrees. Cyclamens are charming plants, whose flowers can be depended on for two months if they are not kept too warm. With good light, careful ventilation and watering and a night temperature not too high, any of the foregoing plants should prove satisfactory. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Marguerites.

The flowering season for marguerites will soon be over and some attention must be given to plants for next winter's flowering. Late propagated stock is the best to carry over. The white varieties can be headed back, potted and plunged where they can be conveniently watered, or planted outdoors. The latter plan is generally favored, as it entails less work and the plants invariably lift well, but where an early winter crop is wanted pot culture through the summer is to be preferred.

The yellow varieties are less easily carried over than the white ones. If they can be given a coldframe with a lath shading well elevated above them, they will summer much better, using the hose on them freely during the hot weather.

Speaking of marguerites, everyone snould try a few plants of the new double sport of Queen Alexandra, named Mrs. F. Sander. Many growers think this is one of the best novelties introduced in late years.

Smilax.

It hardly pays to carry over smilax from year to year, as often is done. After June weddings are over, the call for it is practically nil until November. Smilax need not have a light house. It will do well where carnations or mums would become spindling. It wants solid beds, rather than benches, and likes generous compost. A foot between the rows and nine inches between the plants will suffice. Do not overwater at first, but keep plenty of moisture in the atmosphere and syringe the plants freely. Get strings in position as soon after planting as possible, as once the growths get entangled it is practically impossible to separate them.

Beds which it is intended to carry over should have a rest after the final crop of strings is cut. Then remove some of the surface soil and give a liberal top-dressing. Be careful not to overwater at first when starting them up, as the roots are easily rotted when they have no growths on them. Smilax can be grown either cool or warm. It does best and is most profitable when grown warm and the strings, if allowed to mature, keep just as well as those grown cool.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

There are few crops grown by the average florist which pay better than Asparagus Sprengeri. Introduced by the noted Italian firm of Dammann & Co., in 1890, this has become one of the most popular of plants for cutting, and were it taken away there would be a tremendous gap in our supplies of greenery. Like the smilax, it is not fussy about having a light house. Any which will not grow good flowers may answer well for Sprengeri, and it does equally well in beds or benches. Such soil as has been prepared for mums, carnations or roses will suit Sprengeri to a nicety, and it will pay any florist to devote at least one bench to it. Sometimes narrow boxes along the edges of the benches are planted with it, while in wire baskets hung where it can have a little shade it makes a splendid growth and, besides being ornamental as a basket plant, it furnishes lots of sprays for cutting.

Get young plants in the benches now and they will give an abundant crop of nice, well-ripened shoots before fall. Grow them cool and airy during the summer and if cutworms attack them feed the worms with poisoned mash. Where it is intended to carry over old beds, be careful not to trim off the growths too closely, as this seriously cripples the plants. Cut away any old, worthless shoots. Remove some of the old soil and top-dress with loam and cow manure. Asparagus Sprengeri can, if desired, be planted outdoors, lifted and benched in the fall. One or two quite successful growers treat it in this way and with excellent success. Sprengeri is a gross feeder.

Begonia Incarnata.

The present is a suitable time to insert a batch of cuttings of that useful winter-flowering plant, Begonia incarnata. The cut-back plants will now have an abundant crop of soft cuttings, which will root readily and make good plants. The side shoots from plants not headed back, even if they root, never make shapely plants. This beautiful begonia takes two years to make fine plants in 6-inch and 7-inch pots, and while it is in many respects a superior variety to Lorraine, especially the improved form, the fact that it must be sold at a proportionately higher price to make it profitable will somewhat restrict its culture commercially.

Hydrangeas.

Tubs and larger pots containing specimen hydrangeas for late summer flowering will do much better outdoors now than in the overheated greenhouses. They need a position in partial shade and must have copious supplies of water, feeding twice a week and spraying overhead on hot days. A little alum used in the water will assist in making the flowers a stronger blue color; in fact, if used steadily, it will make pink ones turn a bluish shade. Young plants propagated in early spring should be planted outdoors, if they can be grown where they can get an occasional watering. If not, they will do much better kept in pots and plunged outdoors in a sunny exposure.

Peonies.

The present season cannot be classed as a satisfactory one for peonies. The intense heat in May and abnormal drought conditions have combined to make the flowers fewer in number and far below the average in quality. Their keeping qualities also are unsatisfactory. So severe has been the drought in some sections that strong clumps are not flowering at all, or are only producing scattered blooms. Artificial watering for peonies is out of the question, unless one has the good fortune to have a Skinner or other irrigating system installed, and each year proves more and more the value of these systems. The best, therefore, that we can do is to cultivate freely.

Ferns

FERNS IN COLDFRAMES.

The coldframes are sometimes allowed to grow up to weeds when the bedding-out season has passed. This is both unsightly and unprofitable. The up-to-date florist always contrives to keep the frames filled, both winter and summer. Not only are the frames valuable for growing cyclamens, primulas, tuberous begonias and other flowering plants, but they are equally good for quantities of foliage plants, while for ferns of almost any kind they are away ahead of greenhouses. If the needful head room does not exist, it is easy to dig out the bottoms a little. Then give a good coating of fine coal ashes. Scatter some air-slaked lime over this and rake it over to care for any rambling snails or other marauders, after which the ferns can be stood in them. Adiantums, such as Croweanum, cuneatum and gracillimum; any of the pteris, cyrtomiums, polypodiums, davallias and nephrolepis, to say nothing of other varieties, will make a much better growth in frames than greenhouses and will be more compact and stocky. To reduce watering they can, if necessary, be partially plunged in partially decayed leaves, cocoanut fiber or tanbark. The sashes, of course, must be well shaded, ventilation carefully given and the plants never allowed to suffer for want of water.

Try a few sashes of ferns this season and you will be so well pleased with the results that you will want to grow more in this way another year.

Sweet Peas

GOOD CULTURE WELL REPAID.

Late sweet peas under glass are this season proving unusually profitable in many parts of the country. It will pay to give the glass a light shade, in order to somewhat lower the temperature of the house, and keep ventilators and the end doors wide open night and day. The weather has been hot and trying for sweet peas, which are naturally cool, moisture-loving subjects. Red spider must be kept off at all hazards and the water from a hose well directed is the one thing needful for this purpose. The best time to pick the flowers is early in the morning, before the sun's rays have become powerful. Flower gathering under glass is not exactly pleasurable during the most torrid part of the day and all growers know, or should know, that in summer it is the worst possible time to pick flowers of any kind. An abundant water supply, free syringing and ample ventilation are necessities where a late indoor crop is desired. Of course stems are now rapidly lessening in length and we cannot expect the quality to equal what we had in March and April.

Over a large portion of the country the spring and early summer rainfall has been deficient and the outdoor sweet peas, which revel in cool, moist weather, are far below their usual quality. The early crop is already flowering, but the stems as yet are short. Where watering facilities exist, it will pay to soak the ground well with the hose, or, better still, with sprinklers. If the space between the rows is well mulched, the moisture will be held in the ground a long time and the effects of the watering, while not equaling what we would get from the heavens themselves, is indeed surprising. Not only are root soakings good, but a hosing overhead on warm evenings is beneficial. It refreshes the plants wonderfully and keeps aphis away. The average country florist will now find that carnations are small and spidery, and roses getting poorer and poorer. Many customers are growing tired of them and demand a change of flowers. No other variety is so universally popular as the sweet pea. Therefore look well after your plants, especially in a year when precipitation from natural sources is so uncertain.

PRUNING FLOWERING SHRUBS.

The time to prune flowering shrubs, with the exception of hydrangeas and one or two other unimportant species, is after the flowering period has passed. Too often we see painful evidences of this work in winter and early spring, when the hired man or "landscaper," as he frequently dubs himself, gives the grounds their annual spring clean-up, which is incomplete unless the various shrubs are sheared into a more symmetrical shape. Practically all the nice flowering shoots are cut away, leaving the shrubs fit ornaments for an Americanized Italian garden. This is a good time to do such necessary pruning, the main trouble being that with extreme pressure of other duties the work is generally laid over to a more convenient season.

We can easily see all dead and weak wood now. This should be removed entirely. Flowering wood, when the flowers are fine, should be well headed back, and where the shrubs have grown tall and somewhat lanky this is the time to cut them back quite hard. They will make quite a lot of growth before the season ends; specially is this true of lilacs, philadelphus, loniceras, viburnums and the stronger growing shrubs. In addition to the shrubs named, such varieties as exochordas, spiræas, deutzias, weigelias, ribes, prunus, stephanandras and rhodotypos should be judiciously pruned at this season. The result will be in every case much to the plants' benefit.

WHO OWNS THE AIR?

Who owns the air has not been settled by the injunction proceedings reported in last week's issue of The Review, but it has been fully shown that E. Allan Peirce controls that portion of the atmosphere that lies immediately above the greenhouses of Peirce Bros., Waltham, Mass.; if you want to use that particular patch of air you will have to see Mr. Peirce first.

There is to be an air ship tournament at Waltham, and Peirce Bros. threatened injunction proceedings when it was announced that the direction of the flight would take the aeroplanes over the Peirce greenhouses. As any other direction would take the air men over one or another of neighboring greenhouse properties, if an injunction could be obtained by one of the owners it would open the way for rendering the flight impossible. Therefore the management was prompt to adjust matters with Peirce Bros. A bond was given, for $5,000, to cover any damage to the greenhouse property which might result from the air ships passing over, or, rather, their failure to pass over.

Tamaqua, Pa.—It is said that during a recent electrical storm the greenhouses of Nels Nelsen were struck three times within a few moments, but were only slightly damaged. Superintendent Derr's residence was also struck and a small blaze started, which was easily extinguished.

ORCHIDS

Cymbidiums.

Cymbidiums are not so much grown as their merits would seem to warrant. Where can we find any flowers which, when cut, will last as long as those of C. Lowianum? Particularly beautiful is the pale apple-green form, C. Lowianum concolor. C. eburneo-Lowianum, C. eburneum, C. Tracyanum, C. insigne, also called C. Sanderi, and C. Winnianum are a few good varieties to grow and all will succeed well in a cool house, with a winter minimum of 50 degrees. They grow better in fibrous loam than in osmunda fiber. In common with phaius, calanthes, thunias and sobralias, they are benefited by occasional weak doses of liquid manure in the growing season. They also enjoy a syringing overhead daily in the hot months.

Vanda Cærulea.

Vanda cærulea does not like so warm and close an atmosphere as the majority of the East Indian varieties. It will grow amazingly in a stuffy house, but when it comes to the flowering season the plants fail to win applause. They should not be heavily shaded and the cool end of a cattleya house suits them well. Free ventilation is also what they need. Unlike the odontoglossums, these seem to do even better with some growing sphagnum in the pots.

Oncidium Varicosum Rogersii.

Oncidium varicosum Rogersii is the most popular of the various florists' oncidiums and its long-branched spikes of golden yellow flowers are decorative and a great feature in store windows in the fall. This oncidium grows particularly well in small pans hung close to the glass in a cool, airy house. On warm days it can be syringed overhead twice, and it is a safe plan to dip the pans in a tub or pail of water thrice a week, as hose watering does not always properly moisten the compost. New importations of this oncidium will soon be offered. They are always eagerly bought and anyone handling a few orchids cannot go far wrong in buying a few of this variety.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Extreme heat and enormous shipments of peonies depressed the market last week and the great storms of Saturday and Sunday left it wobbly and uncertain. There is no increase in the volume of trade in cut flowers, and prices are at their lowest ebb. "There are no prices," was the response of one of the veterans, who says the market of May and June to date is unique in his twenty-five years' experience. Midsummer prices never came so early.

Few good American Beauties are arriving. Little of the stock goes above 10 cents for the selected, and from that down to zero. Of other roses the natural shortening of the supply is slow in developing, and $10 per thousand would secure about anything arriving if large quantities were purchased. There is little quality to any of it. Many thousands of carnations remained unsold, and were placed in the discard last week. Nearly every wholesaler supplied his share. It needed extra fine goods to secure an offer of $10 per thousand. The results of the extreme heat were especially seen in the carnation shipments. Lilies do not go above 4 cents and thousands are disposed of at $10 to $20 per thousand. There is no scarcity of gladioli and prices are falling fast. The storms have badly damaged the peonies that remain, and rendered most of them unsalable. This week will probably leave few unmarketed.

The exodus to Europe is lessening. The retailers have had a wonderful season in steamer flowers, and boxes and baskets innumerable have sped the parting coronationists. The June weddings are now at full tide, and some splendid decorative work has fallen to the lot of every florist of prominence.

Club Meeting.

The rooms of the New York Florists' Club were well filled Monday evening. President Nugent opened the session promptly on the stroke of eight, as is his invariable custom. Resolutions of sympathy on the death of J. H. Taylor were read and approved. Chairman Fenrich made a favorable report on the club's outing, June 28, and before the meeting closed the committee had sold several hundred dollars' worth of tickets and an equal amount was contributed for prizes. Everything promises a great success. The whole affair will be unique and new features will add to the enjoyment. It is necessary that the committee know in advance how large the crowd will be. All letters should be sent to the chairman, Joseph H. Fenrich.

The committee on greenhouse building at Cornell was unable to report any further progress, the deadlock at Albany and the fire having put a damper on everything but political legislation.

F. H. Traendly reported for the transportation committee. The Pennsylvania railroad and the Baltimore & Ohio offer a rate and three-fifths, and the certificate plan is advised. The fare is $7.44. Mr. Miller moved that the trip be made Monday afternoon and that all arrangements for special train and refreshments be left with the committee. Fifty dollars was appropriated and all florists from New England going to the convention at Baltimore are asked to join the New York Florists' Club and enjoy the privileges of its special.

The exhibits for the evening were many and varied. R. G. Wilson, of Brooklyn, exhibited his new fern, unnamed, which the award committee thought to be a species of cybotium. A later report will be made. Mr. Wilson also exhibited a vase of his new blush sweet pea. John Lewis Childs exhibited a collection of new varieties of gladioli, the dwarf calla, Mrs. Roosevelt, the yellow calla, Elliottiana, and some grand peonies. The hearty thanks of the club were accorded all the exhibitors, including the Cottage Gardens Co., of Queens, N. Y., for a vase of peonies.

Messrs. Bunyard, Totty and Simpson were appointed a committee to draw up resolutions on the death of the daughter of Charles Schenck, and Messrs. Traendly, Bunyard and Shaw on the death of Charles Armitage.

The president announced the nominating committee for 1912 as follows: Messrs. Miller, Sheridan, Totty, Birnie, Kessler, Hendrickson and Siebrecht, Jr.

Interesting addresses were made by John G. Esler on "Hail," R. W. MacNiff on the "Lights and Shadows of the Auction Business," and L. W. C. Tuthill on "Advertising." Considerable discussion followed. Mr. Totty said Mr. Tuthill's essay was one of the cleverest ever read before the club and gave his own experiences in proof that "advertising is the vital force that brings success." Mr. Ebel spoke of advertising as an investment and not an expense and illustrated its influence. Messrs. Bunyard, Berry and Weathered also gave experiences of interest and the thanks of the club were accorded all the speakers and essayists of the evening.

Al. Rickards and committee had an especially au revoir menu for the club members.

Various Notes.

L. W. C. Tuthill was thrown from his motorcycle last week and sprained an ankle.

J. B. Velie, manager of Lord & Burnham's Boston office, will be operated on for appendicitis June 15. T. B. De Forest, of the New York office, will take charge there until his recovery.

Lord & Burnham Co. has closed a contract with P. S. Randolph, of Randolph & McClements, Pittsburg, for six houses 21x200 and one 50x200, the large one to be devoted to sweet peas, a decision arrived at by Mr. Randolph after seeing William Sim's exhibit at the Boston show.

W. H. Siebrecht and wife, of Chappaqua, sailed June 13 for a visit to Germany. Patrick O'Mara is going over. Solomon Hanfling sailed June 10. M. A. Bowe says he shortly will depart for an auto trip through Germany, France and England.

Arthur T. Boddington reports the California sweet pea growers refusing additional orders for seed, and fears it will be "the shortest crop in years."

Julius Roehrs is back from his European trip.

Harry Turner now is superintendent for the Untermyer estate, Graystone.

Thos. Murray, of Tuxedo, and C. R. Russell, of Roslyn, were recent visitors.

The outing of the Plant Growers' Association in July will be worth while. Messrs. Steinhoff, Schoelzel and Roehrs are the committee.

Henry Weston, of Hempstead, has caught the sweet pea fever. Hitchings & Co. have the contract for a house of 15,000 square feet to be devoted to peas.

A meeting of the New York Horticultural Society, accompanied by an exhibition, was held June 10 at the New York Botanical Garden, in Bronx park. The exhibition, which was held in the basement of the large Museum building, was also open on the following day, Sunday. Prizes were offered for roses, peonies, shrubs and trees, and herbaceous plants. A. Lahodny, gardener for T. A. Havemeyer, made a large exhibit of peonies, irises, and rhododendrons and azaleas. James Stuart, gardener for Mrs. F. A. Constable, sent a collection of choice peonies and roses. A large collection of roses was staged by John Woodcock, gardener for Gen. E. A. McAlpin. The display of peonies by the Cottage Gardens Co. was superb. Special awards to trade exhibitors were: John Lewis Childs, certificate of merit for Philadelphus Virginal; Bobbink & Atkins, special mention for a collection of herbaceous plants; John Lewis Childs, special mention for a collection of gladioli; Julius Roehrs Co., special mention for a collection of cut orchids; T. A. Havemeyer, special mention for a collection of hydrangeas.

Bowling.

It was too hot for the bowlers June 9, but W. Rickards and A. Kakuda each averaged 166.

Monday afternoon, June 12, at the club's alleys, the Long Island Bowling Club was represented by the veteran, John Donaldson, who has fully recovered from his recent illness. This club, thirty strong, including the ladies, will have its annual dinner and theater party Saturday evening, June 17. The Monday scores were:

Player.	1st	2d	3d
Donaldson	166	153	...
Tallman	133	147	...
Scott	148	144	181
Kakuda	146	153	178
Roehrs, Theo.	179	156	157
Manda	189	161	203

J. Austin Shaw.

The approach of the close of the auction season is marked by the annual trade sale. The Elliott Auction Co. announces this for June 20. Their trade sales always attract a big crowd to 42 Vesey street.

James McAnney, a Manhattan retailer, recently sued Charles Schaefer, a grower on Shell road, Elmhurst, for $500 damages. In his complaint Mr. McAnney alleged that several days before Easter he telephoned to the defendant for some flowers, which were promised for immediate delivery, but were never received.

GLADIOLI.

A last planting of gladioli bulbs should be made early in June. The spikes usually produced on these are not so large as on the earlier planted ones, but they help to lengthen the season nicely. Plant in trenches six inches, or even eight inches, deep, and if the ground is dry run a watering can over the bulbs and soak them before covering them with soil. Keep the earlier batches well cultivated. They will withstand a surprisingly long dry spell if they were not shallow planted and the cultivator is kept constantly at work to preserve a loose surface mulch.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The florists of this city and vicinity are now resting on their laurels, waiting for the closing of the public and private schools of varied character, which, with the weddings incidental to June, will terminate a busy and prosperous season. The margin of profit has been somewhat smaller than in previous years, but the volume of trade has been sufficient to make up for such deficiencies, with the result that everyone is happy and well satisfied with the aggregate showing.

A majority of the growers are well advanced in their field work and many have commenced the overhauling of their houses and benches and are making preparations for the reception of their new stocks. Funeral work holds up well and moves about all the stock that finds its way into town.

Various Notes.

The J. A. Budlong & Son Co., of Auburn, is cutting a fine crop of excellent White Killarney roses.

H. H. Pepper, of the Melrose Rose Gardens, reports the best spring business in the sale of rose bushes he has ever experienced.

Joshua Vose, the dahlia grower of Pontiac, is confined to his house by a severe illness.

Joseph Kopelman reports an increasing business in his new wire department. During the last week he made up more than a dozen special designs of large size.

The Highland Floral Co., of Pawtucket, has closed its retail store at 23 High street.

M. Macnair has opened a handsome new store at the corner of Chestnut and Broad streets, a few doors above his old store. Both places will be maintained.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held Monday evening, June 19, at which time the special committee to arrange for the annual outing will make its report.

Joseph Leikens, of New York city, has opened his store on Bellevue avenue, Newport, for the season.

William Hoffman, of Pawtucket, has just installed a new boiler with a double steam trap.

Oscar Schultz, of Newport, was a visitor in New York and New Jersey last week.

W. B. King, of Apponaug, expects to retire from active business in the near future on account of his health. The business will be conducted by his son.

O. H. Williams, of Pocasset, has contracted with Hitchings & Co. for the erection of two new greenhouses, sixty feet in length, to be ready in July.

Miss Florence B. Schellinger, daughter of J. F. Schellinger, of Riverside, was married Tuesday evening at her parents' home.

D. E. Newell, of Attleboro, has retired from the florists' business and is to spend some time in traveling. He is succeeded by Martin Ockert.

Nate Pierce, of Norwood, reports an unusually busy spring in nursery demands. He has had several large estates to lay out. W. H. M.

Concord, N. H.—Athole G. Hoit has taken a position with Gilbert J. Benedict.

OBITUARY.

Chauncey P. Coy.

Chauncey P. Coy, pioneer Nebraska seed grower and well known citizen, died suddenly at his home in Waterloo, Saturday evening, June 10, of heart trouble, after a brief illness. He was the senior member of the firm of Chauncey P. Coy & Son, wholesale seed growers, and one of the best known citizens of western Douglas county, having lived there about thirty-five years. He was a native of New York state, a veteran of the civil war and a member of the Masonic order.

Charles H. Magoon.

Dr. Charles H. Magoon, a pioneer nurseryman of Iowa, died at his home in Wakefield, Ia., June 1, at the age of 70 years. His death was the result of an injury caused by a fall a few days previously. He settled at Algona, Ia., in 1857, and is said to have started the first nursery in the state.

Mrs. Mary Hanson.

Mary Hanson, wife of Hubert Hanson, for many years a grower on North Clark street, died June 10 at 1250 Grace street, Chicago. She was 52 years of age. The funeral was held June 13 from the residence to St. Gregorius' church, interment being at St. Henry's cemetery. She is survived by her husband and one son, Henry.

Mrs. A. Woerner.

Mrs. A. Woerner, wife of August Woerner, of Clinton, Mo., died May 26, as the result of a stroke of apoplexy. She was 52 years of age and is survived by her husband and eight children. Mr. Woerner and family have been thirteen years in the florists' business at Clinton and are highly respected there, where they built up a trade covering several near-by towns.

Mrs. A. B. Packard.

The death is reported of Mrs. A. B. Packard, who was 72 years of age and had for forty years been a florist at Quincy, Mass. Her greenhouses were among the first in New England, her first structure having been built as an amusement, but, like so many others who began flower growing for recreation, she soon made it a matter of business. She continued actively at work until a few weeks before her death.

Rochester, N. Y.—The plans have been completed for the erection of the Lamberton Memorial Conservatory, at the entrance to Highland park. This addition to the park system was made possible through a bequest of $20,000 by the late Miss Mary A. Starbuck, as a memorial to President A. B. Lamberton, of the park board. The building will be opened to the public about September 1.

Nashua, N. H.—Geo. W. Coburn, of the East Hollis Greenhouses, has taken his son into partnership and the business is now conducted under the name of Geo. W. Coburn & Son. They have added one greenhouse, 18x60, and intend to do more building this summer. They had a fine stock of bedding plants, which sold rapidly. Their carnations in the field have been doing well, especially since the coming of the recent showers.

...NEWS NOTES...

Bangor, Me.—A recent fire at the residence of John Martin, the Center street florist, caused a loss of $300 or $400.

Warren, O.—John Adgate has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his wife, who died June 2, at the age of 83 years.

Astoria, L. I.—Mrs. H. Pritchard, who is 67 years of age, recently was injured by a fall on the stairs, but now is about again.

Polo, Ill.—Miss Marjorie Wilkes has charge of H. Davis' flower business in Chadwick during the illness of Rev. Knapp, who is agent there.

Marietta, O.—Norval Kiger, the Fairview Heights florist, has purchased four lots on High street and will build additional greenhouses there.

Raspeburg, Md.—John G. Kilian has the material on the place for another house, 32x118. Another recent addition to his facilities is a C. & P. phone.

Warren, O.—E. C. Waterman has completed his greenhouse at 418 South Main street, at the corner of Fulton street, and has it well stocked and ready for business.

Kankakee, Ill.—A little son and daughter arrived June 3 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schafer. "The mother and twins," says the report, "are doing nicely."

St. Louis, Mich.—Kleinhans Bros. lost heavily by a hail storm that passed over this place June 4. They are said to have found only three unbroken lights after the storm, and were without insurance. The stock, of course, was badly cut up.

Somersworth, N. H.—G. S. Ramsburg has completed his new chrysanthemum house. He was particularly successful this year in timing his stock for Memorial day and had plenty of flowers ready for the market just when the demand was heaviest.

Findlay, O.—The City Greenhouse Co., which recently purchased the business of Samuel J. McMichael, on Larkins street, has now been incorporated. The incorporators are John B. Heimhofer, J. O. Reed, Dr. N. L. MacLachlan, A. H. Marshall, C. J. Oller and C. H. Bigelow.

Amesbury, Mass.—Among the local florists who have decided to place some of their stock on exhibition at the flower and strawberry show, to be held here in the first part of July, are Herbert G. Leslie and H. G. Hudson. A large amount of space at the show has also been ordered by E. W. Thurlow, of West Newbury.

Gretna, La.—B. M. Wichers has won his case in the State Supreme Court against the New Orleans Acid & Fertilizer Co., which was decided in his favor in the Civil District Court and appealed by the defendant concern. He gets a judgment of $1,000 damages on the ground that plants and flowers in his gardens were killed by fumes from the company's plant.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE St. Louis Florists' club will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary with a banquet June 28.

HAIL storms are frequent again this season. Better get John G. Esler to shoo 'em off or pay your breakage.

BETWEEN drought and the cut worm there will be a scarcity of field-grown carnation plants in some sections this season.

THE parels post isn't within reach, at the moment, but the prospect for congressional action grows brighter. The day will come.

TELL your congressman to introduce and push a bill making it illegal for a railroad company to own the stock of an express company.

A PRINTED letterhead is almost as necessary as a place of business; some of the best firms do not allow wholesale prices to those who write on plain paper.

THERE are a great many people who consider the Want Ad department the best index to a paper's circulation and usefulness. And there are a lot of Want Ads in The Review.

WILLIAM F. KASTING, of Buffalo, is a candidate for the office of commissioner of agriculture for the state of New York to succeed Raymond A. Pearson, whose term of office has expired.

DON'T let surpluses of young chrysanthemum stock go to waste. Offer it in the Classified department of The Review. The ready way in which such stock has been moved has resulted in more than one grower changing the direction of his effort. It's easy to work up a wholesale business if one sends out strictly first-class stock.

THE United States Civil Service Commission announces an examination to establish an eligible register from which to make certification to fill vacancies as they may occur in the position of horticulturist and assistant horticulturist in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., at salaries ranging from $2,000 to $2,500 per annum. Applicants must have had a university training, or its equivalent. Applicants should apply for Form 304, and special form, to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

"WHAT SO RARE?"

In days of old, when Junes were cold,
At least not boiling hot,
They may have passed for "perfect days,"
But now, b'jing! they're not.
—B. L. T. in Chicago Tribune.

In days of old, the florist who stood "knee deep in June" also was pretty well buried with orders. June was considered one of the best months of the year. But that was when Junes were cold. This year it has been different. June 9 over a large part of the country was the hottest June day in the history of the United States Weather Bureau, some forty years, and over a big stretch of the west the shade temperature ran to 100 degrees or more, a full 40 degrees above the highest point reached the same date in 1910. Such weather is bad for the flower business—bad for stock and bad for the customers; takes the ambition out of both. But the one redeeming feature is that it won't last. One rule in all well regulated newspaper offices is: "Don't talk about what the weather IS; it will change before the paper comes out."

IMPORTS OF PLANTS.

The government has given out the figures covering the imports of plants, trees, vines, etc., for April, 1911, as compared with the same month in 1910. The figures are almost the same:

April, 1910.....$163,134
April, 1911..... 164,405

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

The National Sweet Pea Society, owing to the slow development of the growth of sweet peas this season, has decided to change the date of the annual exhibition to June 29 and 30. The schedules are being mailed to members, and any interested can procure them upon application to David Rust, Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, or the secretary at 342 West Fourteenth street, New York city.

Harry A. Bunyard, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Last week the heat record was broken once more. Not within the history of the weather office has there been a June day as hot as Friday and Saturday of last week. Naturally, business suffered greatly. It happens that the comparison with last year is made particularly bad by the fact that the first full week in June, 1910, was exceptionally good.

The heat brought in an enormous quantity of flowers and it was the cause of a large part of the stock being so poor that it would have been unsalable even with a much better demand than existed. The wholesalers were obliged to do an immense amount of sorting to get out the flowers for such orders as came to hand. There has been, and is, a fair run of shipping business, for stock all through the west, and especially in the southwest, has suffered from the same high temperatures. The result is that a great many buyers who have enough poor flowers of their own are sending to Chicago when the need arises for something really good. It has not been easy to satisfy these buyers. The present week opened with temperatures more moderate, but still above normal. Everyone feels sure that business will revive quickly should normal June weather conditions prevail.

In the last week the Beauty market has suffered as much as any. Some houses are cutting little more than is needed to supply their orders, but some of the growers who planned summer crops have been getting an enormous production, far more than could be marketed in the usual course of business. Such extreme heat as has brought on these heavy cuts naturally detracts from the quality, but there still are more good Beauties than the demand calls for, which leaves practically no sale for the lower grades.

An Enormous Cut of BEAUTIES

SPLENDID QUALITY—NONE BETTER ANYWHERE

The extreme heat of last week rushed our Beauty crops, so that we are in position to offer extra good values to those who can use a quantity. These are strictly first-class long Beauties, grown specially for a summer cut—the quality is as good as we ever saw it after hot weather arrived. Order a few dozens—then you'll be interested in our quantity prices—no limit to our ability to supply.

KILLARNEY

White and Pink—fine stock

Our Killarneys are in a class by themselves. We have found a big demand for first-class roses in past summers—and it is a demand we are able to meet this season with incomparable stock. Try our Killarneys—you'll find there are no others like them. Can supply in quantity.

Valley

Order Valley of us and you will draw on a never-failing source of supply. We have the best grade.

Sweet Peas

A big supply—the largest lot and the finest stock to be had in Chicago. All the colors.

A Good Crop of Fine Cattleyas

EASTER LILIES

You can get here all the Lilies you need for your Wedding decorations. We have a big supply of fine stock. Can furnish in thousand lots and will quote special prices on quantities if you write or wire.

PEONIES

We shall have first-class Peonies for some time yet. Specially strong on white.

CARNATIONS

We can supply as good stock as the weather conditions make it possible to obtain in this market. Quality has improved in the last few days.

WIETOR BROS. Wholesale Growers of Cut Flowers 162 N. WABASH AVENUE, CHICAGO

Mention The Review when you write

There are some quite fair roses, heat considered, and the best sell well. Maryland is fair and good Kaiserin is coming in, though White Killarney still predominates. Killarney itself continues abundant and some nice, clean stock is to be had, though an uncomfortable proportion of the receipts are open. On the whole, however, the quality of roses is as good as could be expected.

Carnations have improved in spite of the heat; they seem to have become acclimated. Of course the flowers are small. Last week's averages were so low that probably the growers will quickly throw out the stock that is giving the lower grade of blooms and supply is expected to decrease rapidly. Thus far it has been large.

The pressure of peonies has subsided. There are quantities in cold storage, some of them good and some of them no good. White is much more abundant than good pink. The first-class stock is selling well, but there is little interest in the poorer grades. It is figured that the peony season will end this year a month earlier than usual. Those who hold the best stock expect to be cleaned out weeks ahead of last year.

Even cattleyas have been in better supply the last few days. There is an abundance of Easter lilies and gladioli. Valley has a fairly steady demand. Sweet peas continue plentiful, but are none too good.

Smilax and asparagus strings are about the only items in strong request. New Michigan ferns are in and prices have dropped.

Various Notes.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received the first asters of the season last week.

P. N. Obertin and wife, of Kenosha, were visitors at Kyle & Foerster's this week. Mr. Obertin has bought land just outside of Kenosha and will erect 35,000 feet of glass, opening a retail store downtown.

Miss Frances Brundage, who has acted as secretary of the E. H. Hunt corporation, has gone to Missouri to spend the summer with a sister for the purpose of benefiting her health.

Phil Schupp says that the thermometer in J. A. Budlong's Kaiserin house registered 130 degrees one day last week.

Peter Reinberg has just received a new Pierce-Arrow six-cylinder touring car. He already had a French limousine.

It is said that even the ice man who serves the wholesale houses was overcome by the heat last week.

George Walther reports an unusually busy season in Englewood; an immense amount of bedding.

Vaughan & Sperry say they expect all the peonies to be sold by the middle of July this year, where last season the supply lasted into August.

O. P. Bassett and Mrs. Bassett arrived June 14 from Pasadena. The purpose of their trip is to buy the furnishings for the new house now nearing completion.

Miss Minnie Wattman, of the E. C. Amling Co., has gone to Alden, Mich., for a fortnight's rest and recuperation.

George Reinberg's automobile knocked down a woman 66 years of age, on the evening of June 6, and she died in a hospital next day. The machine was being driven by Tony, who brings the cut flowers from the greenhouses to the store. He was going so slowly that the woman was not thrown, and he stopped after only the front wheels had passed over her. The coroner's jury held the automobilists blameless.

Fisher's flower store at 2737 North Clark street was burglarized one night last week.

Henry Van Gelder spent June 11 on the lake, and between sunburn and rheumatism has had an uncomfortable time of it this week.

G. Swenson, Elmhurst, who consigns his output to the E. C. Amling Co., cut peonies that were as good, in this year of generally below-average blooms, as any he ever has had. Mr. Swenson has the Skinner irrigating system and his grounds always are as neat as a new pin.

John Schoepfle will tear down the greenhouses back of his store on Belmont avenue to make room for a building to be rented to the government to use as a branch post-office.

S. Wilks Mfg. Co. made greenhouse boilers for many years before building its present factory at 3523 Shields avenue, but has not heretofore issued a special catalogue for the greenhouse end of the business. Now the mail orders are so large an item that a greenhouse book has been issued.

The Hoerber brothers have exchanged residences and duties. F. C. now lives in town and is in the store, while W. F. lives at the greenhouses at Des Plaines and oversees the work there.

A. L. Randall Co. is receiving consignments of cattleyas from Maine.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. thinks the summer business this year will be even better than last season.

C. W. McKellar notes an increasing use of Cattleya Mossiæ in wedding bouquets instead of white orchids.

Wietor Bros. are planting another range with Beauties. A cut will soon be coming from the earlier planted houses.

W. J. Smyth and Mrs. Smyth are planning a summer trip to the Pacific coast.

L. Baumann is in "little Paradise." At least a postal from him at Baden-Baden, Germany, states that it is popularly given that name and Mr. Baumann says it deserves it. He reports success in his quest for florists' novelties.

That artificial flowers are finding a place with many florists is the opinion of the Chicago Artificial Flower Co. Artificial garlands and sprays seem to meet with special favor for automobile decorations for floral parades.

The death of Mrs. Mary Hanson, wife of Hubert Hanson, for many years in the flower business, is recorded in the obituary column this week.

Trade among the retailers was quite good all of last week. There were plenty of weddings and a great deal of work for school commencements, both local and shipping. There is a great deal of this kind of work on hand for this week. Funeral work, too, was quite heavy, so the florists put in a busy week in all parts of the city. flowers and the consignments suffered greatly. Our local growers are bringing fairly good stock. Outdoor flowers are suffering for want of a good rain.

At the wholesale houses there seem to be plenty of roses, carnations and sweet peas, but the quality is poor and the prices continue low. Good valley is in demand. Lilies are becoming scarce. Ferns are also scarce and good smilax sells well at $15 per hundred strings.

Club Meeting.

The twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the Florists' Club, which was held June 8, at 2 p. m., was well attended, thirty-five members being present when President Connon opened the meeting. The trustees reported that everything was in readiness for the anniversary banquet, to be held June 28, that fifty acceptances had been received and it was hoped the entire membership would send in their acceptances by June 20. The trustees were instructed to arrange for the annual picnic, with full power to act.

David Geddes, of the Ayers Floral Co., made application for membership.

State Vice-president Fred H. Weber of the S. A. F. was present and spoke at length regarding the coming meeting of the S. A. F. at Baltimore. Mr. Weber will have charge of the transportation this year. Chairman De Wever of the bulletin committee made a good talk on "Coöperation Among the Local Florists," on which quite a good discussion was started. Harry Balsley, of Detroit, also spoke and urged the members to visit Detroit when the carnation and rose meetings will be held there.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, showed a plant of his new canna, a sport of King Humbert, which was green on one side and red on the other. The green side showed a yellow flower and the red a red flower, which was greatly admired by the members.

The rest of the afternoon was taken up by discussions on questions from the question box and Trustee Guy passed good cigars. The next meeting of the club will take place July 13, when officers will be nominated, the election to follow at the August meeting.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held its monthly meeting June 5, in Knights of Columbus hall, Grand and Olive streets, at 8 o'clock. The resignation of Fred C. Weber, Jr., as secretary, was read and accepted and Robert J. Windler was elected to the office. Mr. Windler, in turn, resigned as treasurer, and Fred H. Weber was chosen for the place. The meeting was well attended and President Sanders, who presided, said a great deal of important business was transacted.

The Ladies' Home Circle had an outing at O'Fallon park, June 12, when a most enjoyable day was spent. All the ladies have received souvenir postal cards from the secretary of the circle, Miss Matilda Meinhardt, who is traveling in Europe this summer. Mrs. John Steidle, president of the circle, says there will be quite a few of these outdoor meetings of the circle during the hot summer months.

The trustees of the Florists' Club, Messrs. Guy, Bentzen and Ostertag, will make several trips this week to find a new place in which to hold the annual florists' picnic this year. The date will be July 20. As to the place, some of the members favor the east side, while others want the old place, Romona park. The choice was left to the trustees, who will endeavor to find a place that will please all.

J. J. Wunderli, who is head of the Alexander Floral Co., at Clayton, Mo., says their new houses are being completed and they will be in position to send a lot of good stock to this market next fall and winter.

The west end florists, F. C. Weber, Mr. Waldbart, Mrs. Ayers, Miss New-

G. M. Thost, of De Soto, Mo., has been busy repairing the damage done by the hail. Mrs. Thost and family will spend the summer months in northern Wisconsin, with relatives.

The following visitors were here last week: W. E. Ogle, E. W. Guy, H. Emunds, of Belleville, Ill.; M. F. Widmer, Highland, Ill.; Ed Denker, St. Charles, Mo.; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; F. We Recommend to You for Quality:

Faster Lilies—They do not show the effect of the hot weather. We have them as good now as any other time of the season.

Valley—Plenty of it, and it is good. Valley is very satisfactory stock at this time of the year.

Sweet Peas—We have the best outdoor Peas coming to this market. All the desirable shades and plenty of them every morning.

Beauties—Our stock is as good as you will find them, and as good as you can expect them in June. The way we have been selling them, they must be all right.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Beauties and valley are the strong points of a weak market; weak because of flowers rather than of business. By far the larger part of the stock coming into town is below grade, not fit for the orders, particularly the shipping orders. Business is fairly good for the season. There are wedding and commencement orders and a fair number of orders of other kinds: for dinners, gifts for the hospitals, for the seashore, and so on. The trouble lies in the extraordinarily hot weather that damaged the quality so seriously in May and gave it a final slap on two or three days of the week ending June 14. Some idea of the quality can be formed from the statement that out of a single shipment of roses amounting to 9,000, only 100 could be picked last Monday that were equal to shipping requirements; for the balance the wholesaler would gladly have taken at the rate of 50 cents per hundred. Carnations are just as bad; one sale of 2,600 at the rate of 13 cents per hundred was considered good, the stock being soft and unfit. Sweet peas were in good demand on some days of the week. There have been a lot of rainy days, and on the day following the supply is apt to be short, but after pleasant days the outdoor pick is in full swing. Local peonies are over; the market is now depending on the flowers from a cooler latitude; this may be interpreted in two ways; many of them are fine.

Eliminating unsalable stock, there are still some really good roses, carnations, valley, lilies and other flowers with which to do business. These bring good prices for the season. Cattleyas seem expensive for most of the buyers now, while there is little interest in gardenias. Greens are dull. White lilacs are over.

Flowers Abroad.

M. Rice talked of several things seen on his recent trip abroad that may be of general interest. One was the exhibition at Boskoop, Holland, mentioned before in this column. The features of this exhibition were: It was entirely composed of hardy stock flowered in pots; it was held at a place a long distance from a railway station, and it appeared to be a popular success. An explanation of the last two facts may be necessary; the show was held on a canal, and the canal is the highway in Holland.

In London Mr. Rice visited the Covent Garden market several times, with a view to learning the popular taste in flowers. He was greatly impressed with the firm hold that plants and flowers have gained; the quantities sold daily are enormous. In London also Mr. Rice was interested in the general movement of closing the business houses on Holy Thursday, not to reopen until Easter Tuesday; wherever the requirements of a business made it possible a sign to this effect was posted in the window and large numbers of the people left London for three days. Were this the custom in this city, Easter would cease to grow more important as a floral festival.

Mr. Rice noticed that the theaters in England and on the Continent almost without exception had floral decorations. A bank of foliage and flowers at each corner of the stage outside of the curtain was the usual method of decoration. This was varied and improved as the taste of the management or the decorator suggested.

PEONIES

We will have PEONIES in quantity until the end of June. Colors: Bright pink, flesh pink and white. Prices: $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Mr. Rice suggested that here was a field for cultivation, open to the florists of America.

Various Notes.

The Robert Craig Co. has a fine stock of young ferns of Boston type just rounding into condition. The cyclamens are now sufficiently advanced to warrant glowing claims of their quality.

Mrs. Joseph B. Habermehl, wife of the well known florist at Second and Butler streets, died recently.

Joseph A. Pennypacker, of Phoenixville, Pa., has taken his son, a young man of rare promise, into partnership. Business has been active in Phoenixville this week. By the way, Joseph A. is a connection of Silas W.

Edward A. Stroud has completed the addition to his plant at Strafford, Pa.; the immense new house adds one-half to his greenhouse capacity. The boiler-shed is thoroughly modern; galvanized iron sides with top ventilation.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, of Pittsburg, Pa., was here a short time ago; her manager, Harvey Sheaf, favored us a week later.

Samuel S. Pennock says that Melody is proving a good warm weather rose.

The Market.

Business ruled quiet most of last week and there is not much doing at the opening of the present week. With school graduations, etc., however, the latter part of the week is expected to be more lively. Roses are in considerably reduced supply. There has been a good call for American Beauties and Killarneys, both pink and white. Kaiserin has also been selling well, while growers who have Carnot have no trouble in disposing of the flowers. Richmond is still seen of remarkably good quality for the season. Mrs. Aaron Ward still is fairly good. This, however, is not a summer rose and will soon be over. A few outdoor hybrid perpetuals appeared this week. These, however, cut little figure in the local market.

Carnations are away down in prices; while a few may make $2 per hundred, a greater number are sold at 75 cents, with others as low as 35 cents to 50 cents. Sweet peas are holding up well and remain the best selling flowers in the market. Some of the large growers have finished picking for the season. A few outdoor flowers are already arriving, but these are not of high-class quality. Marguerites are mostly small and poor in quality. Good yellow flowers bring $1.50 to $2 per hundred. There is an adequate supply of gladioli, both large and small-flowered varieties. Spanish iris is about over for the season. Peonies, especially pink and white varieties, have sold well. Valley is only selling moderately well and the call for lilies and callas is not brisk. There is little or no call for stocks, feverfew and antirrhinum. Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are selling well, but adiantum is moving slowly. The quality leaves much to be desired.

The Exhibition.

The exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, June 10 and 11, entirely filled the main hall. Peonies, herbaceous plants in variety and orchids were leading attractions. There were three entries for the best twenty-five orchids arranged with flowering plants. First and third went to J. T. Butterworth; second to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, William Thatcher gardener.

Peonies were quite largely shown, and the quality was excellent, although no classes were provided. T. C. Thurlow & Sons had a large display. E. J. Shaylor had two tables filled with a choice assortment. A gold medal was awarded to Mr. Shaylor for his work in popularizing the peony and encouraging the planting of the best varieties. He is nearly 70 years of age, but active and full of vim for one of his years. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had an immense display of herbaceous plants, filling nearly 1,000 square feet of space. Wilton Lockwood showed the single peony, L'Esperance, orange yellow in color, a unique shade. Robert Cameron, of the Harvard Botanic Gardens, had a fine tank of nymphæas and other aquatics; Mrs. E. M. Gill, a table of hybrid perpetual roses, iris, pyrethrums, carnations and other flowers. F. J. Rea showed the new aster, amellus Beaute Parfait, deep blue in color, awarded a certificate of merit, and aquilegias. Mrs. J. L. Gardner had a good collection of peonies, as had William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener. The latter also had a fine group of Canterbury bells in pots and palms. The leading exhibitor of peonies was Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield gardener, who filled several tables. He also showed Laelio-cattleya Wellesleyana (Lælia elegans x Cattleya Mossiæ) and Reineckiana, a fine hybrid nearly pure white in color, awarded a silver medal. Longwater Gardens showed three plants of the new seedling Lælio-cattleya Longwaterensis (Cattleya Loddigesii x Lælia purpurata alba), awarded a first-class certificate, also several vases of cut odontoglossums. J. T. Butterworth received a bronze medal for a fine specimen plant of Miltonia vexillaria, also a first-class cultural certificate for a well flowered specimen of Cattleya Mendellii Morganæ, and a gratuity for a group of miltonias. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. received a silver medal for their big display of perennials, also honorable mention for tree peonies and Iris

Geny Bros., Florists in Nashville, Tenn., write us as follows:

"The cooler you shipped us has given surprising results. We are more than pleased with same. We loaded this cooler with 3000 lbs. of ice November 1, and did not put in any more until the 14th, and then put in 1200 lbs. The temperature stands 35° to 38°, and has never reached 40°. pallida Dalmatica. Mrs. J. L. Gardner received a gratuity for a display of rhododendrons.

Various Notes.

W. C. Ward, of Quincy, noted as an indoor pansy specialist, was the first in the market with outdoor sweet peas, of which he now has a large daily pick.

Gladiolus Dawn, one of B. Hammond Tracy's seedlings, is coming in of fine quality from S. J. Goddard and A. A. Pembroke.

Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., has leased the building at 1 Park street, the ground floor of which is now occupied by Julius H. Zinn.

Nelson & Johnson, of Framingham, and Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, are among those shipping in quantities of fine peonies.

Peirce Bros. have a fine cut of Gladiolus America. They still have marguerites, both yellow and white, in quantity.

William Sim finished his indoor sweet peas some days ago and is now concentrating his energies on tomatoes. His pick is now averaging 2,000 pounds daily. Present wholesale prices are 15 cents to 20 cents per pound. His violets and fields of sweet corn are each looking extra well.

Thomas W. Head, well known among local growers, whose arrangements for partnership with a prominent local florist did not materialize, has taken the nurseries and trial grounds of the Stumpp & Walter Co., of New York, and will operate them on his own account.

Do not forget the fact that ladies' night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club comes June 20. Elaborate preparations are being made for this enjoyable annual affair and a large attendance is assured.

Peter Fisher is busy planting in his new crop of carnations. He will devote one 300-foot house to the fine new variegated seedling, Benora, which attracted so much attention at the S. A. F. National Show. He has been greatly troubled with cutworms on outside planted stock, which he has sprayed several times with arsenate of lead.

The directors of the two wholesale flower markets have voted to close the markets at noon Saturdays during July and August.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pegler are among those planning to make a European trip this summer and expect to leave on the Franconia July 25.

William Penn, one of the well known Bromfield street florists, will lead a bride to the altar during the present month.

Albert Batley & Son, of Maynard, are shipping in fine cuts of pink and white peonies to E. E. Fletcher, at the Boston Coöperative Market, which are speedily sold.

The grounds of Prof. C. S. Sargent at Holm Lea, Brookline, were open to the public and attracted thousands of visitors June 10 and 11. Rhododendrons, azaleas, kalmias and peonies were noteworthy among many flowers in season.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report that June business is holding up remarkably well. Their shipping trade continues to expand. Lyrata has been selling well, also all green supplies for weddings.

The Market.

The cool snap after our warm spell is as welcome as flowers in the springtime, and we have more than one reason for rejoicing. The flowers are better in quality and last longer. It is easier to hustle when it is cool, and we certainly have to hustle these June days, with commencements, weddings, funerals, etc., especially weddings, for June means weddings galore. Then, too, business is better on account of the absence of the street faker, since there is no surplus for the faker to sell at a ridiculous price. Flowers bring a better price during cool weather. People will pay a good price for a good article, and it is sometimes impossible to have good stock during hot weather; so we are glad it is cool once more.

The peony is queen of the market this week, and is arriving in enormous quantities of large, superb blooms. Peonies are used for all occasions—weddings, funerals, gift flowers and remembrances for the sick. A week of cool, cloudy weather has produced some large, crisp carnations of good color, quite out of the ordinary for June. They find a ready market, as good carnations do at all times of the year. Roses of all kinds have been much better since the weather became cooler. Killarneys and White Killarneys are strong and good in color, but red roses are scarce and therefore expensive. Beauties are about the same as last week, but just a little deeper in color. They still bring a good price.

Garden flowers are taking the place of greenhouse flowers this month. Quantities of iris, syringas, cut pansies, Canterbury bells, larkspurs, pyrethrums, etc., are used for table decorations and as gift flowers.

In flowering plants there are but few rhododendrons, ramblers and gloxinias, and extremely few late spiræas.

Various Notes.

George Hart is about sold out of bedding plants, and reports a good spring trade.

James Vick's Sons are still selling large quantities of cabbage and tomato plants, as well as aster, marigold and mignonette seedlings. Other plants, such as geraniums, vincas, petunias, salvias, etc., have sold well.

E. C. Campbell has begun cutting some of his summer crop of orchids—Cattleya gigas—but it is a little early to cut any quantity of the blooms as yet.

The two largest weddings last week were the Roberts-Woodworth and the Rockwood-Tubbs nuptials. The decorations at both weddings were the work of J. B. Keller's Sons, of 25 Clinton avenue, north.

The Robert Craig Co., of Philadelphia, has forwarded a good sized shipment of cyclamen of the giant variety to Campbell's greenhouses, in this city.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., is shipping large quantities of valley into this market. He is also sending some fine Star bouvardias.

The rhododendrons at Highland park have just passed their prime. They were viewed by thousands on Sunday, June 4. Following the gorgeous display of the rhododendrons, have come the peonies, which are now in full bloom.

George Havill, of J. B. Keller's Sons, did a splendid decoration for the wedding of his cousin in Sodus, N. Y., June 7. The principal flowers used were peonies, field daisies and syringas.

George Boucher is planning a Japanese decoration for his store during the summer months. E. C. A.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Trade in general is good, but, now that commencements are over, it is likely to drop off a little. There are still some June weddings to look forward to, but everyone is beginning to make plans for his summer vacation, feeling that the season is just about over.

There is a quantity of stock on the market, mostly of good quality. Carnations are fairly good, though perhaps a little smaller, but for a week or ten days they have hardly moved. Peonies have come in by the wagon-load and have been sold for almost nothing. When it is possible to buy three dozen peonies for $1, carnations must necessarily take a back seat. Last year, late frosts destroyed nearly all peonies here, but this year there is an enormous crop, mostly of good quality. They will be gone in a few days, however, as the warm weather has brought them quickly into bloom.

Tea roses are equal to the demand on some days; then several weddings take all the white and it is several days before there is a surplus. Some of the teas are badly mildewed, especially Bride. There is still a good demand for Beauties, even if they are a little smaller.

The growers are planning to throw out their sweet peas in a week or so. They are selling well, but there is a great quantity on the market, and the price has dropped so that it hardly pays to bother with them. Some fine gladioli are seen, but Denver buyers have not yet learned to appreciate a "novelty," and so the gladioli stay in the ice-boxes till they are ready for the dump.

Porch and window boxes, hanging baskets and flower beds! There are more in Denver now than ever before. Everybody has them. Marguerites are sold out, for which we are truly thankful. They have become an eyesore, Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club for this season was held June 5. The attendance was better than it had been for some time. There was an interesting discussion, the question being whether pansy plants could be grown at a profit, considering the price they bring. Estimates were submitted by N. A. Benson, C. F. Maler, J. A. Sked, H. D. Belcher and Thomas Chapman. It was found that the average total cost of growing 10,000 plants exceeded the selling price by over $1. In these estimates every little item was taken into consideration, including the cost of the seed, preparing beds for seed, transplanting seedlings into cold-frames, proportionate cost of cold-frames and sash, mats for covering, cost of water, labor of watering, cost of baskets, and the labor of putting the plants in baskets. It was decided that in most instances not more than three-fourths or four-fifths of the plants are salable, owing to different conditions. Taking the five estimates as a basis, it was determined that the average cost to grow a dozen pansy plants is 20 4-5 cents. In many cases this year they have been sold for less than that.

The trustees were authorized to find a suitable meeting place and to engage it before the next meeting, which will be early in the fall.

Various Notes.

The Culp Sisters, of Littleton, are more than satisfied with their spring trade. They have sold out completely, and it will be necessary for them to buy stock plants.

Warren Smith, while riding his motorcycle recently out on Colfax avenue, struck a rut, was thrown several feet and rendered unconscious. He was confined to his home for a few days, with a few bad cuts on his head, but is now able to be around.

The store of the New York Floral Co. was closed Thursday of last week on account of the funeral of Mr. Ennegon's mother.

ing car. It is much like his other machine, but is a little larger.

Mrs. L. A. Dunsmore reports that this year so far has been the best since she has been in business, especially in funeral work. She had a splendid stock of bedding plants for the spring trade, especially geraniums. They were the finest she ever had. Her Easter trade was good, with probably the best lilies in the city. Decoration day trade surpassed by far any previous year, so she thought she could do nothing better than buy a bigger horse and new harness, to let her patrons see she was trying to accommodate them.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., H. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

THE latest list of the American Seed Trade Association shows 162 annual and two life members.

THOSE in charge of next week's seed trade convention hope to make quite a feature of night letter crop reports.

CHAUNCEY P. COY, veteran seed grower, died suddenly at Waterloo, Neb., June 10. See the obituary column on page 17.

IN nearly all parts of the country where seed crops are grown the weather has been rather too dry since the passing of the early spring rains.

HENRY CRAMER, formerly a collector for S. D. Woodruff & Sons, at their New York branch, has been arrested on the charge of embezzling $86 belonging to that firm.

THE letter from Chief Seed Tester Brown, published in last week's issue of The Review, may be construed as an invitation to the seed trade to come to Washington this summer and get put hep.

THE Arizona Seed Co. is the name of a new firm which has been organized at Phoenix, Ariz., with a capital of $15,000. The members of the company are Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Humbert, formerly of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and H. B. Wilkinson. About a year ago the Humberts purchased a ranch of 175 acres at Phoenix. The firm has opened a store at 137 North Central avenue, Phoenix, and has also purchased a 200-foot front-

House of Purity Freesia, as grown for the Stumpp & Walter Co.

PURITY

The best and most salable Freesia in the American and European markets. Our stock of this now popular and famous Freesia is the largest in this country. We have bulbs that have been grown under glass (the illustration shows one of our houses), also bulbs grown by the originator, R. Fischer. Both of these stocks are the true Purity stock, from which we receive our bulbs. The very highest quality is guaranteed. The demand for this variety in all the wholesale markets is persistent and universal. Its popularity is undiminished; practically it has no competitor.

age on the Santa Fe tracks, at Ninth street, as the site for a warehouse, which will be built at once. Seeds of all kinds will be handled, but alfalfa will be a specialty.

George G. Stumpp, of Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, sailed for Europe June 10. He was accompanied by his family.

A. Le Coq & Co., Darmstadt, Germany, in a letter mailed May 30, say they think it a risk to buy crimson clover seed at present high prices, although chances for a reduction in price have been diminished by a scarcity of green fodder, which makes it necessary for farmers to cut the crimson clover for feeding.

E. L. Page, president of the American Seed Trade Association, calls attention that next week's convention at Marblehead will be the first meeting in Massachusetts in twenty-seven years, the association having met in the state but once before, at Boston in 1884, the first meeting, for organization, having been held at New York the year before.

Replying to various inquiries: Recent court decisions are that no words other than those between the date and the signature of a letter are of force and effect as a contract. In other words, a purchaser is not compelled to look on the back of the seller's letterhead, or to search the advertising matter at the top, in quest of terms in modification of the agreement in the body of the letter.

CONVENTION PROGRAM.

The twenty-ninth annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association will be held at the Rock-Mere hotel, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, the opening session being held at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday. The program for the meeting is as follows:

"Points of Interest at Marblehead," by Edgar Gregory, of Marblehead.

"The Relation of Soils and Fertilizers to Seed and Crop Failure," by H. J. Wheeler, Ph. D., Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station of Rhode Island State College.

"Departments of the Seed Business," by W. D. Ross, Worcester, Mass.

"Distribution of Fungous Diseases by Seeds," by Dr. E. Mead Wilcox, Professor Agricultural Botany and State Botanist, Lincoln, Neb.

EXPORTS OF SEEDS.

The exports of seeds by the United States were, in 1910, less than one-fourth the value of the imports, whereas in 1907 the exports exceeded the imports in value by more than $4,000,000. The difference is due to the falling off in the exports of flaxseed, of which in 1907 we exported to the value of $7,865,889 more than we imported, while in 1910 we imported to the value which make satisfactory customers are those grown on

ROSA CANINA (Dog Briar) Stocks

They are extremely low-budded on the collar of the roots, which makes SUCKERING PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE.

In 2-year-old, strong field-grown plants, we have in stock for Fall 1911-Spring 1912 delivery such varieties as American Pillar, Leuchtfeuer, Lyon Rose, Jessie, Prince de Bulgarie, Lady Ashtown, Mme. Ravery, Mme. Car. Testout, Kaiserin Aug. Victoria, Gruss an Teplitz, Druschki, Pharisaer, etc., etc.

The Dog Briar is the very best stock for out-of-door roses. They outlive any other stock, and the color of flowers is more brilliant and true. Roses on this stock are far superior to those grown on own roots—Manetti, Rugosa, Multiflora, Sweet Briar.

Ask for our list of varieties.

GOOD COMMERCIAL DAHLIAS.

Will you name three dahlias of commercial value? W. W.

It is a difficult matter to sift dahlias down to three varieties, more particularly when nothing is said as to what type is preferred. In cactus, Countess of Lonsdale, salmon tinted apricot; Pink Perle, soft rose-pink, and Kriemhilde, brilliant pink, are an excellent trio. In decoratives, C. W. Bruton, bright yellow; Souvenir de Gustave Doazon, clear scarlet, an immense flower, and Henry Patrick, pure white, are fine. Among double show dahlias, Grand Duke Alexis, pure white, tinted lavender; A. D. Livoni, charming soft pink, and Dreer's White are hard to beat. Probably you would find Kriemhilde, A. D. Livoni, Grand Duke Alexis and C. W. Bruton as fine as any for your purpose. They are not new, but are thoroughly reliable and free flowering. C. W.

ALUM IN WATER.

Our town has installed a filter plant and uses a great deal of alum in the water. I should like to know whether this water is injurious to plants. E. W.

I have known of one or two similar cases where alum was freely used in connection with filter beds, but the florists using this water have not noticed any ill effects. The opinion of others on this subject would be interesting, but my personal opinion is that you have nothing to fear from using the water. C. W.

Be a MUGWUMP. In other words, be independent. "Mugwump" is from the Indian "Mugquomp" and means "leader." In 1884 the New York Sun gave the word political meaning, indicating an independent voter; one who was considered a backslider or a person who considered himself of superior intelligence—capable of voting as he pleased. Some florists today buy from firms because they feel that they are obliged to—perhaps such a firm may buy from them. Consider this—does the firm buy from you, Mr. Florist, because of your personality, or do they buy from you because they are glad to get the goods, at their own price, or at a price which will net them the most profit? Would they not buy from your next neighbor if they could buy better or cheaper? Do you think they buy from you for love? If they do, it is not good business. Do they buy from you just because you buy from them? If they do, it is again not good business. Do you think we would buy bulbs from a bulb exporter abroad just because he might buy from us? Not much—we would not buy from him unless we were sure he had the goods. We are Mugwump Buyers. The Mugwump, or independent buyer, is the successful man today. Be a Mugwump.

FLINT, MICH.

In the hail storm of Sunday night, June 4, Hasselbring the Florist, whose greenhouses are located on Garden street, was one of the heaviest losers. Of the 100,000 square feet of glass in the thirteen houses, about 50,000 square feet were broken. The lights in the buildings on the north side were all broken and also seventeen lights in the windows of the residence were demolished. The loss will run into thousands of dollars. Thirty thousand carnation plants were ruined and also twenty acres of fruit crops. The tomato plants, which were in two houses, are a total loss. Most of the damage was caused by the hail. This is the third time in seven years that these greenhouses have been damaged by storms.

Harry Schott, who conducts a greenhouse and also grows garden truck on fifteen acres near the Hasselbring greenhouses, suffered heavy loss, all the garden truck being ruined.

L. De Cew, George Cheffin and Dan Buecking, who have ten acres in that vicinity for growing garden truck, suffered losses from the storm, as all the garden truck was practically ruined. Mr. De Cew also suffered the loss of a barn, which was blown down by the storm.

PACIFIC COAST.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Counter trade has been rather quiet, but funeral work has kept up quite well. Wedding decorations commenced with the first of June and have maintained a steady gait, with stock about equal to the demand. Carnations are in full crop again and roses, also, are in fine form, with elegant canes. Kaiserins and Carnots are the principal summer roses here.

Sweet peas, iris and peonies are about equal to the demand, but, on account of the unusually cool weather, outside flowers developed slowly.

Various Notes.

This being the annual rose festival week, the city is in gala attire and many strangers are within its gates. Decorated automobile and carriage parades are the main feature, and although home talent was applied in most cases, yet there was occasionally a chance for the florists to show their skill. The exhibition of roses was held at the Armory, where many beautiful blooms were exhibited and prizes competed for. While the quality was not up to the standard of former years, on account of the late season, great credit was given the rosarians for their efforts to make it a success. In the decorative plant and cut flower exhibit, first prize was awarded to the Swiss Floral Co. and second to Martin & Forbes.

P. M. Parthemore, of the McFarland Publicity Service, Harrisburg, Pa., is here on a special mission during the festival, to secure views and photographs of choice roses.

C. T. Kipp, of Spokane, is in town, combining business with pleasure. A. E. Miller, of Hayden's Flower Shop, Tacoma, is also here for a few days.

John Holze, Chas. Walker, F. C. Smith and Louis Tschunko came over from Seattle in an auto and are having a jolly time. Miss Burns, of Woodland Park, and Tom Rhodes, of Walz's place, are also here.

Frank Clarke, of Clarke Bros., Oakland, came up to the festival and to visit his family after several years' absence.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The summer dullness has arrived in genuine shape and everyone seems to be making an effort to get out of town. Flowers for school commencements have moved better this year than ever before, and the practice of making much ado about graduation seems to be on the increase. This is over, however, for this season and we now have to drop back on wedding decorations and an occasional funeral order. Carnations and roses are not overplentiful, but quite sufficient to fill all requirements. Sweet peas have been cheaper since Memorial day and they are practically the only outside flowers that are in good demand. Spanish irises are on the wane and are the last item among the bulbous stock to be shown for this spring.

Bride gladioli came on a few days too late for Decoration day with most of the growers, and they now are going begging at 50 cents per hundred. The other varieties of gladioli are not yet in sufficient quantity to make much of a showing and it will be several weeks before either they or dahlias will be much in evidence.

Valley is not plentiful, but there is enough to go around and the same can be said of L. longiflorum. Owing to the warm weather, the wild flowers are getting scarce and there is practically nothing in this line that pays for the handling.

CANTALOUPES FOR MARKET.

The growing of cantaloupes is an important industry and although there are some factors influencing the development of cantaloupes which are beyond control of the grower, large returns are being realized.

According to S. A. Minear, of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, experience throughout the United States shows that the sandy, loam soils are best suited for the growing of cantaloupes, but satisfactory results may be obtained from the lighter soils as well as the heavier ones.

From one-half to one pound of the following, mixed thoroughly in the soil of each hill, will give excellent results:

1,000 pounds acid phosphate.
250 pounds muriate of potash.

Do not plant cantaloupes closer than four to six feet. Place eight to twenty seeds in each hill. Make several plantings in the same hill at intervals of one or two weeks. Much depends on thorough cultivation. First cultivate deeply, but not close enough to the plants to injure the root system. As the plants develop and become older the cultivation should be more shallow, and farther from the hills. It will be necessary to hoe the hills. This should be done with skill, as careless hoeing causes much injury.

Cantaloupes should make a continuous, uniform growth, for when injured or retarded it is hard for them to rally and regain the lost ground.

During the warm weather of early spring the striped cucumber beetles often appear in great numbers. They are very hungry at first and exercise little choice of food plants. After their appetite becomes satisfied the beetles are more particular about their food; then they attack melon vines and injure them by eating holes in the leaves. Small yellow eggs, from which come the worm-like larvæ, are laid on any part of the plant. The larvæ live in moist soil and eat roots and underground stems. Apply air-slaked lime to the plants as a repellent. Spray with Bordeaux mixture, to which add one pound of Paris green to 150 gallons of Bordeaux, or use arsenate of lead at the rate of two pounds of lead, two pounds of quick lime to fifty gallons of water.

Pickers should go over the field each day, rain or shine, and pull all melons ready for the market. For shipping purposes the melon should be well-netted, grayish green in color and, upon pressing the stem with the finger, it should detach easily. Use either burlap sacks, slung over the shoulder, or one-half bushel baskets. Have each picker take one or two rows and work systematically. Transfer the melons to the packing shed at once or put them where they will not be exposed to the hot rays of the sun. Cantaloupes must go on the market in the best condition possible, and to accomplish this it is essential to be most careful in handling, picking and hauling, avoiding all possible chance of bruising.

San Antonio, Tex.—Mrs. Charles Albrecht had a highly satisfactory Decoration day business, but Mothers' day, she says, has not yet taken as strong a hold on popular fancy in this city as in many other localities.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.

THE ST. LOUIS CONVENTION.

A Fine Meeting in Progress.

Much to the disappointment of the Missouri members, the American Association of Nurserymen took its 1910 convention to Denver after having previously voted in favor of St. Louis; they were afraid of the heat. The Missourians considered this a defamation and insisted on having the matter put to the test. This is a delightful week in St. Louis and the Missourians feel themselves vindicated, especially as the convention is at least as large as any of its thirty-five predecessors. The middle west is especially well represented and the old guard from the east is present as usual. The nurserymen who buy and sell with each other are always on the job convention week. They are not averse to combining pleasure with business, but it is a business matter with them.

The convention is being held at the Southern hotel, with the trades' display in the big sample room on the first floor. The opening session was set for Wednesday morning and the program has been arranged for morning sessions only, to allow plenty of time for private business and the recreations planned by the entertainment committee. Four hundred were present.

Addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Kriesmann and N. J. Coleman, of the Convention Bureau, response being by J. W. Hill, of Des Moines.

President's Address.

President W. P. Stark has been one of the most active of the many indefatigable presidents the association has had and his address consisted of a practical and scholarly review of business conditions, the work of the association and the tasks which lie before it, comprising in all nearly 7,000 words. He went in detail into the subject of federal legislation, with the premise that nurserymen are a unit in favor of any government control which will raise the standard of the nursery trade or products, or result in the benefit of fruit growing in any of its broader features. He then went on to point out the difficulties of the situation as they appear from various points of view. He concluded: "We as nurserymen need national and state inspection. We should coöperate with those interests to bring about maximum protection with minimum hardship to all concerned. While the nurserymen may lose temporarily, it is the consumer who foots the bill in the end." He said that the Supreme Court's "light of reason" might well be applied to much state legislation.

President Stark spoke of the lack of standard grades as helping to demoralize prices. Referring to the fact that the majority of nurserymen are also orchardists, he spoke for coöperation between the two interests and urged nurserymen to aid experimental and demonstrative orchard work, also movements for civic improvement. Speaking of association affairs, he said the two things needed are more members and an increased membership fee, offering also the suggestion of a change in the date of meeting either to September or January, or both. He urged attention to publicity work on the part of the association—"associated advertising which will educate." Calling attention to the usefulness of a permanent committee on trade opportunities, he urged all nurserymen to encourage those who are making progress towards higher standards and to set their faces against the things which lead downward, and not up.

The Secretary's Report.

Secretary John Hall presented a report summarized as follows:

It is to be regretted that in large organizations of such practical value as this there are annually recurring fluctuations in the membership. Over forty of those whose names were on last year's list failed to renew for the current year. Each one of these delinquents has received from the secretary at least two and, in some cases, more reminders of the importance of renewing. But there is another and a brighter side to the situation. He early began to surmise that there would be a shrinkage and, being somewhat of an optimist, is not easily discouraged. Heeding the declaration of Richelieu that "there is no such thing as fail," he at once entered upon a widespread campaign after new material. This has resulted in our not only making up the loss referred to, but in bringing the enrollment for this year to a point over thirty in excess of last year's registration. If members have not already made an analysis of the membership roll with reference to representation by localities, we commend such a study as affording considerable food for thought and some interest as well. As an illustration I will mention the states having a representation of six or more, viz.:

Colorado	6	Nebraska	10
Connecticut	6	New Jersey	8
Illinois	25	New York	78
Indiana	15	Ohio	28
Iowa	12	Oklahoma	6
Kansas	21	Oregon	6
Michigan	20	Tennessee	13
Missouri	19	Texas	9

I trust that this reference may awaken a new interest among members, even to the creating of a friendly rivalry to see which state can next year make the largest addition to its present representation.

Wednesday evening was left open in order to provide time for the meetings of the protective associations, the vice-presidents and various committees charged with the work of the association.

For Thursday afternoon no general entertainment has been provided, the time being intended for the visiting of points of special interest, each one to his own taste. The printed entertainment program suggests that special guides would be provided for a tour of the Anheuser-Busch brewery. Thursday evening dinner will be served for the ladies at the Delmar garden, after which they will be taken to the theater. The members of the American Association of Nurserymen will be guests at 8 p. m. at the annual Shaw banquet, to be given at the Southern hotel, Dr. Trelease presiding.

Friday afternoon a boat excursion on the steamer Alton will be given, with luncheon on board. Inspection of Jefferson Barracks will be made, viewing the dress parade and returning to the city about 7:30 p. m.

The entertainment committee of the nurserymen's association is: Frank A. Weber, chairman, St. Louis, Mo.; John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Robert Chase, Huntsville, Ala.; William G. Campbell, St. Joseph, Mo.; C. C. Mayhew, Sherman, Texas; A. M. Ferguson, Denver, Colo.

The local entertainment committee is as follows: William A. Weber, H. C. Irish, J. W. Schuette, C. C. Sanders, L. F. Dintelmann, George Weber, Emil Rothenheber, Walter Weber.

The ladies' entertainment committee is as follows: Mrs. J. W. Schuette, Wrs. William A. Weber, Mrs. H. C. Irish, Miss E. Kirkbride, Mrs. C. C. Sanders, Mrs. Walter Weber, Miss Laura A. Sanders, Miss Jessie B. Sanders, Miss Minnie Steele, Mrs. George Weber, Miss Edith Schuette.

It is Not Too Late to Plant

DREER'S SELECT POTTED ROSES

We can still supply, in prime condition for immediate planting, strong 5 and 6-inch pots of the following choice lists of roses. Do not discourage late planting, but supply the stock while your customers are in the humor for buying, which always occurs when roses are in flower in the garden during June. We are prepared to meet this late demand and your customers will be pleased and will not only gain a season's growth, but from the Hybrid, Tea and other free flowering varieties they will secure a sufficient number of flowers to not only satisfy them, but also stimulate a desire for future plantings.

FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING

The Roses here offered are field grown plants which have been potted into 5 or 6-inch pots (according to the growth of the variety) during the winter months. They have been stored in cold houses and cold frames and are in the best possible condition to turn over to your retail customers for outdoor planting, giving an entirely different result from stock carried over winter in storage. For best results the plants should be shipped in pots; in this shape they will carry safely to reasonable distances by freight.

vention at Alvin, Tex., June 5 and 6. According to an authority, "the members of this association represent a large per cent of the live wires of the citrus and fig industry of Texas, they being the builders of its foundation by demonstrating conclusively the feasibility, assuredness and lucrativeness of the commercial citrus and fig orchard business. The members of this association have been and are the pathfinders of the present movement to settle the coast country with a high class of citizenship."

The convention was called to order with President R. H. Bushway in the chair. Secretary R. W. Holbert being unavoidably absent, Miss Wilson was elected secretary pro tem. The following program was rendered, with animated discussions following each number:

"Have We Been Benefited by This Organization?" by President R. H. Bushway, of Algoa, Tex.

"Better Trees, Better Prices," W. A. Stockwell, of Alvin.

"Propagation, Transplanting, Utility of the Palms," W. C. Griffing, of Port Arthur, Tex.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Flower work and decorations for commencement exercises and June weddings keep the florists busy. Though the wedding decorations are not pretentious, they are numerous enough to make up for the deficiency in lavishness. The home-grown stock of cut flowers is limited to perennial phloxes, pyrethrums, roses and asters. As the extreme heat, both day and night, prevented the aster plants from developing properly, the flowers came in earlier, but much smaller than in other years; nevertheless, they come in handy. Lilium auratum and lancifolium are seen in the show windows of several florists and help a great deal to break the monotony of the display, as well as the arrangement of flower work.

The big stock of all kinds of foliage plants carried by our local florists is in a fine condition, strong and clean grown. The different fern varieties are doing well and the heat had no bad effect on them. Several retail florists who have stores in connection with their nurseries are starting to grow orchids, especially cattleyas. They found out the attractiveness of growing plants in bloom when used in store decorations, besides the advantages of having fresh cut flowers of this kind on hand in case of immediate necessity.

Several florists intend to renovate their older greenhouses and some new ones will be erected during the summer; yet the building activity is not especially strong.

Peonies, carnations and roses are still coming in from the northern markets, especially Chicago.

Various Notes.

Charles W. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, Long Island, at present of Avery Island, La., entertained about twenty-five local florists, mostly members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, on Sunday afternoon, May 28, on his beautiful yacht, Ethel M. Ward. The trip, starting at West End, took its course over Lake Pontchartrain to Mandeville and up the picturesque Tchefuncta river. All kinds of refreshments were served in abundance. Everyone enjoyed the novel treat immensely and lauded the generous hospitality of their colleague. It was late in the evening when the final landing at the starting point was made. Mr. Ward intends to make Louisiana his permanent home and, being an enthusiastic lover of nature, he donated to the state a tract of 17,000 acres in Vermilion parish for a game preserve. This is a fine addition to the already large game preserves controlled by the state.

On visiting the nursery of M. Cook's Sons, now under the management of Henry Cook, the writer noticed a large, finely grown stock of Olea fragrans, or sweet olives, and Magnolia fuscata.

NEW ORLEANS.

Several houses are planted with chrysanthemums in the best market varieties—a strong, healthy lot, which, when the time comes, will surely give a good account of themselves.

Charles Eble, the local Phœnix Roebelenii specialist, has an elegant stock of about 2,500 vigorous plants, in the pink of condition, among them many fine specimens. He intends to take a large shipment to the Baltimore convention. Lately he laid in a stock of cattleyas for growing purposes.

Mrs. Carrie Rehm, the proprietor and manager of the pretty St. Charles avenue nursery, reports a splendid business in both the plant and flower line. She always carries a select stock of plants and cut flowers.

At C. F. Dormoy's place the writer's attention was attracted by a beautiful bed of Brazilian hybrid caladiums, raised from seeds, the product of the hybridization of several fine varieties on his place. Among some other new plant specimens was noticed a single red flowering hibiscus, a cross between Hibiscus schizopetalus and a white one; the flowers are bright, graceful and most attractive. Several beds planted with large flowering daisies and pyrethrums were loaded with flowers.

R. E.

Hebron, Neb.—Mrs. M. F. Lindsey, who has built up a prosperous business, says that the demand is increasing steadily. "People want the best," she adds, "and are willing to pay good prices for the best; even geranium plants have to be the choicest varieties."

In Small Plants

We have the following in 2½-in. pots, $2.50 per 100; 25 at 100 rate:

Verbenas, assorted.

We have a house of Lemon Verbenas, the well-known plant of sweet-scented foliage. Some people call it Lemon Trifollum, 4-in. pots, bushy, $7.00 per 100.

Torenia Fournieri.

Summer Chrysanthemums, 2½-in., 3c.

Phlox Drummondi, dwarf and grandiflora.

Tagetes French Dwarf Marigold (African marigold).

Marigold, large African, in bloom, 1 ft. high, 3-in. pots at only $3.00 per 100, worth $7.00 per 100.

Sweet Alyssum Little Gem.

Coleus, Verschaffeltii, Golden Bedder and Queen Victoria, $2.50 per 100; fancy colors, $4.00 per 100. Brillancy, large, 3-in., 10c; 4-in., 15c.

Tradescantia, Parlor Ivy and Kenilworth Ivy.

Thunbergia or Black-eyed Susan.

Nasturtium, dwarf, 4-in., 6c; 3-in., 4c.

Pyrethrum Aureum (Golden Feather), 2½-in., $2.50 per hundred.

Lobelias, Compacta and trailing Crystal Palace.

Centaurea Gymnocarpa (Dusty Miller).

Petunias, Dwarf, Inimitable; California Giant, 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Cornflowers, blue, large plants, $4.00 per 100; assorted colors, $2.50 per 100.

Antirrhinum, or snapdragons, assorted, 2½-in., 4c.

Cobaea Scandens, staked up, 4-in., 10c; 3-in., $4.00 per 100.

Acalypha, 2½-in., $2.50 per 100.

Ipomoea Noctiflora, purest white Moonvine, for which I have a world-wide reputation. I have made a specialty of it for the past 16 years and am known as the Moonvine Grower of America and grow yearly about 20,000. In 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100; 3-in., 8c; 4-in., staked up, $12.00 per 100. Now ready.

Bedding Plants

Geraniums. S. A. Nutt, Alphonse Ricard, Mme. Buchner (white), 4-in., $6.00 per 100.

Ivy geraniums, assorted, 4-in., 6c.

Double Petunias, assorted, 4-in., 6c.

Salvias, Scarlet Sage, Clara Bedman and Bonfire, 4-in., 6c.

Heliotropes, 4-in., 6c.

Ageratums, blue, 4-in., 6c.

Begonias, Vernon (dark red) and Erfordii (best pink). Our begonias are well known and are an improvement over the old Vernon type. One bed of these once seen in bloom will speak for itself, stands the sun and the hottest weather when nothing else blooms, and begonias will outlast all the bedding bloomers in the garden, lawns or in pots. 8000 now ready, 4-in. pots, 6c.

Begonia Erfordii. This so well known strain is another new, improved pink variety of ours, makes smaller leaves, but an abundance of pink flowers, never ceases to bloom summer and winter; plants medium height, but bushy; 4-in. pots, $8.00 per 100.

Lantanas, assorted colors, 4-in., $6.00 per 100.

Fuchsias, assorted colors, $7.00 100; 5-in., 10c.

WHOLESALE GROWER, IMPORTER AND SHIPPER OF POT PLANTS

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

The extremely hot weather we have had lately has been hard on stock, both in the houses and outdoors. Everything is burning up outside, as we have had little rain, with the mercury around 100 degrees in the shade. A few days more without rain will leave crops badly crippled. It is the hottest weather ever known here at this date.

Roses have been extremely poor, as they are almost burned up. While quite a few are coming in, the quality is such that they are hard to move at any price. We expect some stock shortly from rested plants, when we hope the quality will be better. Carnations are holding their own better than anything else; great quantities are coming in and the demand for them is heavy, owing to the poor quality of roses, etc. Some growers are beginning to tear out their carnations and that will cut down the supply. Sweet peas are not plentiful and the quality of most of them is poor, though there are some good ones among them. There is a good call for valley, owing to the large number of weddings.

The plant season is about over and everything was cleaned up nicely. Some growers say they have nothing left for stock and are looking for young stock to replenish their supply. There are still a few stragglers coming in late for porch boxes, etc., but a few days more will see that line of work at an end.

Various Notes.

A new flower store has been opened on South Fourth street, in the market district. The store is run under the name of Howard & Co., and they are handling mostly cut flowers.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business in bedding stock, vases, etc.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is tearing out some of the carnations and expects to replant part of the carnation range in the next two weeks.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., stopped over here last week on his way to Cleveland. J. M.

Araucaria Excelsa, 6-in. pots, 75c.

Clematis, large flowering varieties, 2-year-old plants, $3.00 per doz.; 1-year-old plants, $2.00 per doz.

GODFREY ASCHMANN'S GIANT CREGO ASTERS

HOW ABOUT YOUR EMPTY BENCHES?

After Decoration Day you have empty benches. Will it pay you to have them empty? Take a few minutes to think and consider which will pay the best. Chrysanthemums? No, I know something better. I plant a bench or two with asters, in July, and in August I cut them. That gives me time to refill my benches with a fine lot of fall and holiday plants, such as cyclamen, ferns and poinsettias, roses and other plants suitable for my fall business. I am going to write an order right away to Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, for his GIANT CREGO ASTER. It is the best early branching cut aster in the world.

Yes, we have it for sale in four separate colors; 20,000 of them in white, purple, rose and pink, very strong plants, 2½-inch pots, $3.00 100; $25.00 1000.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business has been dull in cut flower lines, but the plantsmen report an increased demand for stock and a tendency toward more diversity than is common. Persons who never had flowers in their gardens before are planting this year. The geranium takes the lead in popularity. In fact, more geraniums are sold in this city than all the other bedding plants put together.

All kinds of cut flowers, regardless of grade, are a drug on the market. Roses can be had at prices that would insult any grower to receive as returns. It can be said that there is no price, because there are so many flowers to be had and so little demand that large quantities are left unsold.

Various Notes.

The souvenir program for the S.A.F. convention is well under way. It is to be a handsome publication. Advertising matter is coming in daily and will be in the printers' hands shortly.

Fred. C. Bauer and wife sail for Holland, Tuesday, June 13, on the Holland-American line, and will be away about seven weeks. Mrs. Bauer was tendered a supper at one of our prominent river resorts by the ladies' bowling team of Washington and Baltimore. Mrs. Bauer is one of the star bowlers on the local team. Among the ladies who attended were Mrs. Schaffer, Mrs. Cooke and Mrs. Simmons, of Washington; Mrs. Boone, Mrs. Klein, Mrs. Perry, Mrs. Quick, Mrs. Moss and Miss Carey Rapp, of the Baltimore team. After supper they bowled three games. Q.

New Haven, Conn.—At the greenhouses of Charles Munro, on Townsend avenue, another house will be devoted, it is said, to the Dark Pink Killarney and Taft roses during the coming season. Oscar Johnson is the grower.

Sycamore, Ill.—William Swinbank's establishment has recently been noted as one of the busiest places in town. There was an especially heavy demand for greenhouse stock for Memorial day, owing to a shortage of outdoor flowers.

STAMFORD, CONN.

The regular meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Royal Arcanum hall on the evening of June 9, President Stuart occupying the chair and eighty-five members being present. Two life, two honorary and nine active members were elected. The preliminary schedule of the fall show and copies of the revised by-laws were distributed. To members not present copies will be mailed. President Stuart appointed a committee of seven to take charge of the floral display in connection with Wonderland, to be held in Stamford June 14 to 17 for the benefit of the Day Nursery. The society will hold its annual outing and games next month, and the executive committee was instructed to make arrangements and report at the July meeting.

For the exhibits of the evening the judges made the following awards: High commendation to Charles Adcock for lettuce; to James Stuart for vase of hybrid aquilegia; to Carrillo & Baldwin for plant of Dendrobium thyrsiflorum; vote of thanks to P. W. Popp for vase of Spiræa Queen Alexandra, and to A. S. Peterson and James Aitchison for peonies. Several new members were introduced and were much impressed by the large attendance and fine exhibits. J. B. M.

CHARLOTTE, MICH.

William Breitmeyer, a brother of Fred Breitmeyer and of ex-Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit, has decided to reenter the florists' trade and has chosen this town as his location. He has purchased four acres of land at the corner of Harris avenue and Lincoln street and will erect three houses, each 22 x 150 feet. He has placed an order for a carload of glass, to be delivered July 1, and expects to have about 15,000 square feet of glass. He will enter both the retail and wholesale fields in cut flowers, and before the end of the year will have from $10,000 to $12,000 invested.

Celery Culture.

By W. R. Beattie, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. A practical guide for beginners and a standard reference for those already engaged in celery growing. Cloth. 150 pages. Illustrated. 50 cents

The Florists' Manual.

By Wm. Scott. A practical guide for the florist, covering the successful management of all the usual florists' plants; including many topics, such as greenhouse building, heating and floral decorating, etc. Written so you can understand it and profit by its guidance. Fully illustrated. $5.00

Practical Floriculture.

By Peter Henderson. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. Bailey. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Beautifying Country Homes.

By Weidenmann. This is the most useful work on the subject ever issued in this country. It is beautifully illustrated with numerous fine wood engravings, and with 17 full-page and 7 double-page colored lithographs of places already improved. It contains general directions for lawns, roads and drives, walks, hedges, trees and shrubs, gardens, ornamental grounds, hints on burial lots, etc. The beautifully colored plans of improved places are accompanied by descriptions giving the names and position of the various trees and shrubs employed in planting, thus providing a complete planting map. Cloth. $10.00

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By Charles Henderson. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth. $2.50

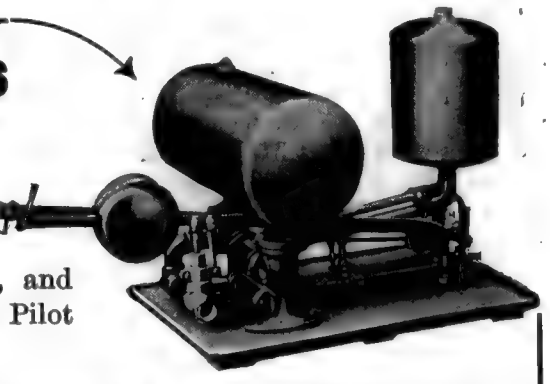
Greenhouse Heating.

A MICHIGAN ADDITION.

I wish to build an addition, 22 x 65 feet. The side walls will consist of thirty inches of concrete and forty-eight inches of glass. The height to the ridge will be about twelve feet. The house will be slightly protected. I wish to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather. How many 2-inch pipes will be necessary to heat this house with hot water? What size and number of flow pipes will be necessary? Will a fire-box boiler, seven and one-half feet long and twenty-eight inches in diameter, set one foot lower than the lowest pipe, heat this house and another, 12 x 50 feet, without crowding it? E. F. C.

To heat a house such as described to a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather will require three 2½-inch flow pipes and fifteen 1½-inch returns. Two of the flows can be on the side walls and the other under the ridge. To get the best circulation, run the flow pipes at a slight fall to the farther end of the house and there connect with the returns, which can be arranged in three or more coils. To readily heat the two houses, the boiler should have about five feet of grate surface.



GREENHOUSES AND RESIDENCE.

Please give me information as to the piping of my houses and the size of boiler that I shall need. I wish to use a sectional boiler, so that I can add to it when necessary.

I have four houses, each fifty feet long. House No. 1 is ten feet wide. The south wall is four feet high, double sheeted and weather boarded. The north wall is five feet high, double sheeted and protected by other houses. The height to the ridge is eight feet and the roof is one-third span. I want this house heated to 60 degrees. House No. 2, north of No. 1, is fourteen feet wide, with side walls five and five and one-half feet high, double sheeted and protected by other houses. It has an even-span roof and is ten feet high to the ridge. It must have a temperature of 60 degrees. House No. 3 is twenty feet wide, with 5½-foot and 6-foot double sheeted walls. Its height to the ridge is eleven feet. I want this house heated to 55 degrees. No. 4 is a propagating house, six feet wide; it is a lean-to, built against the north side of house No. 3. The north wall is four feet high and double sheeted; it is entirely unprotected. All the houses have glass in the ends, down to four feet from the ground. There are doors in each end of all the houses.

All the houses run east and west and the boiler pit is at the southeast corner of house No. 1. I wish to run an underground pipe to my residence, which is only twenty feet from the boiler, and heat a long hall in the are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. Our new catalogue is just out and if you contemplate making any changes you had better get one—it is yours for the asking.

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS

¶ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.

¶ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.

¶ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.

¶ By way of getting acquainted, just send your name and address and ask for "Trap Book."

residence. The hall is 10 x 45 feet and eleven feet to the ceiling. It has two exposed doors and two oval windows. How many radiators will be needed to heat this hall?

I wish to use 2-inch flows and 1½-inch returns in each house. House No. 1 has now one 2-inch flow and ten 1½-inch returns; No. 2 has one 2-inch flow and eight 1½-inch returns. Nos. 3 and 4 were built this season and are not yet piped. I expect to build another house in the fall, the same length as the present ones. In this part of Tennessee the outside temperature seldom falls below zero. J. F. C.

It is difficult to estimate the radiation required to heat the hallway, from the data given. Two or three radiators should be used and these should have a combined radiating surface composed of as many square feet as there are feet of exposed glass, plus the number of feet of wooden wall space exposed to outside air, or one-half the wall space if the rooms are not directly exposed to cold air, and plus the cubic contents of the room.

While it would be better to use 2½-inch pipe for the flows and 2-inch for the returns, good results can be secured with the sizes mentioned. By using two 2-inch flow pipes, not more than six 1½-inch returns will be needed in house No. 1. In house No. 2 use two flows and eight 1½-inch returns; house No. 3 should have three 2-inch flows and ten 1½-inch returns and house No. 4 should have one 2-inch flow and four 1½-inch returns. To

What the Users Say

Temperatures easily maintained; fires only once at night

We have at present 15,000 sq. ft. of glass and think this boiler will take care of 25,000 sq. ft. of glass at 52° in greenhouses. We have no trouble in maintaining proper temperatures and fire but once at night. We put in the piping system according to your plan in three new houses. The two old houses we left the way they were, which caused us some trouble. We will change pipes this summer according to your plan and will then have no trouble. Your piping plan is fine, and the Generator works well; in fact, we could not have done without it, on account of the piping in the old houses.

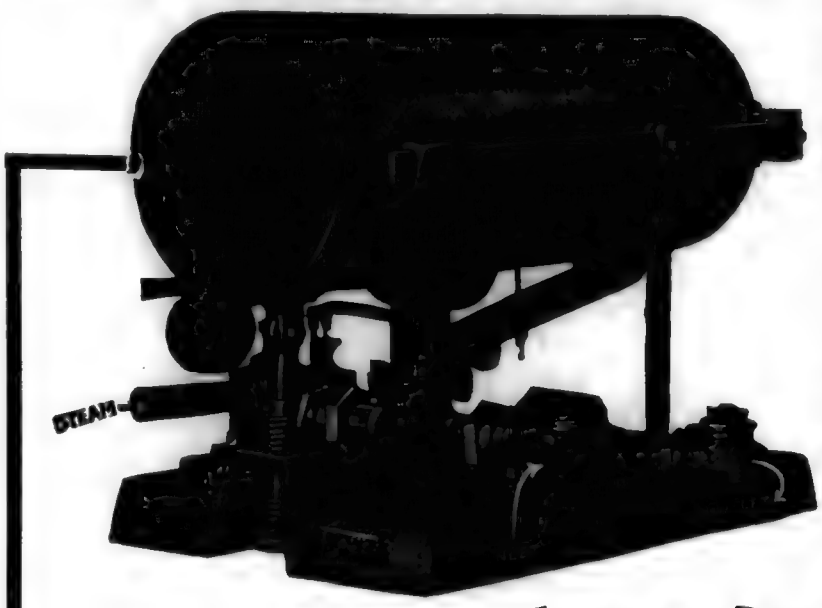
heat the four houses described, the boiler should have a rating of about 3,000 square feet of radiating surface.

TWO DEFECTS IN PIPING.

Will you kindly tell me what is the trouble with my heating system? Every time the pipes get warm the water overflows at the expansion tank. I have been troubled in this way ever since I put the system in last winter. Now, when there is no fire in the boiler, the sun heat causes the expansion tank to overflow—that is, when the pipes get warm with sun heat.

The greenhouse is 40 x 80 feet. The side walls are four feet high; the lower half is double boarded and the upper half is glass. The house runs from northeast to southwest. The northeast gable is boarded; the southwest gable is glass. The boiler is a round Mahoney and is guaranteed to heat the house. Two 4-inch flows run from the boiler to the glass gable and there connect with a 2-inch reducing elbow which feeds four 2-inch returns. These, in turn, drop by means of a 2-inch branch tee into a 2-inch return to the boiler. Do you think I put in enough 2-inch pipes? One coil of pipes never got warm, while all the others were boiling. I am located in Rhode Island.

J. J. K.



As water expands when heated, it is not strange that the expansion tank overflows, even from the heat of the sun. If the coils are alike, there is no reason why the water should not circulate evenly in both if it does in one. It is possible that the grade in one of the coils is such that the air has pocketed and this would prevent the circulation of the water.

There are, however, two serious defects in the heating system. One is a deficiency in the amount of the radiation, and the other is that the 2-inch connections to the coils are altogether too small. For a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees, a house 40 x 80 feet should have eighteen 2-inch returns, in addition to the two 4-inch flow pipes. A better way would be to have four 2½-inch flow pipes and arrange the returns in four coils of four 2-inch pipes each. If preferred, the four flows can be connected to the boiler by means of two 4-inch pipes, but, whatever the size of the flows, the returns should be of the same capacity. Two 3-inch pipes could be used for both.

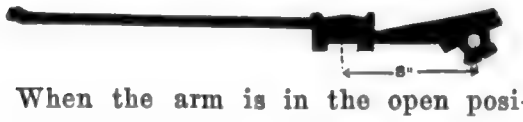
A NEW VENTILATOR ARM.



American greenhouses are the most perfectly built of any in the world; indeed, they are marvels of mechanical simplicity and perfection. The progress has been steady and has by no means ceased, though the Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., believes it will be difficult to make further improvements in arms for operating ventilating sashes. It has recently procured a patent on the clamp parts that fasten around the shafting pipe, and it has a patent pending on the construction of the rod bracket which holds the two 8-inch cross rods and carries the sash rod on what it calls its new twistless arm.

This illustration shows the arm in a right angle position, where the Advance Co. says an elbow arm exerts the greatest twist on the shafting pipe. It says that in the new arm it has eliminated the twist when the arm is in this position by reducing the distance from the center of the shafting pipe to the center of the rod rivet without reducing the throw.

When the arm is in a closed position the distance from the center of the shafting pipe to the center of the rod rivet is eight inches, or the same as in the elbow arm. For the new arm in this position the Advance Co. claims great rigidity and ease in starting.

When the arm is in the open posi-

Charles Moebius, West Toledo, Ohio, writes us:

"We find the Skinner System the best labor saving device we have on the place, and in fact we could not do without it. It will water the ground evenly and will not cake the soil. A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

tion it has the same distance from the center of the shafting pipe to the center of the rod rivet as it has when it is closed, namely eight inches. The manufacturer claims great rigidity when the new arm is in this position and states that it makes no strain on the machine or other parts of the apparatus to hold the sash open.

In the construction of the new arm there are two duplicate castings riveted together by a center rivet to form the part of the arm that clamps to the shafting pipe. One bolt holds the arm securely to the shafting pipe, as the rivet that holds the two clamped parts together also forms a hinge in the proper place on the opposite side of the pipe. After the two clamp parts are together, an 8-inch rod is fastened to each near the outer edge. The rods are then crossed and fastened to the rod bracket, which carries the rod that is afterward fastened to the sash. The manufacturer says that every small detail has been carefully looked after, even down to the margin of allowance providing for rust corruptions, which will make the arm free and active even after years of service.

ALBANY, N. Y.

At its last meeting the Albany Florists' Club discussed plans for the holding of a clambake late in August. The completion of the arrangements was entrusted by President F. A. Danker to a committee composed of Lewis Schaefer, Frederick Henkes and Patrick Hyde.

Frederick Goldring invited the club to meet at his place, Font Grove, Slingerlands, on the evening of July 6, and the invitation was accepted.

A letter was read from Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hyde, thanking the club for the gift of a Morris chair as a wedding present.

CHILLICOTHE, O.

This city was visited on Monday evening, June 5, by the most destructive hail storm in years and great damage was done to local greenhouses.

At the McKellar Greenhouses, of which Louis Elsass is proprietor, about 2,000 panes of single-strength glass in the older greenhouses were broken, though only 150 of the double-strength lights gave way. The loss was covered by insurance.

The Chillicothe Floral Co. was more fortunate, though the hail at their place was equally severe. About 250 panes were shattered, mostly 8 x 10 panes in the palm house, and no insurance was carried. The greenhouses of John Griesheimer, the market gardener, on South Hickory street, were also damaged, a large number of panes being smashed. No insurance was carried on his glass.

The Market.

Trade last week was quite satisfactory, as a number of large wedding decorations helped to liven matters a little.

The extremely hot weather is having a telling effect on the roses and carnations and they look more like August blooms than June. This is especially true of Brides and Maids, as Killarney, Beauties, My Maryland and Kaiserin are of much better quality.

Some good lilies and gladioli are to be had; also valley and orchids. The plant business has dropped quite a little since Decoration day, owing to the hot weather. In most cases the plant trade was satisfactory this year.

Various Notes.

John Rieman is on the sick list. Mr. Rieman is getting a little more than his share, as he was laid up in bed with pneumonia for eight weeks this spring. It is rheumatism this time.

The State Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting last week, with about twenty members present. The main topic was the annual picnic. President Gause appointed a committee composed of Sidney Smith, Alfred Marshall, Chas. Pahud and Fred Hukreide to take charge of this picnic, and it is expected to be the best ever.

Hartje & Elder bought 250 boxes of glass with the intention of adding to their range this summer, but they have decided to defer action till next year.

Most of the retailers started their early closing at noon last Sunday. This is to be in effect until September.

Albert Pittet left last week for a visit to Texas.

A. Wiegand & Sons started this week to tear down one of their greenhouses and rebuild it.

Columbia Conservatory is the new name for the greenhouses operated by Sidney Smith at Thirty-eighth street and Senate avenue. This is the place formerly owned by Baur & Smith. Mr. Smith has the best wishes of the craft in his new venture.

Roepke & Rieman have been cutting quantities of fine Easter lilies.

Frank Hasselman says his bedding business was fine this season. He increased his bedding stock this year and it cleaned up well. H. L. W.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Iowa Seed Co. is building another greenhouse at Thirty-first and Crocker streets.

We have withdrawn our dealings with John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, Ill., and they are no longer permitted to take orders for the Challenge roller bearing ventilating apparatus. Send all orders direct to us, Quaker City Machine Co., Richmond, Ind., or through A. Dietsch Co., Chicago, Ill.

Be it further known that we have filed suit against J. E. Jones, doing business as Advance Co., Richmond, Ind., on infringement on our Patent No. 815,914 on our 20th Century Arm on June 5th, 1911, to protect our rights, and anyone buying or using the arm made by said Advance Co. will do so at their own risk.

Our 20th Century Arm is new and distinct from any other arm used on ventilating apparatus, and is original with us, and we propose to protect our rights.

Respectfully yours,

QUAKER CITY MACHINE CO.,

RICHMOND, IND.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Pittsburg has been experiencing the kind of weather that burns things up, although roses are holding out pretty well. Saturday, June 10, was the hottest June day in thirty years.

The wholesale houses do about all their business in a couple of hours in the morning. The best stock is lilies and Beauties; everything else shows the effect of the heat.

Various Notes.

Benjamin Elliott is the latest florist to buy an automobile, so I guess the flower business in this city is not as bad as it might be, as nearly all the florists of any consequence are driving automobiles of their own.

P. S. Randolph has let a contract to the Lord & Burnham Co. for seven new plant houses, to be erected on his new place at Sandy Creek.

The Pittsburg Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, June 6, and notwithstanding the extreme heat had a good attendance. The subject of the evening was peonies, but not a large flower was in evidence. However, there was a fine display of shrubbery and herbaceous flowers, which were much enjoyed.

It is reported that outdoor roses are not as good as usual. Hoo-Hoo.

Wellesley Farms, Mass.—E. J. Shaylor & Son, the peony specialists, had the principal exhibit of peonies at the recent show of the Worcester County Horticultural Society, in Horticultural hall, Worcester.

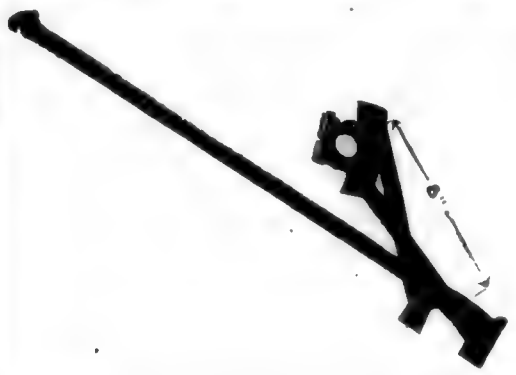
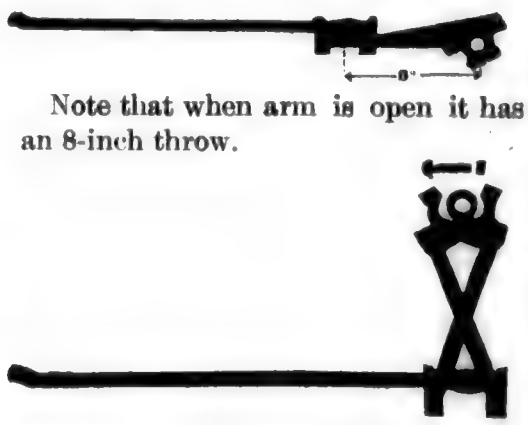
WE HAVE IT!



A NEW ARM, CALLED OUR

"Twistless"



HERE IT IS

Note that the distance from the center of the rod rivet to the center of the shafting pipe when the arm is at right angles is only 7½ inches.

Note that when arm is closed it has an 8-inch throw.

Note that when arm is open it has an 8-inch throw.

Note the simple construction.

¶One bolt securely fastens the arm to the shafting pipe. Easy to set up. Free from rust. We are fully protected by patents on this new arm. It has no equal.

Over 6000 Now In Use and every one giving far above perfect satisfaction. It is a new revelation in ventilating machinery. Used in connection with the celebrated Advance ventilating apparatus, it works wonderfully.

Zanesville, O.—C. L. Humphrey is doubling his present range here and is using a large Kroeschell boiler with the threaded tube piping system for heating.

Beloit, Wis.—John Rindfleisch is planning to tear down his old greenhouse and add two or three sections to the new building. He will thus greatly increase the space under glass and will also be enabled to heat the whole range with one boiler. He expects, also, to sell his present home and erect a residence north of the new greenhouses and near the office.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

SUMMER USES FOR SWEET PEAS.

In Church or Large Residence.

Sweet peas are abundant these summer days, and so we can plan unstinted window displays and can lavish them in our decorations, with the aim of producing deep masses of color and rainbow variations. What about a sweet pea decoration for a large residence or church? In such a case the individual beauty of the flowers is lost and failure will be the result unless striking effects are secured.

For a garden scene mow a row of sweet pea plants their full length, support and all. Outline a chancel rail or platform, packing damp moss along the lower stems. At the extreme ends, on the right and left, erect a tall pillar wrapped in fabric to match the color of the decoration. From the top of the poles hang clusters of sweet pea baskets, generously filled as to the edges and sides. Back of the pulpit platform or chancel, wainscot with the hedge of sweet pea vines and erect pillars, decorated with the clusters of baskets, on each side of the altar. Drape the altar with a blanket of peas. Along the wainscoting weave in thousands of extra cut peas to heighten the coloring. Don't do this work too early, thus allowing the flowers time to wilt.

Suspended Over the Chancel.

Another: Make scores of balls of sweet peas and hang them as you would Chinese lanterns over the chancel, low at the sides, high in the center, and lower again at the rear. Watch the lights and don't let the shadows spoil the pink cloud of balls, for you will find that pink is one of the best evening colors. If you wish to introduce green, shower the balls from their tops with fine strands of smilax. Group palms that have finely cut foliage, such as cocos or phœnix, around the chancel rail and elevate immense balls, with showers, on pillars at right and left, so that they will not obscure the view.

One more: Make a tapestry of heavy garlands of sweet peas. Suspend this from the ceiling over the platform or chancel. Intersperse electric lights. Bank the top of the rail with long, narrow pans of sweet peas. Make a screen of sweet peas on the rear wall, high enough to appear to join the lower margin of the tapestry, so that you can stand in the audience and see a solid bank from floor to ceiling.

These schemes can be adapted to the decoration of a large residence as well. A hall, back parlor or alcove can be decorated as the ceremony room in much the same way as the chancel.

In Window Displays.

Parts of the foregoing schemes may also be reproduced for window displays, with the addition of wild or fancy grasses. The common redtop grass can be combined tellingly with white, lavender, cream, salmon or red varieties.

The window may be occupied by a rustic summer house, with sweet peas growing (?) luxuriantly close against its outside walls, a great bowl of them on the window-sill, and a hatful left on the doorstep with the shears lying beside it. Add a few ferns, with moss-covered pots, in the foreground.

A casket cover of all sweet peas is within the reach of almost anyone at this season. Practically the only real expense is the work, and in the construction it is well to combine the casket panel and cover, so that the top may be composed of the flowers standing erect. Toward the edge set them in at an angle, gradually more inclined to fall, so that there may be no crevices. Fringe the wire edge so that the piece, complete, shall touch the floor.

A Well Displayed Advertisement.

Peoria, Ill.—Frank Jerabek has purchased the Kipler greenhouses, north of town.

ADVERTISING A RETAIL STORE.

Penn Educates the Bostonians.

It has been said that in Boston, city of erudition, the brides carry prayer-BOOKS instead of bouquets—but all this is to be changed. Penn is doing it, and the means employed is newspaper advertising. It is related that so successful has been the Penn advertising campaign that already one of Boston's daughters has made an appointment to carry a Penn shower bouquet at the head of a party which is to meet one of the Penn brothers before a certain altar late in June. Is it any wonder that, when Henry Penn says the June advertising campaign is producing "great results," William nods his head in perfect agreement? It is to be William's wedding.

The Penn brothers have been the leaders in retail flower store advertising in the east. They have kept continuously at it for the last two or three years and they are continually increasing their advertising. If any better evidence could be wanted that they find it is the right line for them to work on, that evidence is found in the fact that their present store at 43 Bromfield street, Boston, will no longer contain their business; the store next door is being added, thereby more than doubling their facilities.

The Strongest Wedding Ads.

Neither Boston nor any other city ever has seen so strong a campaign of wedding work advertising as the Penns are doing this month. From the beginning of their advertising they have featured their shower bouquet and it has so increased the sale for the article that this season's publicity is much stronger than ever before—stronger both from the point of view of space used and stronger with respect to the striking character of the advertisements, several of which are herewith reproduced in reduced space. The display on this page occupied a space two columns wide and half a column deep in the Boston American, where it had nearly 400,000 circulation. The other advertisements are reproduced from the Boston Post, where the daily circulation is close to 350,000, and the Sunday circulation practically 300,000 copies. Such circulations are not cheap, but they are effective. The single column advertisements were each a half column deep and the white on black display reproduced on page 9 was three columns wide and more than half a page deep. This advertisement may fairly be designated as the most strikink display ever published in the interest of the sale of wedding flowers.

To quote H. S. Rogers, the member of the Penn staff who looks after the advertising details, the results are "great." The campaign was planned to begin with June and run through the month, an advertisement appearing every other day.

Must Be Backed by Good Methods.

"Good advertising is a good thing," continued Mr. Rogers. "We have made a careful study of the results obtained and find that we get what we go after—sales. We are well satisfied that advertising has been a large factor in establishing our business and developing it to its present proportions, not forgetting that good advertising, unless backed up by a good store, good stock and good salesmanship, expends most of its power for naught.

"After we had been advertising occasionally in one of the leading Boston daily papers, we decided to start a series of ads that would bring our stock and our store conspicuously before the best classes in New England. We therefore selected the paper that had the largest circulation and contracted to take a good sized space daily for quite a period.

Concentrating the Effort.

"We didn't go into it blindly; we considered all the available papers, basing our choice on circulation among the kind of people we wanted to reach. You always can pick the best advertising medium by noting the amount of advertising carried. The paper that prints the most advertising calculated to interest the same people you are after will always be the best advertising medium for you. That large volume of advertising is a summing up of experience paid for by men who want to get the most their money will buy.

Right Copy a Big Factor.

"We never use the same ad twice. Doubtless any advertisement is better than none, but the right copy is one important part of securing results. Advertising may be effective and yet be dignified. Almost always, advertising, if written by the advertiser, will reflect the advertiser's personality, just as his store does. If prepared outside, care should be taken that the advertisement be in harmony with the character of the store. We are strong believers in the use of illustrations; every ad carries a cut and the name appears in the form of a trade-mark that also appears on boxes, tags and stationery.

Covering the Seasons.

"When we started our series of ads we laid out a plan of changes of copy to cover practically all features of the stock and services of a flower store. As the principal feature of our advertising we selected the Penn shower bouquet. The copy was written to exploit the flowers, the facilities and the service and we soon noticed a tremendous increase in this particular line of work. This year, encouraged by our previous success, we mapped out a more costly campaign, using larger spaces, but taking good care to see that the spaces were well filled—that is, that the copy was good.

Keeping Everlastingly At It.

"Not only has our business increased steadily and considerably since we began newspaper advertising, but we noticed an increase in the orders received from a distance. Letters are received daily from all parts of New England, many of them ordering the shipment or local Boston delivery of advertised articles and many asking prices on other articles. We have had a great deal of business from towns that could have only been reached by newspaper and some of the orders have been first-class wedding decorations.

"We believe advertising affords the best method there is of winning customers. We think our experience proves that the best results are to be had from newspapers, and from their regular use; we do not believe in spasmodic advertising—in that case each ad is like starting all over again, and the cumulative value of advertising is one of its most important benefits; as one well-known advertiser says: 'Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.'" checking up its canceled checks. There is record of one florist who did business without a bank account, paying out the currency he received and holding the checks, doubtless on the theory that the checks, requiring his endorsement before passing on, were less likely to be lost. But if a check is held by the payee, he takes all the risks with it; the courts repeatedly have ruled that if a check is not presented for payment within a reasonable time, any loss which may ensue falls not on the one who gave the check, but on the one who failed to cash it promptly. As to what constitutes a reasonable time for cashing a check, the courts have said that a man is using due diligence if he presents the check at the bank on which it is drawn, or deposits it in his own bank, on the day following that on which the check was received. And now the Supreme Court of New York state has ruled that where a check is thus deposited for collection, such further time is to be allowed as is necessary for the check to pass through the clearing house in the usual course of business. If the bank on which the check is drawn refuses to pay the check when presented within such reasonable time, the maker of the check still is bound for the debt, but if a greater time has elapsed, the maker of the check, if he can show that its nonpayment was due to no fault of his, will be able to fix the loss upon the one who held up the check.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Secretary's Bulletin.

At the mid-Lent meeting of the Society of American Florists the following appropriations were made for the year 1911:

Tariff work of Legislative Committee	$100.00
General work of Legislative Committee	100.00
Entomologist	50.00
Pathologist	50.00
Botanist	50.00
Annual badges	75.00
Clerical assistance to secretary at annual convention	50.00
Clerical assistance to secretary at adjourned meeting	25.00
Sports Committee	50.00
President's messenger and assistants	25.00

Or so much of such amounts as might be needed.

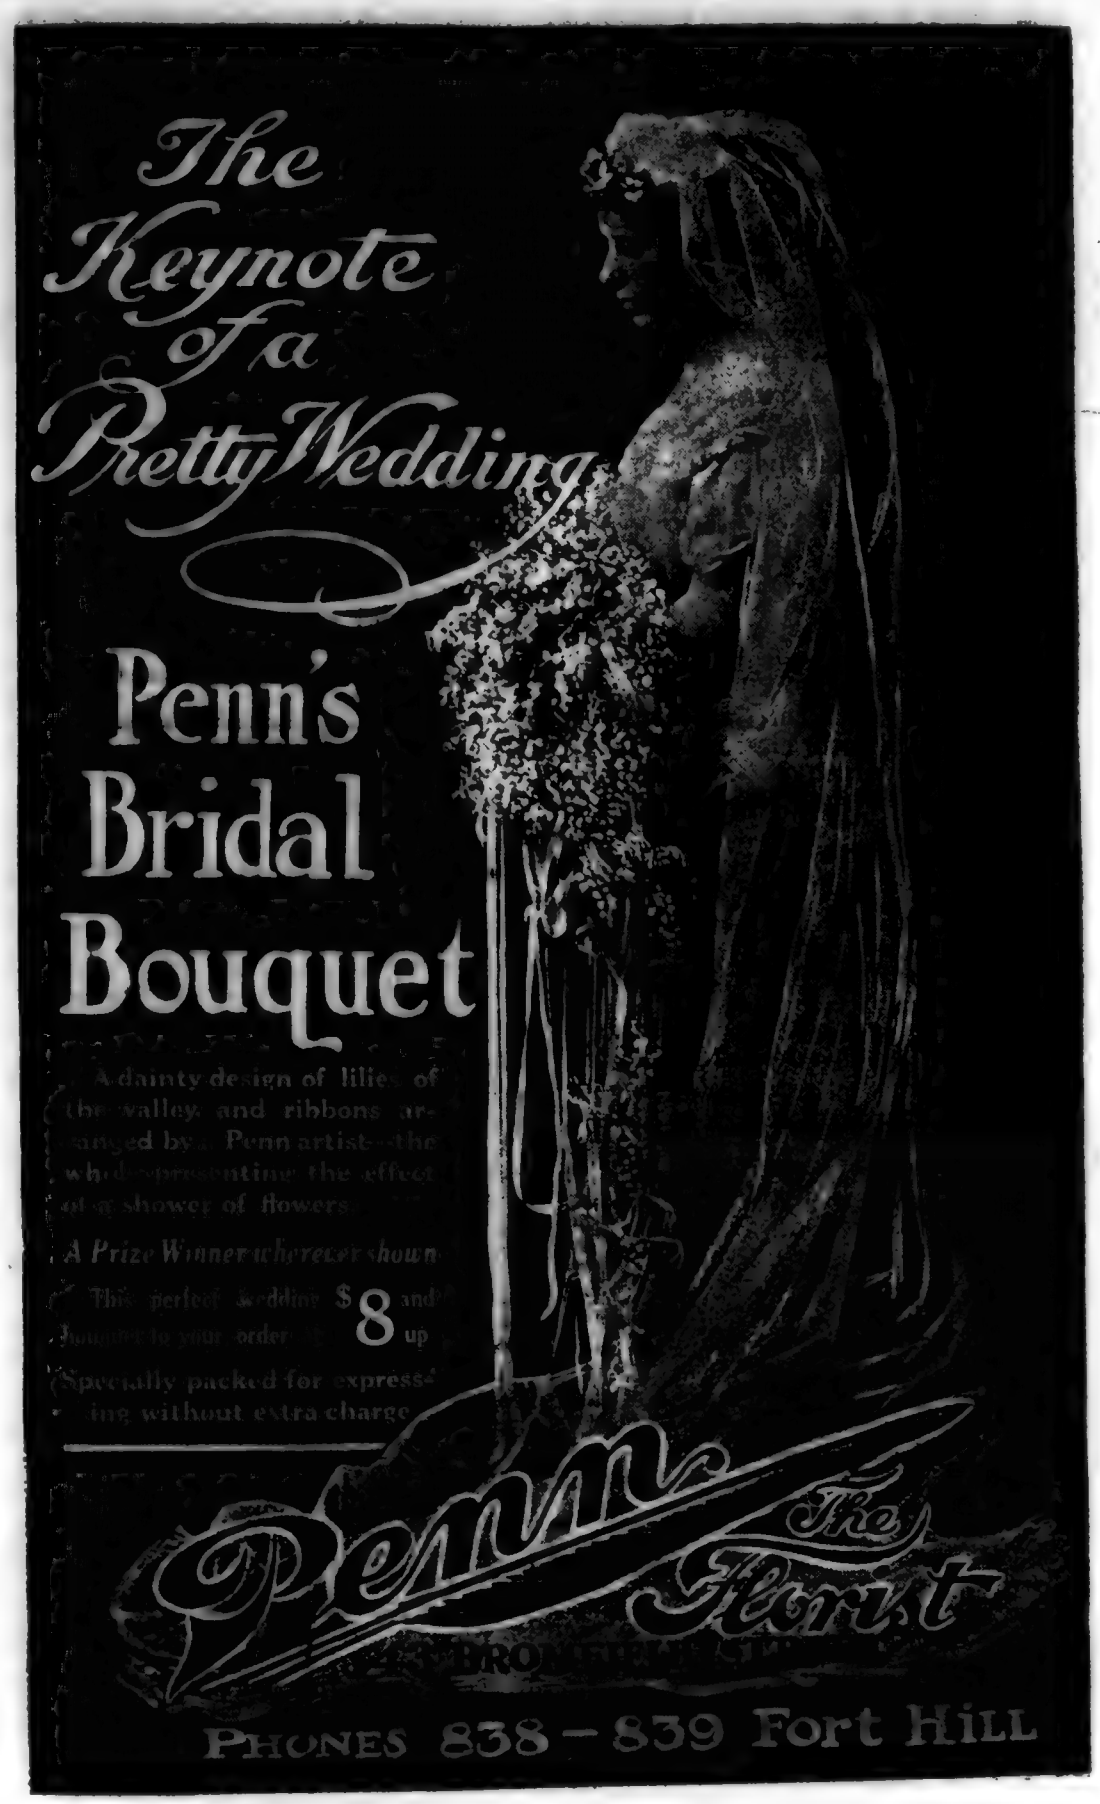
Attention should be called to the work of the entomologist, pathologist and botanist. Prof. H. H. Whetzel, of Cornell University, is the pathologist and has taken up the study of certain plant diseases, upon which he will report at the August meeting. Dr. S. A. Forbes, the entomologist, being unable this past year to give the work the proper amount of time, placed it in the hands of J. J. Davis, who presented the report given on pages 34 to 42 of the twenty-sixth annual report. This is well worth studying. The botanist, Prof. J. F. Cowell, is always ready to help the members on any botanical question. I call your attention to the work of these officers, as it is well worth your support.

At the same meeting, on motion by Mr. Pierson, seconded by Mr. Kasting, the adoption of the following amendment was recommended to the society:

To amend Article IV, Section 2, to read as follows:

Sec. 2. Fees and Assessments.—Any eligible person may become a member of the society on the payment of $5, and such payment shall cover the annual dues for the balance of the calendar year. The annual dues shall be $3 per year, payable in advance on the first day of January. Any person may become a life member on payment of $50 and be exempt from all further assessments.

The object of this amendment is to make it possible for any person to become a life member of the S. A. F. on the payment of $50, irrespective of the fact that he is already a member or not.



A rate of a fare and three-fifths on the certificate plan has been granted by the Trunk Line Association. The New England, the Central and the Eastern Canadian are still to be heard from. Further information regarding rates will appear later.

Department of Registration.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the roses, Ruby Queen, May Queen, Pearl Queen and Royal Cluster, by the Conard & Jones Co., of West Grove, Pa., becomes complete.

ANTS ON LAWNS.

Can you tell us what to do for ants on lawns and around flower beds?

E. & B.

Mix up powdered borax four parts, fine sugar one part. Let it stand for ten days before using it. Then lay it in little heaps about the places infested by the ants. Or take a little potassium cyanide, break it up fine and mix with twenty times the amount of sugar. Allow it to stand for twenty-four hours before using. Remember, however, that cyanide of potassium is a deadly poison and so must be handled carefully. It should also be placed in holes, so that no children, animals or birds can get it.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Sowing Late Annuals.

While asters and sweet peas are the two annuals par excellence for the average country florist, there are quite a number of others which are useful for cutting, a number of them also being excellent in design work. Probably there are some vacant plots of ground where a row or two of these annuals can be sown. Among suitable varieties to sow are: Poppies, of which the Shirley is the most beautiful; larkspurs in several colors; lupines, clarkias, Gypsophila elegans, candytuft, alyssum, mignonette and schizanthus.

Cosmos.

While cosmos will flower well before sharp frost arrives in the warmer states, in more northerly sections only the early flowering types are of much use. That beautiful variety, Lady Lenox, in some states does not flower at all before being cut down. As these cosmos flowers are large and of a lovely pink color, it pays to handle a batch in pots. It is not advisable to dig up plants six or seven feet high in the fall, as is sometimes done, but take cuttings or sow seeds now. Pinch once or twice to keep bushy. Grow in pots plunged outdoors until frost threatens. Then place in a cool house and you will get a fine lot of bloom, which many buyers will prefer to chrysanthemums. These indoor-grown flowers are also of superior size and quality to outdoor ones and bring a good price in the market.

Poinsettias.

This is the time to propagate a goodly batch of poinsettias. Such as are rooted now will produce bracts a foot or more in diameter and be suitable either for benching or making up later into large pans. A common error is to leave cuttings too long in the sand after being rooted. When this is done the roots, which are brittle, are sure to be broken more or less. Pot off just as soon as roots have formed. Keep close and moist for a few days. Then air more freely. If convenient and suitable greenhouse bench space is not at disposal, spread a coating of coal ashes in a coldframe and grow them there. Do not leave cuttings too long on the plants. Those rubbed off with a heel, which are short and stocky, root the best. If you have a good many cuttings to make, dip them in cold water to prevent wilting. Do the same with any other cuttings which are liable to be lying around for an hour or more. A cutting once badly wilted loses much of its vitality.

Winter Geraniums.

Late rooted geranium cuttings intended for winter flowering should be fit to go into 3½-inch or 4-inch pots, and stronger ones into 5-inch pots. Avoid using a rich soil, as it only causes the plants to make a soft, rank growth. What is needed is short, firm and stocky shoots. Any manure used should be thoroughly decayed and a dash of fine bone will prove beneficial. Pot firmly and stand on a bench where they can get the full sun. If bench space is at a premium, coldframes will answer just as well. The plants are better if not exposed to the weather. Keep the strong shoots pinched back until September, after which time they may be allowed to grow as they will.

Gloxinias.

Gloxinias are among the most beautiful and useful of summer-flowering plants and in rooms or on well shaded and protected piazzas last quite a long time in flower. They must have no direct sun, or the foliage will soon be scorched, but at the same time a too dense shade will make the flower spikes weak, so that the flowers will not stand up erect. It is also unnecessary to grow them in a high temperature. At this season any ordinary greenhouse will be suitable. Keep water off the foliage as much as possible and elevate the best plants on inverted pots. Spring-sown seedlings will flower well in 5-inch pots. Give them a light but moderately rich soil, and do not pot firmly. In order to get good tubers for another season it is an excellent plan to plant out a number of seedlings in coldframes. Make the soil light but rich, adding a good proportion of sand. Keep some air on all the time and shade the sashes. Planted out in this way the plants will make a really surprising growth and produce foliage and flowers much finer than can be had in pots. They will also make tubers double the size of the pot-grown ones. These plants can be gradually rested, lifted and stored in flats in time to utilize the frames for winter crops.

Rambler Roses.

Any rambler roses which are being grown in pots should now be plunged in the open air, as the liability to mildew is much greater. If they are kept under glass, the shoots they are producing should not be allowed to ramble over the ground, but should be tied up to stout stakes. Treated thus the wood will become much better ripened and more suitable for early forcing. In the case of field-grown stock it will be noticed that the pink ramblers make a large number of shoots, far more than can be left on when grown in pots. It is a good plan to cut out all the weaker ones, leaving four to six to each plant.

Crotons.

At this season, when the propagating bench is little used, is a good time to increase the stock of crotons. Given heat and moisture, with the necessary shade, every cutting should root. Plants which have grown somewhat tall and leggy can also be readily propagated by means of ringing, in the same way as the common rubber plant, Ficus elastica, is increased. All that is necessary is to partly cut through the stem below a leaf joint, push a toothpick in to keep the cut open, then tie a bunch of sphagnum or other moss around the cut and keep it constantly moist. In a warm, damp atmosphere the moss will soon be a mass of roots, when the tops can be cut off and potted. In this way excellent plants can be had in a short time, with foliage right down to the pots.

Crotons and all other foliage plants will soon become full of mealy bug and scale if the hose is not freely used among them at this season. Plenty of water properly directed from the hose will, however, take care of any of these pests. A spray nozzle is necessary, one which can be used below the leaves, and this being at command there is no excuse for mealy bug being found on them.

Seasonable Repairs.

Throwing out carnations and other crops will now occupy considerable time. Now, while the houses are empty, is the time to attend to any necessary painting and glazing; then repairing or rebuilding benches should be attended to without delay. Any changes in the piping and heating are best made during July and August, as where roses are grown it pays to use a little steam up until the end of June, and the nights by the middle of September get so cool that a little artificial heat on damp days and cold nights is necessary to keep mildew in check. Has the annual coal supply been contracted for? Prices are lower than they will be in the fall and dealers are glad to fill up the cellars in the hot months, when teaming would otherwise be at its low ebb.

VARIETIES TO GROW.

We are just finishing a new house for roses and should like to know what varieties eastern growers are planting most extensively this season—our location is Montana. Our own idea is: Red, Beauty, Rhea Reid, Richmond; pink, Killarney, My Maryland; white, White Killarney; yellow, Mrs. Aaron Ward. Maryland appears to be at least as good a rose as Killarney, at least as an individual flower, but perhaps it has some drawback, as apparently Killarney is more extensively grown. But the important question, to our mind, is: Will White Killarney stand alone as a white rose and enable us to discard Kaiserin and Bride? Just give us a line on the eastern point of view and tell us of any roses we have not mentioned that you think are worth a trial. K. G.

It does not appear from the inquiry whether or not the subscriber intends to grow in one house all the roses he mentions, but it is presumed the new house is to contain only a part of the stock. The number of growers of American Beauty is increasing slowly, if at all, for few small growers have been able to find any profit in it. Rhea Reid is a variety that has not had a great success as a forcing rose and is little seen. Richmond is the standby in red. Killarney is far and away the leader in pink, none of the several other varieties being comparable with it in the hands of the average grower. When My Maryland first came out it was thought to have a great future and, indeed, some growers still swear by it; but more swear at it because of its stubbornness in winter. It is fine in autumn and again in spring, but no great number of growers have mastered the secret of keeping it going through the winter. White Killarney stands even more alone among the whites than Killarney does among the pinks. It has two faults; it is not pure white in hot weather and it has so few petals that it pops open. But White Killarney has knocked out Bride, just as Killarney has Maid, and some growers are also dropping Kaiserin as no longer needed, though to many minds it is the better rose in the warm months.

Mrs. Aaron Ward is a rose with which one or two growers have done well, and it will be given a trial this season by a large number of others. Of the new varieties Double Pink Killarney has been of most interest to the growers for wholesale markets, as the increase in petalage promises to go a long way toward correcting the chief fault of Killarney; it should ship and keep better. Those who received the early deliveries on this variety already are cutting blooms on good stems and feel that their judgment is confirmed. Melody is another that has been widely distributed this season. It is a free blooming yellow and hopes are high that when it becomes known to the public it will result in an active and steady demand for yellow roses. Lady Hillingdon is another new yellow, the demand for which exceeded the resources of the disseminator. Prince de Bulgarie is a rose of many aliases, not quite so new as the others. Shipped to the New York market as Mrs. Taft, it has realized splendid prices. The flowers are a beautiful shell pink. It will be tried out by many large growers this season. Rose Queen, disseminated this spring, is a lively clear pink, over which some growers became quite enthusiastic; in fact, the originator could not supply the demand for stock. And there are several other new ones, each of which has its friends, but to try them all a man would need to be just finishing more than one new house.

ARDISIAS.

Will you give me some information as to the general culture of ardisias? R. E. P.

Seeds of Ardisia crenulata, the variety used commercially, are best sown in early spring in a warm house, potted off singly when a couple of inches in height, grown along rather close and frequently damped overhead and successively shifted from 2½-inch to 4-inch pots and later to 6-inch pots. A winter minimum of 50 degrees is sufficient for them; in fact, 45 degrees will suffice. The plants will flower and fruit to some extent the first season, but it will take a year longer to get nice, salable plants well fruited. Propagation of leggy plants can be effected by mossing and ringing them in the same way crotons, dracænas and ficus often are rooted. Frequent syringing is necessary to keep brown scale in subjection. They do well in summer plunged in ashes outdoors. C. W.

MUMS BUDDING TOO EARLY.

We are growing chrysanthemums in southern Louisiana, and we noticed in the first week of June that some of the plants were already budding. Kindly let me know why they are budding so early. Should the buds be taken off as soon as they show? M. J. G. & B.

It is by no means a rare thing for mums to bud early in the summer. There are several reasons for this. For instance, if the plants are neglected and the wood gets hard, they will frequently go into bud. Some varieties are much more liable to do this than others. Golden Glow is especially troublesome in this respect. The only thing to do is to keep all the buds closely pinched off and eventually a shoot will be produced that will grow and make a reasonable stem. Chas. H. Totty.

GOLDEN GLOW AND ROBINSON.

Please give me some information about Golden Glow and Robinson mums, with reference to disbudding and other particulars. I am located in southwestern Connecticut and intend to grow four stems on each plant. H. R.

If Golden Glow and Robinson mums are grown with four stems to each plant, the quality, of course, will not be particularly high, though I presume H. R. knows his market and knows what flowers he can sell to best advantage. On Golden Glow the buds can be secured any time after July 20. This will produce flowers about the end of September, which is as early as there is any call for mums. August 20 is as early as it is safe to take buds on Mrs. Robinson, as earlier buds throw a flower that is decidedly deficient in petalage. Chas. H. Totty.

MUMS IN OLD SOIL.

I should like to know if chrysanthemums will do well in a solid bed, using the same soil carnations have been grown in. Can I get a crop if I plant September 1, under the above conditions? The location is southern Pennsylvania. D. H. Z.

The chrysanthemums will grow in a solid carnation bed with more or less success in the old soil, if properly handled, although D. H. Z. would probably find it would be a profitable investment to replace the old soil with new. Most authorities nowadays agree that chrysanthemums do much better on a raised bench than on a solid bed, although for the average grower it is not, perhaps, of such great importance.

September 1 is pretty late to be planting mums unless at that time it is nice stock in 3-inch or 4-inch pots and runs just to late varieties. Many growers are taking their buds at that time, on everything except such kinds as White and Yellow Chadwick, Nagoya and Bonnaffon planted to come in between Thanksgiving and Christmas. It is impossible to plant chrysanthemums September 1 and cut flowers in October or November. C. H. T.

PILCHER'S PLACE.

Kirkwood is well known as one of the growing centers for the St. Louis cut flower market. There has been a large increase in the glass at Kirkwood this season, several new establishments having been built. One of these was put up by W. J. Pilcher and is shown in the accompanying illustration. It consists of three houses 26x100, erected with material supplied by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago. This is the home of the new violet, Mazzura, for which those in the trade in St. Louis think a wide distribution is in prospect.

PRUNING THE SHRUBBERY

WHEN, WHY AND HOW.

Amateur Performances in Pruning.

I am not speaking now of the indiscriminate butchering of plants, but of the things that go to make up the intelligent man's methods. Any one can chop down a tree, or "trim" a bush, but few can handle a knife, shears or saw with proper intelligence.

I do not mean that Tom, John or Harry can not do these things as they should be done. I refer to the great body of men who claim to be gardeners. There is a good old gentleman living in my town who is, I believe, a fair representative of the sort of "gardener" one finds in such towns. He does all kinds of work, spades the garden in the spring, sows the seed, cares for the plants during their season of growth, harvests the crop, and—last but by no means least—he "prunes the bushes." Shall I tell you how he does some of the pruning? He cut all the canes from the raspberry bushes last fall. Last year he "pruned"—so he said—the Van Houttei spiræas when dormant. Early in the fall of 1908 he "pruned" a block of Rosa multiflora by shearing all the plants straight across the tops. I mention these instances to illustrate the fact that the florist and the gardener would do well to educate the man who does all kinds of gardening operations.

Why We Prune.

I wonder whether any of you would be interested in short notes on pruning. Here are a few for those who have the time and inclination to read.

As I said before, do you know why we prune? The principal reason is, to reduce the number of leaves and branches. It follows, then, that the pruner should be well informed regarding the general habits of plants. The question naturally arises, "Why should leaves and branches be removed?" There are several reasons, such as insuring strong growths, increasing fruitfulness, securing symmetry of form, admitting light and air to the center of the plant, invigorating unhealthy plants, securing a high or a low head. These are the principal reasons. From these you can readily understand how necessary it is to know the plants.

When to Prune.

Do you all know just when to prune? Probably the best time for general pruning operations is in the fall, after the wood is thoroughly ripened or the leaves have fallen. Some individual plants, however, must receive special study and attention, because the time of pruning varies with their habit or mode of flowering. Let us divide the discussion into two sections, with reference, first, to plants flowering on the old wood or previous year's growth, and, secondly, to plants flowering on the current year's growth. I cannot too strongly emphasize the fact that one must have knowledge of the habits of the plants. He must know whether the flowers appear on the old or dormant wood, or whether they appear on the new growths made during the current or present season. He should know also whether the buds are borne on the end (terminal) or side (lateral) shoots.

Let us illustrate the effect of pruning a plant in late winter or early spring that flowers on old wood. A good subject is Spiræa Van Houttei. Suppose we cut it back twelve inches at the time mentioned; as a result we would not get a flower. Why? Because we have cut off all the flower buds. The proper time for pruning the Van Houttei spiræa is after the plant has flowered. Take another example. Suppose we prune Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora in winter and see what the result would be. No flower buds are destroyed. Why? Because those buds are produced on the new wood, or the wood that is formed the current year. There are many plants in which this distinction must be made in order to prune intelligently. Plants which flower during the fall or late summer are pruned during the fall, winter or early spring, because the flower buds are formed on the new growths. Therefore it is desirable to secure as many new shoots as possible. Many roses are pruned during the fall and winter—such, for instance, as Rosa rugosa.

Importance of Pruning.

Now, I do not intend to give you an extensive treatise on the art of pruning. I have simply mentioned the foregoing facts to give you an inkling of the importance of the practice. Lindley says, in his "Theory of Horticulture": "If well directed, pruning is one of the most useful, and, if ill directed, it is among the most mischievous operations that can take place upon a plant." Thomas Meehan, formerly one of our most prominent American scientific gardeners, in an early work says that one must use as much care when pruning the larger limbs of trees and shrubs as a surgeon would when operating on a patient. Bailey says, in "The Pruning Book": "Of all the operations connected with the growing of trees and shrubs, pruning and training bring the person into closest contact and sympathy with the plant.'' Bailey also says: ''It is impossible to instruct any person in pruning by merely showing him how to do the work on a given plant, for the very next plant may present a new set of problems.'' I quote these eminent plantsmen so you may know their opinion. I really believe that if they think pruning is of so much importance, we surely ought to give the subject our most careful consideration. Then our own experience would teach us that it is an operation which is not to be underestimated in its relation to a plant's future growth.

Books on the Subject.

I am sure that some of my readers are interested in the literature on pruning, and for their benefit I am going to give a list of a few good things. Practically the only American work on the subject at present is ''The Pruning Book,'' by L. H. Bailey. It is a monograph on pruning as adapted to our conditions. It costs $1.50, and may be secured from the Florists' Publishing Co. Probably the best book on tree pruning is a small work by A. Des Cars, translated from the French by Charles S. Sargent. In it are given practical methods for carrying on the work. The price is 90 cents. Doubtless the same company could secure a copy of it for you, and also of the other books that I shall mention. An interesting handbook on the subject is a recent English publication entitled ''The Handy Book on Pruning, Grafting and Budding,'' by James Udale. The price is 60 cents. Complete instructions for pruning roses are found in ''Roses, and How to Grow Them,'' a manual for growing roses in the garden and under glass. The price is $1.10. For those who are especially interested in the care of hedges I would recommend a work by Powell, entitled ''Hedges, Windbreaks, etc.,'' of which the price is 50 cents.

Books on the Habits of Plants.

As the success or failure of pruning depends on the knowledge one has of the habits of plants, it may be desirable to give a short list of those books containing such information. ''Shrubs of Northwestern America,'' by C. S. Newhall, contains much information of a botanical nature, but presented in a popular style. The price is $1.75. Two books by Harriet L. Keeler are well worth while. The titles are, ''Our Northern Shrubs and How to Identify Them,'' and ''Our Native Trees.'' The price of each is $2. ''Practical Forestry,'' by John Gifford, contains clear information on the care of forests, which includes pruning. The books I have mentioned are only a part of the list which might be prepared. Before leaving the subject of books, I want to say that in these days of hustle it is only possible to keep up with the times by consulting the best literature. Moral: Read and grow in knowledge.

Before bringing this to a close, I am going to ask those of you who have not given any of these questions serious thought, to get busy and do so. If you happen to have an appreciative employee, make him a present of one of the books on pruning. It will do him good —and you, too. Don't you believe it?

HAIL AT BALTIMORE.

The Baltimore district was visited, June 12, by the heaviest hail ever seen there, and gloom was general at the meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club that night, for the storm had broken nearly every pane of glass in half a dozen fine establishments, resulting in a loss of thousands of dollars. Practically every greenhouse in Govanstown, Mount Washington and Waverly suffered from the hail. An energetic glass man was on hand at the meeting and he obtained orders for several thousand dollars' worth of business before leaving the hall, all of the florists being eager to order repairs and get promises of promptness in execution.

F. C. Bauer, one of the members of the club, left for New York a few hours before the storm, intending to sail for Europe next day. A telephone message from his place in Govanstown to the manager of the Baltimore Florists' Exchange was to the effect that every pane of glass in his houses had been smashed by the hail. Another case reported was that of Isaac H. Moss, of Govanstown, whose two ranges, although a mile apart, were bereft of nearly every pane by the storm.

James Hamilton, a rose grower, while at the meeting, heard from his place at Mount Washington to the effect that nearly all of his glass had been smashed. Another loss reported over the telephone to the loser was that of M. Thau, of Govanstown, whose loss amounted, he was informed, to more than $700.

There were many other losses, and of course the damage is not alone to the houses, but includes a great deal of stock badly cut up. Many of the growers were not insured.

LOUISVILLE WANTS S. A. F.

Fifty florists from Louisville and New Albany met June 16 at a dinner at the Louisville hotel, as guests of the Louisville Convention and Publicity League, for the purpose of arranging plans to secure for Louisville the 1912 convention of the S. A. F.. It was decided to send a delegation to the meeting of the organization in Baltimore in August and urge the acceptance of an invitation to come to Kentucky next year.

Robert W. Brown, president of the Louisville Convention and Publicity League, presided as host, and there was much enthusiasm. Most of those who attended were members of the Kentucky Society of Florists, and those who were not members promised to join in order to assist in the work of landing the national convention.

WHO OWNS THE AIR?

The action of Peirce Bros., of Waltham, who asked the courts for an injunction to prohibit airships, exhibiting in that vicinity, flying over their greenhouses, has aroused a great deal of comment and it appears they stood on rights anciently recognized but never before asserted in just this connection, either by a florist or against an aviator. In the old Roman law it was held that the owner of land had dominion over it ''from the center of the earth up to the sky.'' Some modern mining laws seem in contravention of this, but it is the principle still applied in matters relating to the use of the space above the ground level up to ordinary heights. It is well recognized in law that a man is entitled to regulate the use of the space above his property; it cannot without permission be used by others who may have rights in property adjoining—you cannot build on your lot line and let your eaves extend over. Without doubt the florist may regulate the use others can make of the space above the greenhouses he owns, probably ''up to the sky''; he may put up a ''No thoroughfare'' sign as high as he please. But is nice stock in 3-inch or 4-inch pots and runs just to late varieties. Many growers are taking their buds at that time, on everything except such kinds as White and Yellow Chadwick, Nagoya and Bonnaffon planted to come in between Thanksgiving and Christmas. It is impossible to plant chrysanthemums September 1 and cut flowers in October or November. C. H. T.

PILCHER'S PLACE.

Kirkwood is well known as one of the growing centers for the St. Louis cut flower market. There has been a large increase in the glass at Kirkwood this season, several new establishments having been built. One of these was put up by W. J. Pilcher and is shown in the accompanying illustration. It consists of three houses 26x100, erected with material supplied by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago. This is the home of the new violet, Mazzura, for which those in the trade in St. Louis think a wide distribution is in prospect.

PRUNING THE SHRUBBERY

WHEN, WHY AND HOW.

Amateur Performances in Pruning.

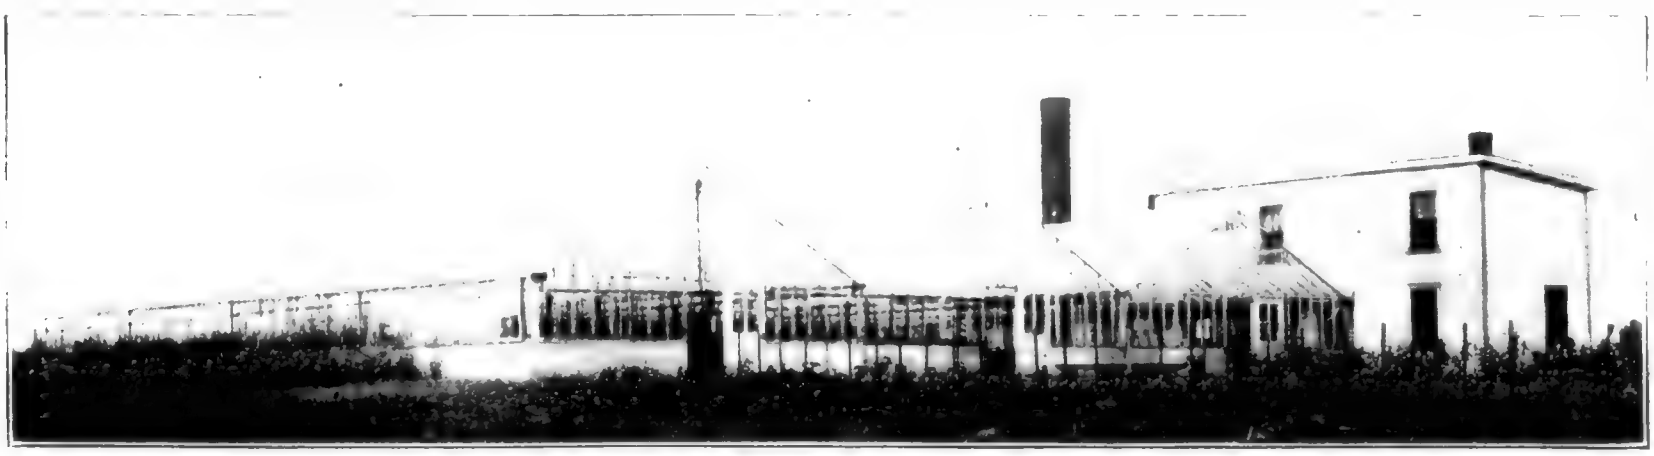
I am not speaking now of the indiscriminate butchering of plants, but of the things that go to make up the intelligent man's methods. Any one can chop down a tree, or "trim" a bush, but few can handle a knife, shears or saw with proper intelligence.

I do not mean that Tom, John or Harry can not do these things as they should be done. I refer to the great body of men who claim to be gardeners. There is a good old gentleman living in my town who is, I believe, a fair representative of the sort of "gardener" one finds in such towns. He does all kinds of work, spades the garden in the spring, sows the seed, cares for the plants during their season of growth, harvests the crop, and—last but by no means least—he "prunes the bushes." Shall I tell you how he does some of the pruning? He cut all the canes from the raspberry bushes last fall. Last year he "pruned"—so he said—the Van Houttei spiræas when dormant. Early in the fall of 1908 he "pruned" a block of Rosa multiflora by shearing all the plants straight across the tops. I mention these instances to illustrate the fact that the florist and the gardener would do well to educate the man who does all kinds of gardening operations.

Why We Prune.

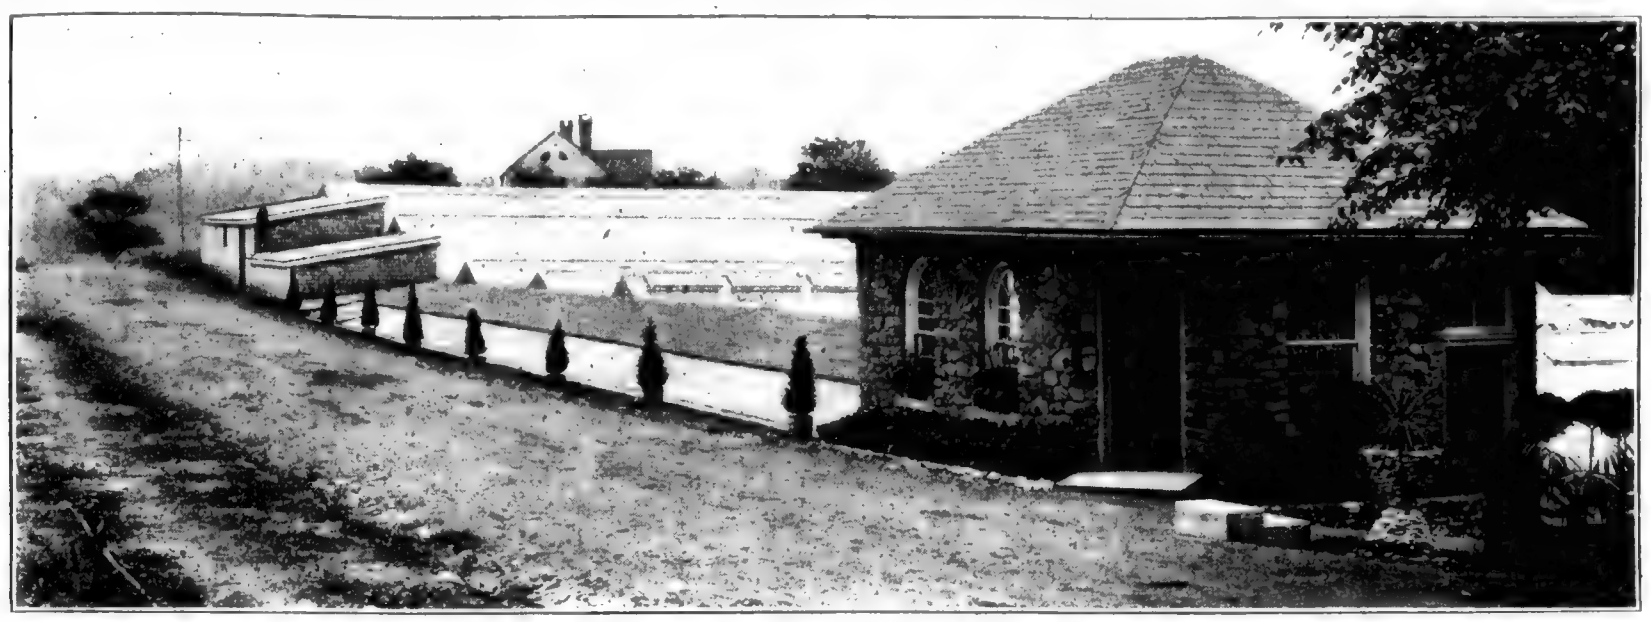
I wonder whether any of you would be interested in short notes on pruning. Here are a few for those who have the time and inclination to read.

As I said before, do you know why we prune? The principal reason is, to reduce the number of leaves and branches. It follows, then, that the pruner should be well informed regarding the general habits of plants. The question naturally arises, "Why should leaves and branches be removed?" There are several reasons, such as insuring strong growths, increasing fruitfulness, securing symmetry of form, admitting light and air to the center of the plant, invigorating unhealthy plants, securing a high or a low head. These are the principal reasons. From these you can readily understand how necessary it is to know the plants.



When to Prune.

Do you all know just when to prune? Probably the best time for general pruning operations is in the fall, after the wood is thoroughly ripened or the leaves have fallen. Some individual plants, however, must receive special study and attention, because the time of pruning varies with their habit or mode of flowering. Let us divide the discussion into two sections, with reference, first, to plants flowering on the old wood or previous year's growth, and, secondly, to plants flowering on the current year's growth. I cannot too strongly emphasize the fact that one must have knowledge of the habits of the plants. He must know whether the flowers appear on the old or dormant wood, or whether they appear on the new growths made during the current or present season. He should know also whether the buds are borne on the end (terminal) or side (lateral) shoots.



Let us illustrate the effect of pruning a plant in late winter or early spring that flowers on old wood. A good subject is Spiræa Van Houttei. Suppose we cut it back twelve inches at the time mentioned; as a result we would not get a flower. Why? Because we have cut off all the flower buds. The proper time for pruning the Van Houttei spiræa is after the plant has flowered. Take another example. Suppose we prune Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora in winter and see what the result would be. No flower buds are destroyed. Why? Because those buds are produced on the new wood, or the wood that is formed the current year. There are many plants in which this distinction must be made in order to prune intelligently. Plants which flower during the fall or late summer are pruned during the fall, winter or early spring, because the flower buds are formed on the new growths. Therefore it is desirable to secure as many new shoots as possible. Many roses are pruned during the fall and winter—such, for instance, as Rosa rugosa.

Importance of Pruning.

Now, I do not intend to give you an extensive treatise on the art of pruning. I have simply mentioned the foregoing facts to give you an inkling of the importance of the practice. Lindley says, in his "Theory of Horticulture": "If well directed, pruning is one of the most useful, and, if ill directed, it is among the most mischievous operations that can take place upon a plant." Thomas Meehan, formerly one of our most prominent American scientific gardeners, in an early work says that one must use as much care when pruning the larger limbs of trees and shrubs as a surgeon would when operating on a patient. Bailey says, in "The Pruning Book": "Of all the operations connected with the growing of trees and shrubs, pruning and training bring the person into closest contact and sympathy with the plant.'' Bailey also says: ''It is impossible to instruct any person in pruning by merely showing him how to do the work on a given plant, for the very next plant may present a new set of problems.'' I quote these eminent plantsmen so you may know their opinion. I really believe that if they think pruning is of so much importance, we surely ought to give the subject our most careful consideration. Then our own experience would teach us that it is an operation which is not to be underestimated in its relation to a plant's future growth.

Books on the Subject.

I am sure that some of my readers are interested in the literature on pruning, and for their benefit I am going to give a list of a few good things. Practically the only American work on the subject at present is ''The Pruning Book,'' by L. H. Bailey. It is a monograph on pruning as adapted to our conditions. It costs $1.50, and may be secured from the Florists' Publishing Co. Probably the best book on tree pruning is a small work by A. Des Cars, translated from the French by Charles S. Sargent. In it are given practical methods for carrying on the work. The price is 90 cents. Doubtless the same company could secure a copy of it for you, and also of the other books that I shall mention. An interesting handbook on the subject is a recent English publication entitled ''The Handy Book on Pruning, Grafting and Budding,'' by James Udale. The price is 60 cents. Complete instructions for pruning roses are found in ''Roses, and How to Grow Them,'' a manual for growing roses in the garden and under glass. The price is $1.10. For those who are especially interested in the care of hedges I would recommend a work by Powell, entitled ''Hedges, Windbreaks, etc.,'' of which the price is 50 cents.

Books on the Habits of Plants.

As the success or failure of pruning depends on the knowledge one has of the habits of plants, it may be desirable to give a short list of those books containing such information. ''Shrubs of Northwestern America,'' by C. S. Newhall, contains much information of a botanical nature, but presented in a popular style. The price is $1.75. Two books by Harriet L. Keeler are well worth while. The titles are, ''Our Northern Shrubs and How to Identify Them,'' and ''Our Native Trees.'' The price of each is $2. ''Practical Forestry,'' by John Gifford, contains clear information on the care of forests, which includes pruning. The books I have mentioned are only a part of the list which might be prepared. Before leaving the subject of books, I want to say that in these days of hustle it is only possible to keep up with the times by consulting the best literature. Moral: Read and grow in knowledge.

HAIL AT BALTIMORE.

The Baltimore district was visited, June 12, by the heaviest hail ever seen there, and gloom was general at the meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club that night, for the storm had broken nearly every pane of glass in half a dozen fine establishments, resulting in a loss of thousands of dollars. Practically every greenhouse in Govanstown, Mount Washington and Waverly suffered from the hail. An energetic glass man was on hand at the meeting and he obtained orders for several thousand dollars' worth of business before leaving the hall, all of the florists being eager to order repairs and get promises of promptness in execution.

F. C. Bauer, one of the members of the club, left for New York a few hours before the storm, intending to sail for Europe next day. A telephone message from his place in Govanstown to the manager of the Baltimore Florists' Exchange was to the effect that every pane of glass in his houses had been smashed by the hail. Another case reported was that of Isaac H. Moss, of Govanstown, whose two ranges, although a mile apart, were bereft of nearly every pane by the storm.

James Hamilton, a rose grower, while at the meeting, heard from his place at Mount Washington to the effect that nearly all of his glass had been smashed. Another loss reported over the telephone to the loser was that of M. Thau, of Govanstown, whose loss amounted, he was informed, to more than $700.

By the time airships become one of the recognized risks of the greenhouse business there will be plenty of regulations for the protection of all concerned.

Freesia Purity as Grown by George J. Streator, Santa Cruz, Cal.

FREESIA PURITY.

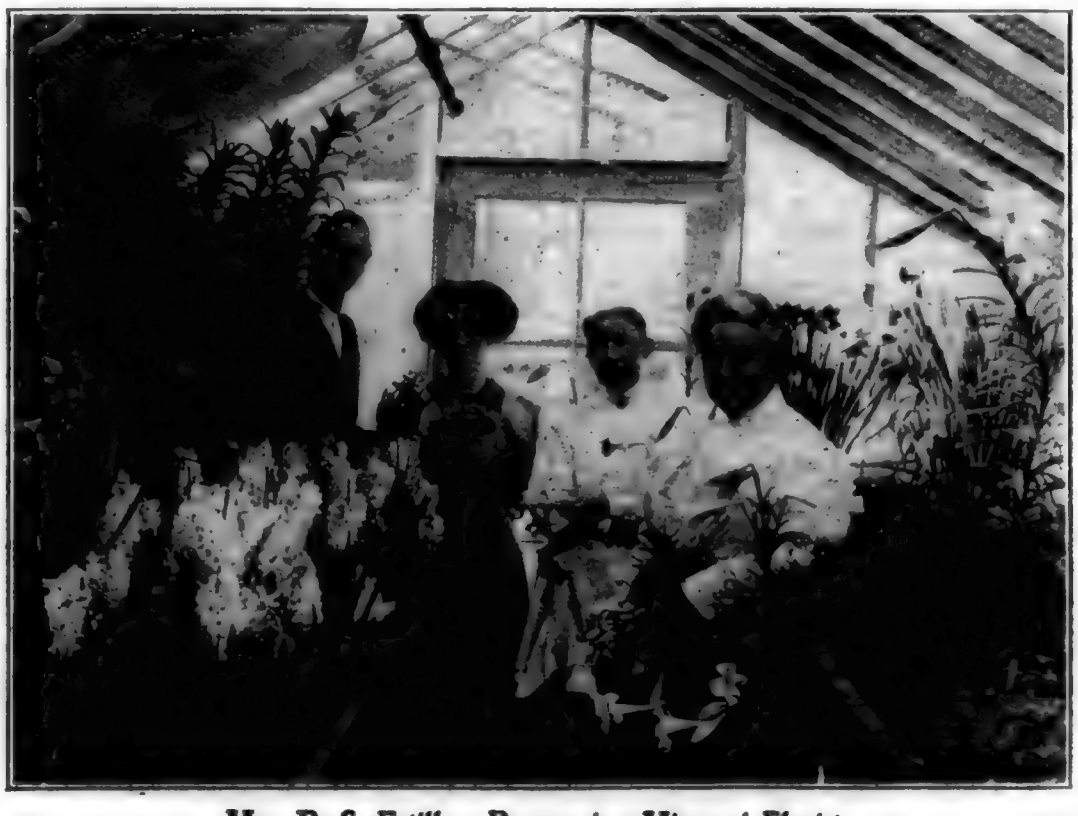
Rosedale is the name of the establishment of George J. Streator, plant breeder, at Santa Cruz, Cal. The accompanying illustration shows part of a field of Freesia Purity at Rosedale, and Mr. Streator writes of it as follows:

"The picture was made when the plants were only in partial bloom. The rows are far apart, to promote ease of culture and to induce fullest development of bulbs. This stock came originally from Mr. Fischer and has been gradually increased, the primary object being to produce from it a superior variety. Purity is fine and much at home here, where it grows all the wet season and matures after the rains cease. Thick planting of bulbs will induce long stems. Abundance of room, with no seed allowed to develop, will produce in our coast climate, where frost injury is not known, the finest of bulbs. Sparaxis, hippeastrums, gladioli, watsonias and ixias all seem at home in this genial climate."

PROPOSES GOVERNMENT EXPRESS

A bill is now before the sub-committee on Postoffice and Postroads in Congress providing for condemning and purchasing the express companies and adding them to the postal system, and establishing a complete system for the quick transport of packages and the eatable products of the farm and truck garden, etc. "There are two main reasons why the express companies must be added to the postal system," says Congressman Lewis, author of the bill. "First, the express company service does not reach beyond the railways to the country or the farmers, which the post office does, through the rural free delivery, which is waiting with empty wagons to receive the express packages and take them to the country stores and the farmers, and carry back to the towns and the cities the produce of the farms and truck gardens for the people to eat, at living prices. Second, the contracts of the express companies with the railways give them an average transportation rate of three-quarters of a cent a pound; and with this rate the express charges by post would be reduced from two-thirds to one-half on parcels ranging from five pounds to fifty pounds, and about twenty-eight per cent on heavier weights, as a consequence of the coördination of the express company plants with the post office and rural delivery, and the elimination of the express company profits, which are averaging over fifty per cent on the investment.

"The express companies are positive hindrances and obstacles to the business of the country. The average charge for carrying a ton of express in the countries of Europe is $4.12, while the average express company charge in the United States is $31.20. They charge five times as much to carry a ton of express as a ton of freight in other countries. Here the express companies charge sixteen times as much."



MRS. ESTILL, OF MOBERLY.

One of the well known Missouri florists is Mrs. R. S. Estill, of Moberly, who has developed a special capacity for the business. Her husband is superintendent of the city water works and it was purely through natural inclination, just as so many other florists have started, that Mrs. Estill took up the commercial end of floriculture. This was five years ago and her start was with only $200 capital and a greenhouse 8x15 feet, without heat. Now she has six good houses, each 14x100 feet, and a large, well equipped flower store on the main street in the town, with facilities for filling any kind of an order, be it for cut flowers, bedding or landscape work. Plans are now on foot for removing the greenhouses to a new site north of the residence, which they now adjoin, and in the rebuilding to add something to the area, at the same time changing the heating system from hot water to steam and providing for a considerable future addition to the glass area.

In the accompanying illustration Mrs. Estill stands at the right; next her stands her venerable mother, who is "Grandmother" to everyone who visits the greenhouses. At the left is Carl A. Claeson, who was in charge of the greenhouses. At the store Mrs. Estill is assisted by her son, who is 21 years of age.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The last week was a busy one for all florists catering to the cut flower trade. Weddings were of daily occurrence, and for commencement night not less than 175 elegant bouquets, mostly of the shower style, were furnished by the different florists. White roses, carnations and daisies were the flowers mostly used for that occasion and the general effect was striking. The exodus of the yearly tourists began a month ago and by July nearly all social functions will be at a standstill until late in the fall. There has been no rain here for two weeks, but the clouds look ominous and everyone wishes that Jupiter Pluvius would open the locks and send the much needed water from above.

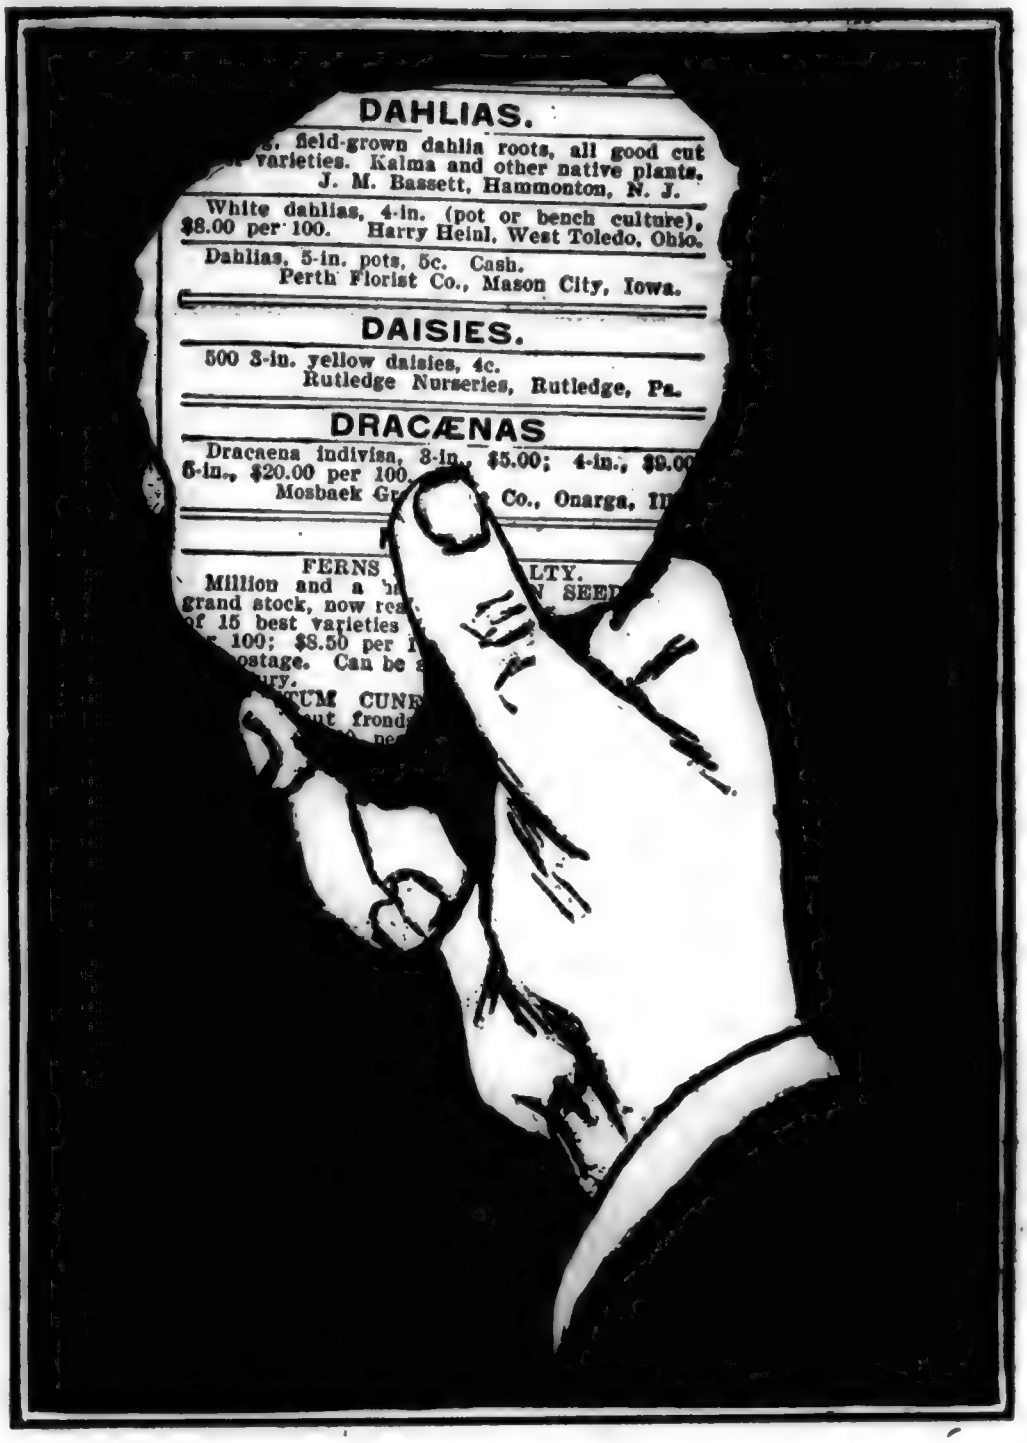
Club Meeting.

The last regular meeting in the fiscal year of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was held June 15, at Kolb's German Tavern. The president, Richard Eichling, was in the chair, and the secretary, C. R. Panter, at his desk, with about twenty-five members present. The feature of the evening was an interesting and instructive paper on "Landscape Gardening," read by Edward Baker, one of the veterans of the society, and superintendent of the parking commission. The essayist's paper comprised, in broad outlines, the entire history of landscape gardening, especially in this country. His description of modern landscape gardening, with reference to the proper arrangement of trees, shrubs, beds, etc., was of great value. A lengthy discussion followed, in which several members voiced their sentiments, emphasizing the fact that in general not enough money is spent for the laying out, planting and maintenance of gardens. Loud applause followed the reading of this paper and a vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Baker.

The city council will bring in shortly its final decision in regard to the "fly" ordinance. In order to guard the rights of the florists against favoritism in the requirements, which undoubtedly would hurt their trade, the following committee was appointed: J. C. Quinette, P. A. Chopin and Paul Abele.

The society extended a vote of thanks to Mr. Ward, of the Cottage Gardens, for the enjoyable outing on the lake given the members May 28.

The annual outing of the society will take place on a Wednesday during the early part of July. It will consist of a boat ride to Mandeville, La., on the banks of Lake Pontchartrain. The arrangements are in the hands of the following committee: Edward Baker, C. R. Panter and Charles Eble.



Up to this time no prospective candidates for the offices of president and vice-president have appeared, but it is likely they will make their intentions known during the outing.

Various Notes.

C. W. Eichling's business is constantly increasing, especially in the cut flower line. The varied stock he carries at his nursery, near the store, is always in perfect condition.

Max Scheinuk, a young, enterprising florist, will soon remove to his new place on Panola street, where he built a residence and a greenhouse, 25x100.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

His several thousand mums are in fine condition.

U. J. Virgin has an exceedingly busy time with decorations of all kinds. At his nursery he intends to make some big alterations in greenhouse building. Richard Eichling, his foreman, has the place in good shape and well stocked, especially with palms and ferns. He is cutting daily a good supply of asters, Lilium giganteum and lancifolium for store use.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The lessening of shipments was evident June 17 and before the day ended the demand had absorbed everything worth while, and quite a little of the sleepy accumulations also. The big department stores bought roses and carnations in lots of 20,000 and at figures that enabled them to advertise special sales of these at 10 cents a dozen. The Trepels and Abrams were surely a godsend to the overburdened market. It is predicted that every department store in the city, awakened by the remarkable success of Charles Trepel in his three big New York and Brooklyn stores, will add a flower department before the new season opens in September.

There are few American Beauty roses that are worthy of the name. The few that pass muster bring 20 cents easily, but ninety per cent of all arrivals of this rose go at any figure offered. This week should see some improvement in general quality. The week opens with small shipments and a steady market at last week's average prices. Of Killarney there is no limit; much of the stock is short in stem and small in flower, but it dominates the rose market always. Maryland and Maid abound, but quality is poor. Hilda grows in popularity. The old Jacq., as thorny and sweet as ever, had a banner week, and some of the stock sent in brought good prices, though the hot days made short work of most of it. Few Richmonds arrive. The rose market feels the influence of direct shipments from growers to other cities and to out-of-town florists.

Carnations show a sleepy condition, as the result of the heat, and the accumulations last week were abnormal. One sale of 22,000 was made at less than $2 per thousand and $1 per hundred was top, except for a few. There is a big call for peonies now that their season is

Hilda grows in popularity. The old Jacq., as thorny and sweet as ever, had a banner week, and some of the stock sent in brought good prices, though the hot days made short work of most of it. Few Richmonds arrive. The rose market feels the influence of direct shipments from growers to other cities and to out-of-town florists.

Carnations show a sleepy condition, as the result of the heat, and the accumulations last week were abnormal. One sale of 22,000 was made at less than $2 per thousand and $1 per hundred was top, except for a few. There is a big call for peonies now that their season is about over. The quality of nearly everything that came in last week was poor. The best sold for 50 cents a dozen. Valley has advanced a little, for the weddings have been numerous. There are many booked for the final days of the month. Even the weddings do not influence the price of orchids. The specialists in these, among the wholesalers, say the market is overstocked, and prices unimproved. Few gardenias are arriving. Top price for lilies has been $3 per hundred and many thousands have sold for less, some even under $10 per thousand. Gladioli are abundant and will soon be here in great volume.

Various Notes.

Large crowds attended the big palm sales this week of the Elliott and MacNiff auction companies. This closes the most successful auction season ever known here.

Jacobs & Sons, Brooklyn, report a hundred per cent increase in their year's business, to date. The firm contemplates an early addition to the factory.

Mr. Beauplan, manager of the Forster Mansfield Co., is summering on his steam yacht, the Chantecler.

The Yonkers Nursery Co. has completed the planting and landscape work on the Rockefeller estate. The Architectural League, of this city, declares "the landscape effects the finest and most complete example of landscape architecture in the world." Robert Rennison, the manager of the nursery, finds his new auto a necessity in the oversight of the numerous contracts this season. Fred Smythe, the proprietor, will shortly make his annual trip to Europe.

John V. Phillips and family, of Brooklyn, are enjoying their summer recreation at their bungalow at Bay Shore.

S. Masur, of Brooklyn, has rented the entire building at his present location on lower Fulton street, and will make extensive alterations. This increase of room was badly needed. Mr. Masur has had a busy season, with many gardening contracts on Long Island and in Jersey.

Frank McKee is building another greenhouse at Fulton street and Classon avenue, Brooklyn, to be devoted to the growing of the best chrysanthemums. His store and greenhouse facilities are now among the best in the city.

R. G. Wilson, of Greene avenue, and Hugo H. Jahn, of Nostrand avenue, in Upper Brooklyn, report the biggest wedding season of their long experience.

F. Milliot had a fine bank of decorative plants and baskets at the exhibition of the Yonkers Horticultural Society last week. The society will hold its summer outing at Rye Beach early in July. The exhibit of the Yonkers Nursery Co., at this summer show, was the principal decorative feature. The judges were Wm. Roberts, of Ossining; Ewen McKenzie, of New Rochelle, and John Brunger, of Irvington. The orchid exhibit was made by the Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford.

The members of the firm of Siebrecht & Siebrecht are spending their week ends at Chappaqua, N. Y.

The sweet pea convention will take place at Philadelphia next week, June 29 and 30. Secretary Bunyard has made elaborate arrangements, and will pilot a goodly number of New Yorkers.

June 28 the annual outing of the New York Florists' Club will take place at Wetzel's, as usual. These yearly reunions draw an attendance of 400 to 500. The start this year is at 9:30 a. m., to give time for a two hours' sail up the Sound before the noon meal. At 6 p. m., after the athletic events, the banquet will be served, in time for the return trip at 8 p. m. Hundreds of dollars have been subscribed for prizes, which will be almost exclusively used for the ladies and children. The outing this year is planned to be largely a family reunion. Secure your tickets in advance from Chairman Fenrich.

The week after the outing of the Greek American fraternity takes place, and early in July the plant growers of New York and New Jersey will celebrate in a long auto ride over the fine roads of New York and a banquet at a famous inn up the Hudson.

July 1 and 2 the Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition of roses, irises, sweet peas, herbaceous plants, etc., with liberal prizes. Geo. V. Nash, the secretary, says the society will "educate this blasé community to appreciate the beautiful, or die in the attempt," and he thinks the good effects of his persistency are already here.

Part of the new store of J. J. Fellouris, on West Twenty-eighth street, has been contracted for by a wholesale cut flower firm and will be occupied early in the fall.

B. J. Slinn, Jr., and family are summering at Garden City.

Mr. Sperry has joined the ranks of the carbuncleites.

Robert Schultz, of Madison, states that any reports as to the sale or leasing of his property are erroneous.

Jos. H. Fenrich and family are at their summer home in Asbury Park. Mr. Fenrich's partner is touring Europe with his wife.

Geo. M. Stumpp will have W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., as his companion in an auto trip through Germany and other European countries.

Walter Mott, of Newburgh, has joined the traveling force of Wm. Elliott & Sons, and will make his initial trip through New England, commencing July 5.

Alex. McConnell finds the move to his new and beautiful corner store completed without a jar to the volume of his business.

C. A. Dards has been kept busy with wedding work at both of his establishments.

David Clarke's Sons have been flooded with weddings, often three or four of them in a day.

Small & Sons maintain the even tenor of their way, and soon will have finer accommodations at the Waldorf-Astoria branch.

Young & Nugent find their new store on Madison avenue a wise departure.

Myer, at Fifty-eighth street and Madison avenue, has doubled his room and business.

The Bunyard Co. is doing well both here and at Newport.

Theo. Lang leaves this week for his up-state summer home, with his family. Mr. Lang will grow asters there this summer for the New York market.

Frank Millang and family are already on their farm up the Hudson.

Sunday, June 19, was designated locally as "Fathers' day," but poor pater received scant recognition, so far as floral decorations are concerned, although this event may have had its influence on the markets' clean-up on Saturday. It looks as if father would have to wait for his funeral for any extraordinary floral demonstration.

M. A. Bowe has found his temporary headquarters, opposite the Waldorf, an excellent location.

Bowling.

The Bowling Club will roll at Thumm's alleys, Broadway and Thirty-first street, every Friday evening until August 11. The contest for team membership at Baltimore has had the effect of increasing the club's average nearly fifty per cent. John Donaldson rolled the remarkable score of 264 last Friday evening. The scores were:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	4th
Donaldson	163	264	166	161
Nugent	111	114	122	105
Kakuda	176	145	154	146
Shaw	183	135	157	159
Scott	144	162	147	175
Rickards	133	134	158	122
Chadwick	170	169	184	203
Manda	151	164	139	164

OBITUARY.

W. D. Bastow.

W. D. Bastow, a pioneer florist of Peoria, Ill., died of pneumonia June 13, in the Proctor Home, in which he had resided for several years. He was 84 years of age. He was born in England and came to America at the age of 20, having learned the florists' art in his native country. He located in New York, then in Illinois, and fifty years ago was the leading florist of Peoria. Several years of his later life were spent in Kansas, but his home was always in Peoria. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Anna E. Peterbridge, of Peoria.

Peter Ott.

Peter Ott, head florist for the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Mansfield, O., died at his home in that city on Sunday night, June 11. He was said to be the oldest florist in the city and had held his position with the railroad company for twenty-seven years.

William Taat.

William Taat, traveler for the Holland firm of M. Van Waveren & Sons, Hillegom, died June 13 in the Boston City Hospital, as the result of an accident which occurred some time ago. Mr. Taat was widely known in the trade in this country, having made many trips here in the interest of his firm, calling on the seed houses and on leading buyers of bulbs in the florists' and other lines. While visiting the trade in Boston, Mr. Taat met with an accident in the subway, falling between the first and second cars in a train. His foot was so badly injured that amputation was necessary, and later a second operation was required, from which he did not have the strength to rally.

Edward B. Voorhees.

Dr. Edward B. Voorhees, director of the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station and professor of agriculture at Rutgers College, died at New Brunswick, N. J., June 6 of paralysis. He was widely known as a scientific authority on fertilizers.

Moscow, Idaho.—J. L. Bourn, the North Main street florist, has purchased a residence lot on the hill and let a contract for the construction of a modern dwelling.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Rockville, Ind.—H. B. Brubeck says business is ahead of last year.

Memphis, Tenn.—A greenhouse belonging to Frank Trimble, the Diana street florist, was recently destroyed by fire.

Kennebunk, Me.—J. O. Elwell will make extensive improvements at his place, including the replacing of an old greenhouse with a new iron-frame house, 28x100.

Fort Worth, Tex.—The building occupied by the Drumm Seed & Floral Co. is being remodeled. The improvements include a new front, with large plate glass windows.

St. Cloud, Minn.—Mrs. Anderson has sold the greenhouses of the Anderson Floral Co., at the corner of Second street and Sixth avenue, to John Mattson. Mr. Mattson has taken possession of the establishment, but will be assisted for some time by Mrs. Anderson, who has personally carried on the business since the death of her husband.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—The annual exhibition of roses, strawberries and hardy flowers by the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held at the Young Men's Lyceum June 16. There was a good show and a large attendance. E. W. Neubrand, of the F. R. Pierson Co., is secretary. The fall show schedule is out. The date is October 31 to November 2.

Plymouth, Ind.—Jacob Jordan, who rebuilt his old greenhouses and added another on his property just north of town, has had an excellent season's trade. He grows principally vegetable plants, in flats, and has easily sold all he could spare from his own planting. He devotes the benches in one of his houses to lettuce, for which he finds a ready home market.

Wilmington, O.—The business of Weltz's Sons has passed into the hands of Fred Weltz, the partnership between himself and his brother, Trebor, having ceased by limitation, after an existence of ten years. It is the intention of the present proprietor to put the place in first-class condition and continue to operate it. The business was founded in 1858 by the father, Leo Weltz, deceased.

St. Paul, Minn.—The annual flower show, under the auspices of the State Horticultural Society and the Minnesota Rose Society, was held June 15, at the College of Agriculture of the State University. John Hawkins, a nurseryman of this city, was a member of the committee on arrangements. The judges were Fred Nussbaumer, August Swanson, R. A. Latham and C. A. Malmquist.

Sterling, Ill.—J. A. Swartley & Sons are rushing work on two new houses 25 x 100. Concrete side walls are being used.

Greenwich, Conn.—Robert McMillen, of McMillen & Co., has been seriously ill at his home on Arch street since the first part of June.

Eldorado, Ark.—Mrs. W. E. Culp has two greenhouses. She has been selling plants and flowers on a small scale for some time, but is preparing to go more extensively into the business.

Rockton, Ill.—Joseph Farnsworth has purchased the property of R. Gammon, including the ground, greenhouses and residence. It is said that Mr. Gammon expects to devote his time to bee culture.

Hobart, Ind.—A. Londenberg & Sons are adding two houses, each 27 x 100, to supply the increased demand for cut flowers and bedding plants. They are located just four miles east of Gary, the new steel city.

Manchester, Mass.—Axel Magnuson, who recently purchased a large tract of land on Norwood avenue, will use it for the growing of outside stock. He will retain the greenhouses on Bridge street, as at present.

Greenwich, Conn.—It is said that Alexander Mead & Son have purchased a fine new building, not yet completed, on Greenwich avenue, and will occupy it as soon as it is ready for them. It it one of several buildings being erected by a local contractor.

Owatonna, Minn.—The Clinton Falls Nursery Co. used Lord's frost-proof box for its plant shipments last winter, and during severe weather sent blooming plants in good condition to customers in Montana, Canada, and through the Dakotas.

Greeley, Colo.—James H. Ellis recently completed his new range of greenhouses, on Normal Hill. Mr. Ellis was formerly a member of the force of the Park Floral Co., at Denver, and is thoroughly experienced as a grower and as a general florist. His location here is said to be ideal and his prospects are in every way encouraging.

West Newbury, Mass.—Chas. F. Newell, who conducted what was originally known as the Brookdale Truck Farm, has recently been erecting more greenhouses, and his place now bears the name of the Brookdale Nursery and Greenhouses. He says he has every reason to believe that when his houses are completed he will have all the business he can attend to. His stock was cleaned out at Easter and again on Memorial day.

Newark, N. J.—Local newspapers contain the announcement that the firm of Kroehl & Schutzl has been dissolved.

Woodstock, Conn.—Frank H. Miller, who recently erected greenhouses here, has provided for his water supply by installing a 1,000-gallon compressed-air tank.

Franklin, N. H.—George H. Bartlett, of the Franklin Floral Co., received the order for the decorations for the Griffin-Hall wedding at the First Baptist church June 24.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—The Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co. is planning to engage extensively in the growing of bedding plants for the wholesale trade and will use several of its greenhouses for that purpose.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The will of E. Nagel, whose death was reported in The Review of May 25, was admitted to probate June 8. The bulk of the estate goes to the son and daughter, while four grandchildren receive smaller amounts.

Shelburne Falls, Mass.—Paul Burtt, of Greenfield, who recently bought the business of L. S. Fife, will not remove to this town for the present, but will carry on the business through a superintendent, who will live in a cottage on the premises.

Springfield, Mass.—E. B. Beals had the contract for decorating the grounds of the Winchester park engine house for the summer, and has made the place notable for its attractiveness. Palms and fine plants, in tubs and vases, were largely used in the work.

Plymouth, Ind.—The Forbes Seed Store has had an unusually heavy trade this season in garden and field seeds and in vegetable and bedding plants. The weather for some weeks was too dry to be entirely favorable to the business, but good showers have lately fallen.

Saginaw, Mich.—The Wm. Roethke Floral Co. will expend about $15,000 this season in replacing its greenhouses on Gratiot avenue with new iron-frame houses of truss construction. The walls, floors and benches will be of concrete. Two of the new houses will be 27x165, three will be 27x135 and one will be 10x135. The boiler house and potting shed will also be rebuilt. The work of erection will be commenced at once and will probably be completed before September 1. The output of the houses will be used in supplying the firm's three stores here and in Bay City, and in taking care of the ever increasing outside trade. The business was established by Wm. Roethke thirty-five years ago.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Fourth of July, a legal holiday, this year falls on Tuesday, the busiest day of the week in The Review office, and the day on which advertising forms close.

Advertisers and correspondents are urged to mail matter for the issue going to press July 5

ONE DAY EARLIER THAN USUAL

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18 1911.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

When you telegraph an order add the code word "Transmit," which means "Mentioned in your advertisement in the Florists' Review."

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

June is not only the month of roses, but in the Pacific northwest it is the month of rose festivals. Portland has the big show, but a dozen other cities have won their shares of distinction in the last fortnight or so.

Secretary H. B. Dorner has mailed to each member of the S. A. F. a letter enclosing an application blank and emphasizing that if each member gets one additional member, the membership can be doubled before the Baltimore convention.

Hardly a day passes without some Chicago florist calling The Review on the telephone to get the name of a florist in a town not yet represented in the Department for Leading Retail Florists, to whom an order can be sent. If your town is not represented, a word to the wise ought to be sufficient.

SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

The National Sweet Pea Society of America will hold its annual meeting and exhibition at Philadelphia June 29 and 30. The following is the program:

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 3 P. M.

Address of welcome.
President Burpee's address.
Secretary's report.
Nomination of officers for 1911.
Invitations for the next meeting place.
"The History of the Sweet Pea"—Leonard Barron, managing editor of the Garden Magazine, New York.
Election of officers.

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 7 P. M.

Vote on the next meeting place.
Paper by Professor Craig or Mr. Beal, of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.
Addresses and discussions.

FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 11 A. M.

Question box.
Unfinished business.

FRIDAY AFTERNOON, JUNE 30.

On the invitation of W. Atlee Burpee, the members of the National Sweet Pea Society will visit the trial grounds of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. at Fordhook farms, Doylestown, Pa.

The Want Ad department of The Review is growing steadily.

Louisville wants the S. A. F. convention in 1912 and will send a strong delegation to Baltimore to press its invitation.

HAVE YOU A SURPLUS?

It is quite the rule for those who advertise their surplus stock in the Classified department of The Review to get all the orders they can use.

Enclosed find check for $1.30 to cover bill. The first issue for mums sold more than I had. I believe I have had orders and inquiries for more than 100,000, and only had about 5,000 to sell.—Mt. Park Greenhouse, Ridgway, Pa., H. W. Girton, Mgr., June 12, 1911.

WON'T LET IT DROP.

I want to thank The Review for its kind attention to this matter of establishing a Fathers' day. I also want to thank those brother florists who so kindly seconded my nominations.

My heart is wholly in this matter, and I trust the florists throughout this country will coöperate with me in establishing a Fathers' day. To me, the name of father is the dearest name on earth. We all know that being appreciated is one of our greatest pleasures and when the fathers throughout this flower-strewn land of ours realize they are really loved and appreciated it can not but add pleasure to their lives.

Now that the nomination has been made and seconded, that we establish a Fathers' day, the second Sunday in November, and that the chrysanthemum shall be the flower, will The Review call for a vote on the question, suggesting a time and manner of taking the vote? If someone else can suggest a better day and a better flower, by all means let us adopt it. All I ask is, do not drop the matter till Fathers' day is established.

Mrs. L. M. Smith.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market situation improved measurably in the latter days of last week and the present week opens with conditions much better than they have been at any time since Memorial day, when the first severe hot wave struck. Supplies are materially reduced, though there still is plenty of stock in nearly every line, if the buyer is not too critical of quality.

The reduction in supplies is most apparent in roses. There continue to be plenty of short roses, but either they have popped open and therefore cannot be shipped, or else, if cut tight, the buds are so small that wholesalers do not like to send them out. The supplies of long-stemmed roses are decidedly light and values have improved all along the line. Kaiserin is in request, for most of the growers have dropped it and are placing their sole dependence on White Killarney. This begins to show the pinkish or yellowish tinge that is the characteristic of summer, and such Kaiserin as come in command a premium. Maryland also is showing up better. There can now be no complaint as to the values of any really good roses. Beauty cuts also are down, but there still is all the stock the orders call for.

Carnations have become much better

We still have plenty of BEAUTIES
ALL YOU WANT—AND SPLENDID QUALITY

The supply of Beauties in this market has been reduced sharply in the last week, but our supply continues large—we shall have them all summer. These are strictly first-class long Beauties, grown specially for a summer cut—the quality is as good as we ever saw it after hot weather arrived. Order a few dozens—then you'll be interested in our quantity prices—no limit to our ability to supply.

Sweet Peas

A big supply—the largest lot and the finest stock to be had in Chicago. All the colors.

Valley

Order Valley of us and you will draw on a never-failing source of supply. We have the best grade.

KILLARNEY

White and Pink—fine stock

These are the longest-stemmed Roses on this market. (There are plenty of short roses but long stock is scarce.) You know it always is the longest stems that carry the largest flowers. We can supply any length in quantity. Watch our Rose crops this summer; they will interest you.

Cattleyas

For quality these will stand with the best seen anywhere in this country and we always can supply.

Peonies

We shall have first-class Peonies for some time yet. Specially strong on fancy white.

EASTER LILIES

You can get here all the Lilies you need for your Wedding decorations. We have a big supply of fine stock. Can furnish in thousand lots and will quote special prices on quantities if you write or wire.

CARNATIONS

We can supply as good stock as the weather conditions make it possible to obtain in this market.

property than they have been recently. The losses which occurred in the early part of June have caused many growers to throw out most of their stock, with the result that the supply is much reduced and the average quality of the stock coming in is considerably improved. Naturally, carnations do not now have the midwinter size, but there is nice, clean stock in the market and it is selling as well as could be expected under the circumstances. Many buyers have not ordered carnations since their experiences at Memorial day.

Sweet peas are much less plentiful than they were. There is some clean stock from indoors, but the stems are short. Easter lilies continue overabundant. Valley is fairly plentiful and selling well. Cattleyas have again sprung into demand. Since last report candidums have come in heavily. They are slow sale and June 19 the principal Michigan shipper was in town arranging for the cold storage of his flowers.

The peonies are cleaning up rapidly. The last few days there has been excellent sale for really good peonies, though scarcely any chance of moving the shakers and the ones that are beginning to show rot on the outside petal. Gladioli are abundant and are not selling specially well. The new crop eastern ferns are in and prices are down another notch.

Will Double Glass.

It was reported in The Review for November 17 that Wendland & Keimel, at Elmhurst, had taken advantage of a drop in the market to buy about five cars of glass, or enough, when erected, to more than double their establishment. A contract calling for early delivery was made, June 15, with the Foley Mfg. Co., for roof bars, gutter, etc. The addition will consist of ten houses 34x200 and one house 27x200. They now have ten houses 27x200, all in Killarneys. The plan is to have the new houses up before cold weather comes. The flat rafter will be used, and the Foley channel steel gutter with malleable iron bar clips. The Wendland & Keimel output is marketed by the E. C. Amling Co., and the new range, when it begins to produce, will make another important addition to the rose supply of that company, as the new range is all to go into Killarneys except for a few novelties for trial.

The Poehlmann brothers were called to Milwaukee by the death of their mother June 16, the funeral being held Monday, June 19. The family now consists of five sons and a daughter, with whom the mother lived. The sons are Gus, Adolph, George, John and August, all but one florists.

E. E. Pieser was downtown June 19, but the doctors told him to stay at home the rest of the week, which is harder than working for a man of such fixed habits.

Kyle & Foerster say they sold more peonies June 17 than on any other one day since they started in business, excepting of course Memorial day.

William Wienhoeber, now with Alex. McConnell, New York, will return to Chicago by the opening of the autumn season and take his place with the E. Wienhoeber Co.

It is reported that Peter Reinberg recently has acquired forty acres near the intersection of Lincoln and Peterson avenues, on which greenhouses may be erected.

At J. A. Budlong's Phil Schupp says Kaiserin, Jardine and Maryland are in special request.

Paul M. Bryant now signs as secretary of the E. H. Hunt corporation.

Miss Carrie Torgerson, who has been employed for some years in the office of the A. L. Randall Co., sails from New York June 22, accompanying an aunt on a trip to Norway.

N. J. Wietor and John Sinner leave June 23 for a fortnight's outing at White Sand Lake, in Wisconsin.

June 19 Zech & Mann received the first auratum lilies of the season, grown by Matt Mann.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, made a trip to New Castle last week to visit the Beauty growers. He says the South Park Floral Co., now having taken back the range leased to the Dingee & Conard Co., has 80,000 Beauty plants.

C. L. Washburn says last June was an exceptionally good one, because of weather conditions. He thinks that if the trade will make comparisons with August Lange and family plan to leave July 10 for a month's trip to California.

A. L. Randall says shipping business has been good, but that he considers city trade has been affected by the building strikes and other labor troubles, now adjusted. He looks for an increase in city trade in consequence.

The Alpha Floral Co., Adams and Wabash, says there was not a month in the summer of 1910 that did not show profit; they are hoping to make an equally good record this year.

W. E. Lynch Co., at West Twenty-second and Halsted streets, has its boiler-shed up, also a cottage for the grower, and has the material on the ground for three carnation houses 28x 300. These are the first houses in this vicinity to contain the Foley channel steel gutter with malleable iron bar clips welded on.

The report has been current in the market this week that the Chicago Flower Growers' Association has decided to open its new wholesale house at 81 Michigan avenue, between Randolph and Lake streets, the building recently vacated by Morgan & Wright. June 20 Anton Then, treasurer, stated that the lease had not then been signed. The association has not yet selected its manager.

The Chicago Carnation Co. baseball team won its second game June 18, defeating the Marley Township team. They would like to receive challenges from teams of florists.

Visitors: Wm. Breitmeyer, who is building greenhouses at Charlotte, Mich.; Charles Morton, formerly of Chicago, but now located at Los Angeles; George F. Crabb, of Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids.

and is a good seller for all sorts of occasions. There are a few cut ramblers to be had now, and garden roses are seen here and there in the stores. Sweet peas have been scarce since the indoor crop was exhausted, as the outdoor ones are not far enough advanced to cut as yet.

Commencements are in full swing and make a big demand, especially for roses. The supply is used up daily and is inadequate for the demand. In previous years peonies have been used extensively for commencements, but the warm spell in May of this year cut the peonies out of the list of flowers for graduates. A number of baskets are being used for commencements this year, which reverts to the styles of years gone by.

Local florists are still filling urns, window boxes and veranda jars, as well as setting out bedding plants. Outdoor work promises to keep up until July 4, when even the late comers will have been supplied. Gloxinias and summer hydrangeas are coming in now in greater numbers and are good sellers. Small wedding decorations helped to keep up the rush among local dealers last week.

Various Notes.

Fernando J. Keller has gone to New York and Philadelphia on a business trip.

M. J. Keller spent several days last week at Cayuga Lake, doing landscape gardening at the summer home of Owen De Witt.

During this week a special train will bring a large number of residents of the city of Syracuse to Rochester to view the floral displays in our various parks. Syracusans have been constant visitors to our city this spring and have taken a keen interest in the beautiful flowers in the parks. This interest has been communicated to others, with the result that the Syracuse Rose Society has been formed, with the avowed purpose of inducing residents of the Saline City to plan better things along flower lines.

Dick Salter left June 10 to spend a week in the Adirondacks with a party of friends.

Edward Meinhardt has resumed his duties with J. B. Keller's Sons for the summer.

Miss Myrtle Bradstreet took a short vacation a few days ago.

James F. Smith, representing Wm. J. Boas & Co., of Philadelphia, called on the trade here last week and reports that business is better than ever.

Miss Margaret Howe enjoyed a week's end holiday last Saturday.

Ground was broken last week at Highland park for the erection of the Lamberton Memorial Conservatory, which is the gift of the late Miss Mary A. Starbuck to the city of Rochester. The conservatory will be erected at a cost of $20,000, and is to be a memorial to Hon. A. B. Lamberton, president of the Rochester park board.

The Ellwanger & Barry Nursery Co. invited the public to view its display of five acres of peonies, one of the most gorgeous exhibits the city has ever seen. The roses, for which the nurseries are famous, are almost in full bloom in thousands of varieties. Both the peony and rose displays include not only the varieties familiar to flower lovers, but numerous experimental varieties not yet given to the public.

A number of Rochester nurserymen attended the annual convention of the American Association of Nurserymen, which was held in St. Louis last week. They traveled by special train. Those who made up the party were: John Hall, Chas. L. Yates, William Pitkin, Horace Hooker, H. S. Taylor, Thomas Brown, Edward S. Osborn, M. B. Fox, R. D. Luetchford, Professor John Craig, of Ithaca; J. H. Reilly, John Morey and J. A. Bailey, of Dansville. John Hall and Charles L. Yates, who head the list, are, respectively, secretary and treasurer of the association, and William Pitkin, also a member of the party, was to read a paper before the convention.

Rochester florists are taking a keen interest in the coming Shriners' convention, which is to be held here during the week beginning July 10. They are interested because there are so many florists who are Shriners, and also because there will be some elaborate floral decorations in connection with the convention, and all are eager to get at least a small slice of the work. J. M. Keller is chairman of the floral decoration committee, and is working hard, with his assistants, to perfect plans for the great event which will bring 150,000 visitors to our city. Mr. Keller was instrumental in bringing about the action of the park board to use the Shriners' emblem, done in plants, in the flower beds of all the parks in our city, in honor of the visiting Shriners and their friends. It will require several thousand plants to execute this work.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There is a healthier tone to the cut flower market for the third week in June, ending with the longest day of the whole year. There are not so many flowers as there were one week ago, and they are of better average quality. The growers are throwing out their plants, beginning, of course, with the poorest, and the cooler weather that prevailed during the rainy spell has improved the others. The orders, though about as numerous, are smaller in size, but prices are firmer.

Peonies are over. The flowers put in cold storage were hardly a success, though some of them came out in good shape. Lilium candidum has had its brief reign. The season for gardenias is fast drawing to a close. White roses of the better grades have been rather hard to obtain. Kaiserin being off crop with many growers, White Killarney and Bride have furnished most of the stock. Sweet peas have been abundant and fine, with the demand about equal to the supply. Carnations have improved. Cattleyas are more in evidence. The varieties now are gigas and Gaskelliana. Valley has downs and ups, with a fairly steady demand for the best. Coreopsis and candytuft abound. Shipping continues fairly active. Greens are in moderate request.

Various Notes.

Whetstone & Co. report that there is no change in prices on pipe and fittings. Present figures will probably hold good until September 1.

The H. Bayersdorfer & Co. improvements, giving increased floor space, are rapidly progressing. Mr. Berkowitz says a couple of weeks should see the work completed. Mr. Berkowitz also says that cork bark for rustic work has been in demand. A single order for 250 bales was executed recently.

William J. Muth is no longer with the King Construction Co.

Robert A. Stewart's store is closed.

Eugene Bernheimer moved his family to North Wales for the summer, June 15.

Parry & Lelache is the new wholesale firm, with offices at 14 South Seventeenth street and greenhouses at Somerdale, N. J. Mr. Parry is well known in wholesale circles, while his partner is a New Jersey grower of violets and other stock.

Paul J. Klingsporn and Miss Gherkel, of Chicago, were married in Old Christ church June 17. The happy couple is now on a wedding trip. Mr. Klingsporn, who is with Berger Bros., has many friends who wish him well with hearty good will.

The annual meeting of M. Rice & Co., June 8, was the occasion of a dinner at Bingham House, which was a great success. Those present were M. Rice, B. Eschner, Frank J. Farney, Charles E. Shackerman, Robert Shoch and Arthur Zirkman.

The Robert Craig Co. has a wonderful stock of nephrolepis in the best varieties—not just rooted runners, but established plants, ready to go right ahead with a will.

Charles E. Meehan had an eventful week—a birthday celebration at the beginning and the opening of his Ocean City cottage at the close.

Stewart Miller returned to work June 19. It was good to see his cheerful smile again.

M. J. Callahan has been turning out some artistic work from his West Philadelphia store.

WEDDING IDEAS

The question is often asked, "Will it pay to buy a Wedding Outfit for one smart wedding?" It will pay you and pay you well. There are two reasons: First, because a smart wedding decoration artistically arranged, with the aid of a suitable wedding outfit, is an advertisement for you and your business that you can get in no other way—it shows the people you want to reach what you can do; they will see your work and remember it when they require something handsome in floral decorations. The second reason is, because you can do more business when you are prepared for it. By having a Wedding Outfit ready you can often secure an order that would be lost were you unprepared.

boy'' who bought several thousand geraniums and sold them within two days.

The joint committees of the Philadelphia Florists' Club and Pennsylvania Horticultural Society have issued a letter to those interested asking their coöperation in making the coming fall flower show a brilliant success. This early start augurs well for the enterprise.

The management of the Michell team will be pleased to hear from any seed house or florists' association having a team in the field, to fill one vacant date each in July and August.

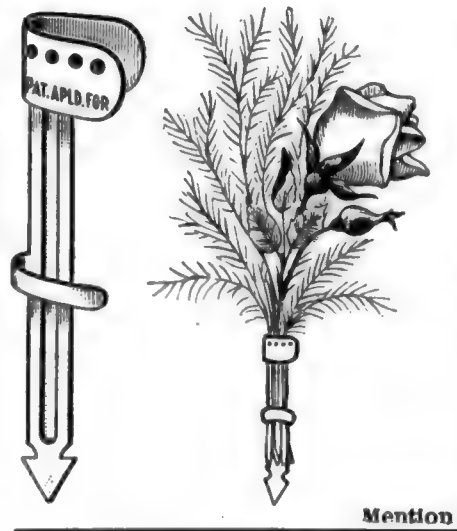
BOSTON.

The Market.



The various school graduation and commencement exercises have helped business quite a little during the last few days. Without this welcome fillip, trade would have been as dead as the proverbial door nail. Flowers are not used so largely for the school exercises as was the case a few years ago, the school authorities forbidding scholars to carry them in some cases.

Good roses are not plentiful, but there are many poor ones. The quality, thanks to the continued cool weather, is good for the season. American Beauties, Carnots, Killarneys and Kaiserins are ruling favorites. Carnations are getting poor and many are spidery. The number is decreasing, as some growers are throwing out their stock, preparatory to replanting. Sweet peas from indoors are nearly over. There are now more arrivals from outdoors, but the supply is as yet inadequate. Peonies of light pink and white shades have met with a good sale. Recent thunder rains have, however, damaged many and another week will see the end of them. Hybrid perpetual roses, such as Brunner and Jacqueminot, have come this week from one or two growers and sold well.

There is Spanish iris from outdoors of good quality. Gladioli, such as Mrs. Francis King, America, Dawn, etc., are more plentiful, but not selling particularly well. Such flowers as stocks, feverfews, etc., are hard to move at any price. Valley has sold moderately well; lilies quite poorly. Cattleyas are in ample supply still and low in price. Asparagus has been selling quite well; adiantum more sluggishly.

time for entertainment. A letter from John Young, secretary of the New York Florists' Club, invited Boston and other New England members planning to attend the S. A. F. convention in Baltimore to share the special train which the New York delegation will have. The invitation was accepted by acclamation and, from the remarks made, Boston will have an extra good attendance at Baltimore. Two new members were elected. W. J. Stewart, T. J. Grey and K. Finlayson were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of F. R. Mathieson. It was stated that Caledonian grove, West Roxbury, had been chosen for the annual picnic, which would take place July 26.

There were quite a few seasonable exhibits, most of them flowers suitable for presentation to the various artists of the evening. Speeches were made by C. W. Parker, W. J. Stewart, T. H. Westwood and A. E. Parsons. There were songs by Messrs. Tascar and Littlefield, fancy dances by Misses Jennie and Nellie Irvine, songs by Miss Batley and piano selections by Miss R. Pugh. At the close of the entertainment, which proved one of the finest the members have ever enjoyed, Miss J. Evelyn Hale simply brought down the house with her selections, splendidly rendered. Refreshments were served by W. C. Spratt, of Allston, in his usual first-class style, and were heartily enjoyed by everyone. Dancing followed. The next club meeting will not occur until September 18, but there will be a field day at B. H. Tracy's gladiolus farms in August.

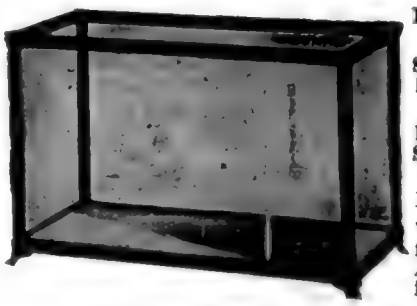
Various Notes.

T. C. Thurlow's Sons' nurseries at West Newbury have attracted many visitors of late, the peony display being the great attraction. Flowers here are later than near Boston and quite a few varieties will still be in good shape for the rose and peony show June 24 and 25.



Peter M. Miller spent a few days last week in New York, returning to preside at the monthly club meeting.

William Nicholson has been cutting some good peonies this season and has made quite a hit with Aquilegia cærulea. He still has carnations and marguerites of fine quality.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is having good success this season with tomatoes, which he grows to follow double violets. Comet he finds the best variety.

Henry R. Comley furnished decorations for the banquet, June 16, at the Hotel Somerset, given by the Chamber of Commerce in honor of 160 visiting Chicago members, and received many compliments on his work.

Welch Bros. have had good business so far this month, but anticipate lighter business after the present week.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, is one of the most successful of our carnation growers. The quality of Henry Fenn and Beacon as handled by George H. Noyes is equal to what we usually see in midsummer.

Mrs. J. W. Rogers' store on Summer street is the nearest one to the south terminal, where more trains arrive and depart daily than at any other railroad station in America. Her business has this season shown a good increase.

The many local friends of J. B. Velie, the popular Boston representative of the Lord & Burnham Co., were sorry to hear last week of his having to go through an operation for appendicitis, and hope for his early convalescence.

The display of Kalmia latifolia at the Arnold Arboretum at the base of Hemlock hill was at its height last week and, being unusually fine, attracted crowds of visitors.

June 17 this year fell on a Saturday. It being Bunker Hill day and a local holiday, cut flower business was not improved thereby. Many of the growers and salesmen enjoyed the celebrations during the day in Charleston.

John Barr is preparing to erect his new Lord & Burnham carnation house, which will be 35x300, a larger size than the older ones. Plants in the field are looking first-class, while the quality of flowers still being picked averages high.

E. J. Shaylor has had numerous visitors per automobiles, especially during the last few days, to see his grand collection of peonies. He has sold plants as high as $25 each.

West Newbury, Mass.—E. W. Thurlow has taken a large amount of floor space at Amesbury for the flower and strawberry show which will be held there in the first part of July. It is said that his exhibit will be a veritable garden in itself.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—D. Mendels, of the Wealthy Avenue Floral Co., says that the spring trade this year has been exceptionally good. "We started with a large stock," he says, "and practically everything is gone. The buying began as soon as danger from frost was past and Memorial day was the culmination, with a rush that was something tremendous."

ANNOUNCEMENT

To the Trade

I HAVE this day turned my greenhouse business over to Merriam Park Floral Company, for whom I bespeak the same good will of the trade as I have been favored with.

AUG. S. SWANSON.

St. Paul, Minn., June 15, 1911.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The busy season has ended in the florists' business and the midsummer dullness is upon us, although last week in the retail circles was a good one. There was a large number of weddings, both large and small, but the great bulk of the work was for school closings, for which lily of the valley and sweet peas were in great demand, with not nearly enough of them to supply it.

Good roses are scarce in this market, while carnations are quite plentiful, but poor in quality. Nevertheless, they sold well because of the scarcity of other cut flowers. There is quite a raft of outdoor flowers, but they look poor because of the hot and dry weather. Rain is badly needed and our local growers say stock will be scarce if relief does not come soon. In Kirkwood the growers have to haul water daily, much of it from quite a distance.

Various Notes.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., in company with his son-in-law, E. H.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-Pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O. Twenty-ninth annual meeting, Marblehead, Mass., June 20 to 22, 1911.

THE crop reports practically all show the season from a fortnight to a month late.

JAMES WIEBENS, formerly with the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, now is manager of the retail store of the Amzi Godden Seed Co., Birmingham, Ala.

WILLIAM TAAT, traveler of M. Van Waveren & Sons, Hillegom, Holland, and well known in the seed trade in the United States, died June 13 in Boston, as the result of a street car accident.

A RECENT fire in the Barber Drug & Seed Store, in Birmingham, Ala., is said to have caused a loss of about $10,000. The flames were confined to the third floor, but the stock on the first and second floors was badly damaged by water.

JOHN LEWIS CHILDS, Floral Park, N. Y., has purchased three acres of ground at Palm avenue and Magnolia street, South Pasadena, Cal., and will grow flower seeds. He has just finished the erection of some long rows of lath houses for the purpose.

THE Iowa Seed Co., of Des Moines, Ia., has let the contract for the erection of an elevator with a capacity of 100,000 bushels at Altoona, Ia. It was the original intention to build the elevator in Des Moines, but the necessary space could not be obtained there. There are excellent facilities, however, for transportation between the company's headquarters and the chosen site.

MARBLEHEAD MEETING.

Twenty-ninth A. S. T. A. Convention.

Members of the American Seed Trade Association are this week holding their twenty-ninth annual convention at Marblehead, Mass., one of the most delightful spots that has been visited on its travels—and it is twenty-seven years since the association last met in Massachusetts. Because of the summer resort character of the place of meeting, a large proportion of the seedsmen are accompanied by their ladies, and the social side is well to the fore. The last year or two the seed trade has been harassed by many difficulties, particularly those arising from the wave of ill-advised legislation, which had only begun to recede at the date of the last meeting. Since then the legislative thunder showers have largely blown over and this year's meeting is with much clearer skies. Watson S. Woodruff reported for the committee that attended the hearing on pure seed bills at Washington February 2 and reports were received from the state correspondents, a staff of workers created last year. These on the whole tended to show the tide of restrictive legislation on the ebb, though the troubles in this direction are by no means at an end.

President E. L. Page presented his annual address, reviewing the work of the year and outlining the needs of the future.

The report of Secretary C. E. Kendel showed 162 annual and two life members, and as treasurer his report was as follows:

(President American Seed Trade Association.)

Committee Reports.

After the report of the standing committee on memberships, the special committees reported the year's work. The committees, with the chairmen, are as follows:

Delegates to National Board of Trade—Albert McCullough, Cincinnati, chairman.
Seed Legislation and Legal Affairs—Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., chairman.
Delegates to National Council of Horticulture—C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, chairman.
Postal Laws—L. H. Vaughan, Chicago, chairman.
Customs and Tariff—W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich., chairman.
Experiment Station—G. B. McVay, Birmingham, Ala., chairman.
Transportation—C. F. Wood, Louisville, Ky., chairman.
Conference with National Seed Analysts—Charles N. Page, Des Moines, chairman.
Joint Committee with Nurserymen and Florists—C. F. Wood, Louisville, Chairman.

The Essays.

The set papers are rather more on the scientific order than usual, there being five by department of agriculture or experiment station experts. The full program is as follows:

"Points of Interest at Marblehead," by Edgar Gregory, of Marblehead.
"The Relation of Soils and Fertilizers to Seed and Crop Failure," by H. J. Wheeler, Ph. D., Director of the Agricultural Experiment Station of Rhode Island State College.
"Departments of the Seed Business," by W. D. Ross, Worcester, Mass.
"Distribution of Fungous Diseases by Seeds," by Dr. K. Mead Wilcox, Professor Agricultural Botany and State Botanist, Lincoln, Neb.
"Improvements in Grains," by Prof. R. A. Moore, of the Wisconsin Agricultural Station, Madison, Wis.
"Peas and Beans: Future Probabilities and Cost, Supply and Demand," by C. N. Keeney, Le Roy, N. Y.
"Proper Growing and Handling of Seed Potatoes," by Charles D. Woods, Director of the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, Orono, Maine.
"The Importance of Line Breeding in the Establishment of Varietal Forms Suited for Special Conditions," by Dr. W. W. Tracy, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

At last year's meeting President Robinson made a hit by calling on members present for crop reports, and these were made a feature of this year's program, not only those present being called on but arrangements having been made in advance for night letter reports during the convention from all the important growing centers.

Entertainment Features.

The program contains more provision for the social side than usual. A sail on the bay is to occupy one afternoon, and a sight-seeing trip by special trolley cars another. The annual banquet took place Wednesday evening at the Rock-Mere hotel, and Friday, after the adjournment, all who remain are invited to make a tour of Arnold Arboretum, Boston, with special guides.

one man's time, without bothering with other lines. There is no question but what location, circumstances and other conditions have a great deal to do with this subject, but as your president has asked me to speak either for or against it, I shall take the side in favor of the agricultural department store, for that is really the correct name of a seed store handling kindred lines. There is no doubt that the seed department, whether it be wholesale or retail, is the most important of all, and requires more care and attention, and that most of us can find all the trouble we need for entertainment in the seed line without resorting to other lines, for I can assure you there is no department but has its share of troubles.

of the past, as they have added new lines or side lines and the result is that the small specialty store has been obliged to give up. Some of our large seed stores have recently consolidated, I suppose, to reduce the cost of running expenses and in that way enable them to do more business at a smaller percentage of expense—not a bad idea at all. What has been done in dry goods can be done in our line.

Suppose some of us should say that we would handle only those seeds paying the largest profit and would not bother with the seeds usually sold at a small margin. How long would our customers continue to trade with us? In order to hold their entire trade we must be able to supply all their wants, even if the profits are small on some articles. We have started many a good customer by selling him agricultural tools and fertilizer first and afterwards getting his entire trade in seeds, poultry supplies, etc.

Just what lines should be added to the seed business depends entirely upon the demand and the local conditions. The seed business in itself is divided under several heads or departments. We might classify them as seed growers, retail seed dealers, wholesale seed dealers, wholesale and retail dealers. Some of our largest dealers do not handle bulbs, while others make a specialty of that line. Some of us go into nursery stock, and on an extensive scale. Other departments which could be handled separately are agricultural implements, fertilizers, poultry supplies, horse goods and bee-keepers' supplies. This last line we have added ourselves this season and so far it has proven satisfactory, but we cannot tell definitely until the close of the season whether we shall get stung or not. All of these departments can be subdivided into wholesale and retail, counter and mail order trade.

Poultry and Bee Supplies.

Now why should seed dealers handle these side lines? First, they naturally go with the seed business. No person can plant or care for his seed until he has purchased some implement to prepare the soil, and he naturally expects to find the necessary tools where he finds the seed. He must also have fertilizers to make them grow, and if he keeps poultry he expects to get his incubator, brooder and poultry feeds at the same store. This branch is increasing fast and we find that the sale of live chicks or day old chicks, incubator hatched, has been a profitable venture for us, for it helps trade on chick feeds and other poultry supplies and the more poultry kept the more corn or grain necessary, and this means more seed planted.

The bee industry is also on the increase, and we are going to have a greater demand in the future for bee-keepers' supplies. While there is a lot of detail to this branch, we have found that in a short time our man has become so familiar with it that everything goes along smoothly, and we have added several hundred new customers to our list, not only for bee supplies but for other goods which they saw while in the store looking for bee goods. This I believe will be a profitable department when once well established. The margin of profit compares favorably with other departments.

Fertilizers and Machinery.

Each department should stand its proportion of the general running expense and by handling these different lines the expense for each department is reduced to the minimum. Rent and other expenses go on just the same after the seed rush is over, and if seed dealers can handle other lines during the dull season the expense for the seed part is reduced just that much.

Many a good lot of seed has been condemned because it did not receive the proper amount of fertilizer. The proper use of commercial fertilizer has helped the seed business wonderfully and the sale of these goods is an important department with some of our New England seed dealers. While the percentage of profit is not what it should be, the volume of business makes up for this loss, and when direct shipments are made, as many of them are, the cost of doing business is limited to office expense. Such goods can be handled and stored where rents are much cheaper than is necessary for seed storage.

Improved farm machinery has been a great help to the seed trade, because it enables the farmers to plant a greater acreage and each acre means more seed. It was a wise man who said: "I will plant more corn, to feed

There is one point that I want to emphasize, and that is that no dealer has any moral right to sell one line of goods at a sacrifice to advertise another, and the giving away of merchandise prizes or selling them at cost should not be allowed. I am glad to note that it has been largely done away with.

In handling these side lines it is important that good department managers only are employed, for mistakes in one department are liable to injure another. With proper management each department should, and I believe does, help the whole and enables us to keep good men the year around, which is important in these times of high-priced labor. These men can be put first in one department and then in another, for three months is about as long as we can expect a rush in the seed business, and good help cannot be had for so short a time and then let go. Good men should be kept the year around if possible.

Our traveling men have practically three seasons on the road: Seeds in the fall and winter; fall goods, such as horse goods, agricultural hardware, etc., in the spring and summer; and winter goods, such as poultry supplies, etc., in the winter.

Chances of Loss.

While there is no doubt in my mind that the most money is made in the retail seed business, it is a fact that there is also more money lost in the same department, as prices are just as liable to decline as they are to advance and no one can expect always to buy just at the right time. This fact was demonstrated to the entire satisfaction of many of us a year ago on seed potatoes and many of us have hauled enough onion sets to the dump to cover the profit on several good orders. All of these things must come in the seed business, but in other departments the chance of loss is not so great, for, while we may miscalculate and overbuy on farm machinery, fertilizers, poultry supplies, etc., the chances for depreciation are not so great, as they can be carried over from one season to another without any great loss, the principal expense being the interest and storage. Handling these lines helps to carry you through a dull season and the old saying, "Do not put your eggs all in one basket," is very true in handling side lines in the seed trade.

SEEDS AT ROCKY FORD.

"The season just closed has been a most satisfactory one with us," writes H. D. Garwood, secretary of the Ebbert Seed Co., Rocky Ford, Colo., under date of June 14. "We have had a healthy increase in our mail-order business and also note an increase in the average size of the orders. Our contract vine seed orders show an increase of nearly 200 per cent over last season. To this date our growing season has been a most unfavorable one, it having been a cold, dry and extremely windy spring. Our growers never before have experienced so much trouble in getting a stand, some having planted the third time and all having had a great deal of replanting to do. Our season is about three weeks late, but with favorable weather from now on we look for average crops in most cases." The seedsman is always an optimist.

When we buy bulbs abroad they are paid for in pounds sterling instead of in dollars. When you go abroad your banker gives you a Traveler's Credit on London—not on New York, and you likewise pay tribute to England, whether you travel in Japan or Australia. This is because London is the banking center of the World. When the Bank of England changes the rate of interest, the World sits up and takes notice. Now, the Bank of England was founded by a Scotchman, primarily to keep the Kings supplied with war money, and incidentally maintain the usual commercial supremacy. The strength of this great and powerful institution is owing largely to the fact that the Englishman spends money in accordance with his "income" (pronounced "inkum"), which is merely the revenue or earnings of his capital without regard to his income. That's where the British are wise. They are safe. If American business men today would live within their income, there would be fewer automobiles and among florists less glass, but their capital would be greater and it would not be long before we had England beaten to a frazzle, even though some of our candy-faced damsels of codfish plutocracy are annually exported with million dollar jack-pots as a bonus for the bankrupt, monocle-eyed element of fancy British breed. It's about time the American heiresses made a mop of the dog-biscuit dukes and cleaned the earth, instead of licking their boots for a title. Invest in bulbs that will net you an income sufficient to warrant the investment, or don't invest at all. Horseshoe Brand cold storage Lily Bulbs are the kind that pay a revenue worth while.

PACIFIC COAST.

Spokane, Wash.—The florists of this city have organized a club, which will be known as the Spokane Greenhouse Men's Association. The officers are: President, H. E. Reimers; vice-president, W. S. Van Dorn, Post Falls, Idaho; secretary, W. J. Burnette, of Burnette Bros.; treasurer, Mr. Kelly. There are nine charter members.

A FRUITLESS HOLLY TREE.

Can an English holly tree be budded so as to become berried? It blossoms every year, but no berries form. The location is northwestern Oregon.

E. R. C.

It is to be presumed that if the English holly bears blossoms it will also bear fruit, and if it does not do so it may be that it is not yet old enough to set the fruit or it may be growing too quickly. The writer had a similar experience some years ago and brought the tree around nicely by root-pruning it early in the spring, as well as shortening in the top quite a bit at the same time. It has since that time borne heavily every year. It can be easily grafted, but such a proceeding should not be necessary when it has already blossomed. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

There is a general oversupply of stock and prices are on the decline. The major part of the receipts is consigned to the dump, as there seems to be no other way to dispose of it. Peonies are in full flower and of fine quality. Some of the Festiva maxima blooms measure eight inches across, but their keeping qualities are badly impaired and it is scarcely safe to send them out on orders.

Roses are the best sellers, on account of the numerous weddings, while carnations and sweet peas are a drug on the market. Gloxinias are about the only available plants, and asparagus and other greens are scarce.

Various Notes.

The graduating high school classes brought a considerable demand for flowers, although far below the standard of former years, owing to the profusion of outdoor blooms.

J. T. Dayton, representing the Madison Basketcraft Co., has been a recent visitor here. E. R. C.

It is reported that a small greenhouse will soon be erected at 1926 East Madison street by Wm. E. Dungery.

LAWN OVERRUN BY MOSS.

Kindly state what to use, in this Oregon climate, to eliminate moss from the lawn, as it is rapidly displacing the grass. Would a solution of lime and sulphur get results? The position is on an elevation, with an eastern exposure. E. R. C.

In Oregon, where there is an excess of moisture for quite a portion of the year, there is a tendency for moss to grow at the expense of the grass. This is especially noticeable in places where the soil has become somewhat soured or soggy from an excess of water that has stood for a long time on some particular spot. As the place spoken of is on an elevation, the chances are that the ground is naturally poor or the grass has been allowed to deteriorate from lack of nourishment.

The first thing to be done is to give the grass a good mulching of well-rotted manure, with about three shovelfuls of air-slaked lime well mixed in each barrowful. Lay this on rather thickly and see that it is evenly spread. If the grass is extremely thin, it would be well to rake it over completely before this and sow a few handfuls of grass seed before applying the mulching. Lime, sulphur and rock salt have all been recommended for the purpose, but the first named is the only one that can be depended on to sweeten the soil

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

While our eastern cousins have been sweltering in an unsuccessful effort to keep cool, San Franciscans have been wearing overcoats all day long in an effort to keep warm. We have seen so little of the sun during the month of June that we are beginning to wonder what a warm day would feel like, and cold winds have entirely displaced everything else except Pacific ocean fogs. As a consequence, although flowers are not especially plentiful, they are of better quality than those usually seen in the shops at this time. Sweet peas are really about all that are a drug in the market now. While these are popular and used in enormous quantities daily, the supply is so great that they can be bought at almost any price. Gladioli are somewhat more plentiful than they have been, but do not move well. Other kinds of outside stock are as usual. Business in the line of wedding decorations is fair and June is likely to be a shade better than the same month last year, if the good work is kept up.

Various Notes.

Adolph Ludemann is on a few weeks' trip to Oregon and Washington.

George Fitzgerald, recently of San Jose, Cal., is with the E. Gill Nursery Co., of West Berkeley, Cal.

P. McDonell, of Alden, is erecting a house for Asparagus plumosus.

I. J. Fraser is no longer connected with the Eden Vale Nursery Co., of Eden Vale, Cal.

Ferrari Bros. are remodeling several of their rose houses and will install a large heating plant to replace the one in use for the last few years.

George A. Putnam, a prominent horticulturist of Ignacio valley, near Martinez, has commenced suit in the Superior Court against the Oregon Nursery Co. for $1,624, the cost of a lot of nursery stock, which he claims was not as represented.

John Vallance, manager of the plant department of C. C. Morse & Co., is on a trip to Sacramento and vicinity.

Quite a number of local dealers are attending the sessions of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association, being held in San Jose, June 21 to 23.

YELLOW MARGUERITES.

I bought a lot of yellow marguerites and they grew great, coarse leaves, and either did not flower or the flowers were deformed. Can I take cuttings from them for another year and shall I take the fine cuttings or the coarse ones? A. L. S.

It is a common characteristic of the yellow marguerites to throw coarse growths, frequently blind. It is of no use trying to secure any cuttings at this season from either yellow or white varieties. Head the plants back and plant them outdoors. Better still, if you can spare a portion of your cold-frame, plant them out in it and water them occasionally through the summer. It is usually September before proper cuttings can be secured. These should be thin, rather than coarse, and it is of no use taking such as carry flower buds. If your plants persist in throwing blind wood, it will be far better to buy some young stock from one of the specialists in yellow marguerites. They are less easy to flower profitably than the white forms. C. W.

Chillicothe, Mo.—R. L. Isherwood recently received a box of a valuable variety of geraniums from Swanley, England.

Fischer's Grand Freesia Purity

¶Now is the time to order your stock of Freesia Purity. Be sure to ask your dealer for Fischer's guaranteed stock, grown by him and supplied to you in his original package. Then you will get the true, pure stock that has been grown in the open field with the object of growing good, vigorous bulbs, to give you good flowers, and not exhausted greenhouse bulbs that already have done duty for the flower market. Insist on getting his guaranteed stock, packed in muslin bags of 100, 250 and 500 bulbs, indorsed by his signature on a certificate of guarantee in each package.

Resolutions Adopted.

Wm. Pitkin's report for the legislative committee was the subject for prolonged discussion. Resolutions were adopted and ordered sent to each member of both houses of Congress, protesting against the so-called Symmons bill, originated by Prof. L. O. Howard, the government entomologist, by the terms of which it is proposed to give the Secretary of Agriculture arbitrary power to quarantine all nursery shipments from countries where nursery stock is infested with injurious insects or diseases. Resolutions were also adopted favoring a federal inspection law, so that the inspection be not centered in a one-man power. State inspection, now in effect, was approved. The legislative department was authorized in the different states to make test cases of state inspection laws. Protests were entered against state inspectors in Colorado and Montana condemning and destroying large numbers of trees, in enforcement of the state inspection law. The parcels post and 1 cent postage were favored.

Entertainment Features.

The principal features of the entertainment program were the Shaw banquet at the Southern hotel Thursday evening, June 15, and the steamer ride on the Mississippi the following afternoon. The will of the late Henry Shaw, founder of the Missouri Botanical Garden, provided funds for an annual banquet of horticulturists, and the director of the garden took the opportunity of giving the twenty-second of these events at a time when he could have the nurserymen as guests. Nearly 300 attended. William Trelease, director of Shaw's Garden, presided as toastmaster. He introduced the first speaker, J. H. Dayton, of Plainville, Ohio, president-elect of the association, who spoke on "Our Guests." Mr. Dayton accounted for his election on the ground that the association has adopted the custom of electing its officers on the basis of personal beauty rather than oratorical power. "Ourselves" was the second toast, and was responded to by Adolph Jaenicke. J. J. Beneke, secretary of the St. Louis Florists' Club, responded to the toast "Our Quarter-Centenary." "Our Parks" was responded to by Dwight F. Davis, park commissioner of St. Louis; "Our Opportunities," by J. W. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia.; and "Our Plans" by John H. Gundlach, president of the city council. Dr. J. C. Whitten, professor of horticulture in University of Missouri, also spoke.

The same evening the lady visitors were entertained at dinner at Delmar Garden and afterward taken to the theater.

After the adjournment of the convention June 16, the entire party was taken in hand by the entertainment committee on the steamer Alton for a trip down the river to Jefferson Barracks. Dinner was served on board and the dress parade at the Barracks was attended, the return trip to the city being made in the early evening.

June 17 a party of seventy-five visited Louisiana, Mo., as the guests of Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards Co. There was luncheon and speech-making.

Protective Associations.

The Retail Nurserymen's Protective Association held its annual meeting at the Southern hotel, St. Louis, June 14. The organization has had its usual successful year and the old officers all were reëlected, as follows: President, Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; vice-president, F. J. Stannard, Ottawa, Kan.; secretary and treasurer, Guy A. Bryant, Princeton, Ill.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Weather conditions have changed for the better within the last two weeks; the atmosphere is much cooler and we have also been favored with the much needed rain, which did not come a bit too soon. With the weather conditions more favorable, there has been a slight improvement in the quality of stock, although there is still plenty of room for greater improvement. While better in quality the supply is scarce, and it is at times an utter impossibility to meet the demand. Everything in the shape of a flower sold last week, and the scarcity complaint seemed to be general throughout this section of the state.

Carnations, while overabundant ten days ago, are exceptionally scarce just at present, and the demand is greater than the supply. Last week red carnations sold out clean, owing to the fair high school graduates, who carried large bunches of these blooms tied with smilax. Other schools used other varieties of flowers; so, taking it all in all, commencements were a big feature in last week's business.

June weddings are coming in rapid succession, consequently the demand runs good for pink and white roses, American Beauties and lily of the valley, while Rhea Reid and Richmond were cleaned out by the commencement demand.

Lilies were also a scarce article and this greatly inconvenienced the florists in getting out funeral orders, as last week there seemed to be a good demand along that line, and lilies seem

Various Notes.

Some of the cities around and about Dayton were visited by terrific wind and hail storms the early part of last week and much damage to property and glass was reported. One florist at Chillicothe, O., lost about $2,000 worth of glass. Fortunately, Dayton only got the leavings of the storms each time.

Mr. Skidelsky, of Skidelsky & Irwin Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week.

Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs, who has been spending several weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Bartholomew, has returned to her home, much improved in health.

Herbert Bartholomew, unfortunately, sprained his ankle while playing ball last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young, whose marriage took place at Vicksburg, Ga., June 7, are spending their honeymoon at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Young. The young couple will leave this week for Vicksburg, where they will make their home.

Vase of tea or H. T. roses, G. Augey, first; F. O. Johnson, second.

Collection rambler roses, H. Gaut, first.

Twelve sprays rambler rose, G. Augey, first.

Collection herbaceous flowers, H. Gaut, first.

Vase of peonies, G. Barton, first.

Vase of perennial delphinium, H. Gaut, first.

Vase of antirrhinum, H. Gaut, first.

Vase of flowering shrub, J. MacDonald, gardener to J. H. Otley, first.

Vase of ornamental foliage, G. Augey, first.

Six varieties of vegetables, F. Petroccia, gardener for A. G. Hodenpyle, first; J. MacDonald, second.

Three heads of lettuce, F. Petroccia, first.

Two cauliflowers, G. Barton, first.

Six varieties of strawberries, Felix Mense, first.

Twelve largest strawberries, F. O. Johnson, first.

Best dish any other outdoor fruit, H. Gaut, first.

Cultural certificates were awarded to A. Lahodny, gardener for T. A. Havemeyer, for a fine display of peonies and hydrangeas; to V. Cleres, gardener for F. L. Smithers, for three cucumbers; to F. Petroccia, for mushrooms.

Honorable mention was awarded to J. F. Johnstone for a vase of Trachelium cæruleum, and to F. Petroccia for lettuce.

In the course of the business meeting which followed, F. O. Johnson was elected to active membership. Mrs. Stern offered a silver cup for dahlias. The society's prize at the July meeting will be for sweet peas, vases of twenty-five, pink, white and any other color. J. Ingram also offered his prize of $5 for a collection of twelve varieties of sweet peas, twenty-five sprays of each, which was not competed for in the June show.

Des Moines, Ia.—The J. S. Wilson Floral Co. is building two more greenhouses at its location on Thirty-fifth street, between Ingersoll and Woodland avenues, at an estimated cost of $4,000.

Indianapolis, Ind.—If the plans made by a commission appointed by the State Board of Horticulture are carried into effect, the State Florists' Association and the Indiana Horticultural Society will join this fall in holding a flower and apple show in this city.

TORONTO.

The Market.

This has been a record month for weddings. Nearly all the retailers report bigger sales than ever before and are well pleased with the business done. Every day one sees mother and daughter in the stores arranging for "the big event." This city has seen several extra large events this month and the orders for decorations have been heavy. White peonies are much in demand for decorative work and it is well that the supply is good. Roses are arriving in better condition than is usual at this time of year. Bride and Maid are excellent; so, also, is Richmond. Beauty, however, seems poor. Sweet peas and valley are still coming in plentifully and in first-class condition. The stems are long and the blooms excellent. Carnations are good for this season of the year. A few oriental poppies are arriving and are eagerly sought.

There is still a little being done in the bedding plant trade. The season has been a particularly good one.

Various Notes.

William Fendley, of Brampton, is putting some fine valley on the market.

W. J. Lawrence, Eglinton, is busy replanting.

The Bedford Park Floral Co. has just about finished replanting and reports stock in excellent condition. This company has put up another house, 25x250. It will be used for roses.

Miller & Sons and the Dale Estate are putting some fine carnations on the market.

Frank Duffert has an enormous crop of peonies.

John Weber is already sending in some fine fuchsias. He still has a few obconicas left, which are in good shape.

Mrs. Ford already notices the increased volume of business since moving to near her old stand on Yonge street.

A. E. Moore is erecting another house at his new plant in Georgetown.

Fred H. Lemon & Co., Richmond, Ind.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There has been considerable life in the cut flower business during the last week. In fact, there has been a shortage of good roses all the week. The cause of this was a number of good weddings and the regular run of school commencements. The weather, though too cold for comfort, has at least kept roses and carnations from getting worse, and they really did show some improvement, only the quantity coming in continues to get less as the season advances.

Various Notes.

George Schomer, of Connellsville, Pa., has had the sad misfortune of losing a son, 16 years old, who died June 19, of typhoid fever. Mrs. Schomer and three of the children are still confined to bed with the same disease.

Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was a visitor last week. Hoo-Hoo.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

August S. Swanson, one of the oldest florists in St. Paul and one of the most widely known, has sold out to the Merriam Park Floral Co., composed of Jerry P. Jergenson, Max Kaizer and O. Noerquist, all young men of thorough experience in the various branches of the business. Mr. Swanson is leaving the flower business, after twenty-two years' active connection with it, to give his undivided attention to the coal properties in the Yukon district owned and operated by the Five Fingers Coal Co., of which he is president. He is leaving within a few days for Dawson for the purpose of inspecting the property and familiarizing himself with the conditions in that territory.

Rockford, Ill.—Mrs. J. W. Ingalls, wife of John W. Ingalls, underwent a serious operation at the city hospital Friday morning, June 16, and is getting along nicely.

Zanesville, O.—Hugh Imlay, who graduated last week from the University of Illinois, will spend the summer here, but in the autumn plans to take up landscape work in the east.

MELODY, own root, from 2½-in. pots, $6.00 per dozen; $30.00 per 100; $70.00 per 250; $250.00 per 1000.

DOUBLE PINK KILLARNEY, own root, $4.00 per dozen; $20.00 per 100; $40.00 per 250; $150.00 per 1000. Grafted plants on Dickson's Manetti stock, $10.00 extra per 100.

SAGE AND CANNAS

Nothing is more attractive in garden or lawn than a bed of Scarlet Sage, the fiery red we grow, namely, the true Bonfire or Clara Bedman varieties.

We have a fine new sort of medium height, 4-in. pots, purposely raised for our customers for their summer trade. Price, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Our other attraction is Large Bronze Leaved Cannas; they have no equal, if used in the center of the bed in connection with Scarlet Sage as a border. Nothing looks more attractive than a bronze center and a fiery red border. We provided especially for the beds by growing the Cannas, Robusta and Egandale; both have proved good varieties. The Robusta has large leaves and is now 2½ to 3 feet high (the Canna, to make it attractive, must be higher than the Sage), 4-in. pots only, $7.00 per 100. We also have a fine stock of the best green leaved varieties in 4-in. pots of the same size, at $7.00 per 100. Alphonse Bouvier, Richard Wallace, Austria, Maiden Blush, Mt. Blanc, Mme. Crozy, Crimson Bedder, J. D. Eisele, etc.

OF THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO., EDGEBROOK, CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW BEDFORD.

The Market.

The usual summer dullness prevails here. Flowers are quite plentiful. Funeral work continues good. Carnations retail at 50 cents per dozen; a few sell at 25 cents per dozen; roses at $1 and $1.50 per dozen; sweet peas at $1 per hundred. Gladioli are now being shown in the florists' windows; $1.50 per dozen is the retail price. Bedding plants continue to sell well.

We are having warm weather here. All the young carnation stock is planted out. The street fakers were selling carnations at 1 cent each on Saturday, June 17. Outdoor roses are now in full bloom. Garden work is still in full swing, but by the end of the month it will have slackened off somewhat. We need rain badly.

Various Notes.

The annual rose show of the New Bedford Horticultural Society will be held in the last part of this month. Great interest is being shown in this event.

R. H. Woodhouse and his son, John, sail June 24 for Londonderry on the steamer Caledonia, for a three months' visit.

W. L.

WEST GROVE, PA.

American Pillar roses are now in full bloom at the nursery of the Conard & Jones Co. One lot was planted last June, another July 12, from 2½-inch pots, and each is a mass of bloom. Anyone seeing these plants can easily understand why this variety created such a sensation at the Temple Show, London, last year. Alongside of these is a row of Hiawatha planted at the same time, under similar conditions. It would be interesting for rose lovers to note and see the difference in these varieties. Philadelphia is also showing up grandly. The recent rains have brought out the color wonderfully.

HOW ABOUT YOUR EMPTY BENCHES?

After Decoration Day you have empty benches. Will it pay you to have them empty? Take a few minutes to think and consider which will pay the best. Chrysanthemums? No, I know something better. I plant a bench or two with asters, in July, and in August I cut them. That gives me time to refill my benches with a fine lot of fall and holiday plants, such as cyclamen, ferns and poinsettias, roses and other plants suitable for my fall business. I am going to write an order right away to Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, for his GIANT CREGO ASTER. It is the best early branching cut aster in the world.

Yes, we have it for sale in three separate colors; 20,000 of them in purple, rose and pink, very strong plants, 2½-inch pots, $3.00 100; $25.00 1000.

The Market.

A large number of funerals last week kept the florists busy. Roses and carnations are plentiful, but of only fair quality. My Maryland seems to stand the heat well, the flowers being large and of fine color. Bridesmaid is of good color, but small.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel has arrived home after his long trip. His firm is cutting lots of carnations. They are drying off part of the roses and have some already making a nice growth. The carnations in the field look well.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has had a busy time with funerals and June commencements. This company is cutting lots of roses and carnations of good quality and has received some plants of the new rose, Hilda, and will give it a trial.

Ben Kramer has something to do at all times. Mrs. Kramer was visiting out of the city last week.

Royston & Fenton are giving a part of their roses a rest and will have some started over this week. E. L. F.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club it was announced that arrangements had been completed for the annual outing to Chesapeake Beach, which will occur July 26. It was stated that a program had been worked out which promises to make the trip the most enjoyable one ever taken by the members of the organization.

Superintendent W. R. Smith of the Botanic Gardens made an address, in which he declared that Washington is the most beautiful of the world's cities. The club indorsed the proposed Sunday closing law and passed resolutions on the death of Edward A. Moseley, late secretary of the interstate commerce commission.

GERANIUMS

You may call them our hobby, our specialty, our leader, or whatever you like. We have an immense stock ready for immediate shipment from 3-in. pots at $3.00 per 100, in the best assortment of standard sorts in the country. Or we will book your order for your next season's supply at $18.50 per 1000 from 2-in. pots. Rather better than bothering about carrying your stock and propagating them yourself, don't you think?

NOVELTIES: For $5.00 we will send one each of fifty sorts, our selection of 1910 novelties, including the best of Bruant's, Lemoine's and Boucharlat's, the acknowledged European leaders among geranium originators.

Ivy geraniums, scented geraniums and variegated geraniums in good variety—all described and listed in our Geranium Catalogue.

We always have on hand a stock of Coleus, Alternantheras, Achyranthes, Heliotropes, etc., at $2.00 per 100 for 2-in. and $3.00 per 100 for 3-in.

¶We are booking orders for CANNAS and DAHLIA ROOTS for next season

MR. BAUR'S PLANS.

A large proportion of the members of the trade have by this time been informed, through the announcements in The Review and otherwise, of the dissolution of the firm of Baur & Smith, Indianapolis, Ind. The firm was composed of A. F. J. Baur and F. S. Smith. Mr. Baur will hereafter conduct a wholesale business only, with his office at 3800 Rockwood avenue, Indianapolis. Mr. Smith will continue in the retail business at 330 West Thirty-eighth street.

Mr. Baur is so well known, both in this country and abroad, as a carnation specialist and as secretary of the American Carnation Society, that hosts of readers will be greatly interested in his plans for the future. He says:

"I have taken over the entire property known as Baur & Smith's new place and will carry on a wholesale business along the same lines as the old firm has been doing, except that the list of plants carried will be more restricted. I will specialize in carnations, chrysanthemums, geraniums and poinsettias. The raising of new carnations will continue to be a leading feature with me. I am propagating large quantities of poinsettias and am preparing a big stock of geraniums for next fall and winter. Only a few varieties of geraniums will be grown, but they will be the best in the various colors for bedding.

"I have always held that no medium sized place can carry on both wholesale and retail business satisfactorily, and I intend to confine my business to the wholesale end. I have all the stock of new carnations formerly owned by the old firm, and will disseminate those which are worthy.

"No new glass will be put up this season, but I have glass enough on the place, bought last winter, to nearly double the place in 1912. I intend to push the business more than it has been in the past."

BUILDING A LETTUCE HOUSE.

We should like to know how to construct, plant and heat an up-to-date greenhouse for the growing of lettuce for market. We wish especially to get information relative to the heating.

A. L. W. C.

Many lettuce houses are now built without any benches for the plants, and the lettuce is grown on the ground, just as in the garden. Hot water heat is used quite generally by lettuce growers and I believe is the most satisfactory heat for the purpose. The pipes are hung on the walls. Where raised benches are used, however, the pipes are usually hung underneath the benches. Considering everything, I would advise houses without benches, but with good, high eave plates or gutters. I would not recommend low houses for anything.

The style or size of house does not matter much, but I consider an equal-span house, running east and west, a little the best. The width should be in proportion to the length, etc. For instance, if the length is to be only 100 feet, I would not make an extremely wide house—say, about twenty-five feet. If it is to be 200 feet long, it might be thirty feet wide, and so on.

The arrangement of the piping could be better determined after the size and general plan of the house are decided upon. The greenhouse material companies often furnish valuable suggestions to those who wish to build.

ASPARAGUS IN THE GARDEN.

I wish to plant some asparagus in the garden and should like to get a good variety. Please give me some idea, also, of how and when to plant it.

R. P.

Palmetto and Bonvallet's Giant are both fine varieties of asparagus. I do not know of any that can excel them.

It is too late now to transplant the plants. This should be done early in the spring. Get one-year-old roots and plant them deep, say three or four inches below the surface. You could plant seed now and have your own yearling plants next spring, but it is getting late and they would need water frequently to get them to do well. For a small bed, put them 2x3 feet apart. In my large fields I plant them four feet each way.

EARLY CABBAGE PLANTS.

Please give directions for starting and wintering early cabbage plants in coldframes, for sale or for planting out in the spring.

F. E. S.

I never wintered cabbage over in coldframes and do not believe in it. They come up quickly in the spring and are perfectly healthy and not stunted or hard; consequently they go far ahead of the fall planted seedlings. In South Carolina they are left outside all winter, and one year I bought a lot of these plants, but do not want any more. They were stunted and hard. My own plants did much better.

TO EXHIBITORS and TRUCKERS

"VEGETABLES, SALADING, HERBS, their Cultivation for Exhibition and Home Use." An English work by Edwin Beckett, V. M. H., F. R. H. S. Member of the Royal Horticultural Society's fruit and vegetable committee, winner of numerous cups and gold medals in highest competition, and one of the greatest exhibitors of the age. Each vegetable is given an exhaustive treatise in a separate chapter, followed by another special chapter on each for exhibition purposes, composts, methods and treatment. Also what varieties will beat others in limited collections, packing and shipping for exhibition.

Forcing of all vegetables under glass, temperatures and composts. The methods of setting up collections are Mr. Beckett's own inventions, and all illustrations are actual photographs taken on the show bench. The special methods of cultivation for exhibition as contained in this work are perfectly adaptable to this country, but intending purchasers Please Note, the monthly calendar of seed sowing is no good here, as climatic conditions make planting seasons diverse. A splendid common sense work, thoroughly practical, simply worded. No theories. The practice of a lifetime's success in competition. I guarantee this the greatest work ever issued on the subject of exhibition. Nearly 400 pages. Price, $2.00 postpaid.

Greenhouse Heating.

HEAT FOR LETTUCE HOUSE.

We wish to ask you how to pipe our greenhouse for steam heat. The house is 20x100 feet. There are two feet of glass in the sides and the south end is all glass. There are raised benches. Can we use 1¼-inch pipe? We want to grow lettuce in the fall and winter, and potted plants in spring and summer. We are located in northeastern Ohio. L. A. E. & S.

There will be no difficulty about using 1¼-inch pipe for the coils and return pipes. The main feed pipe from the boiler should be 2-inch. This pipe should branch at the end of the house into two 1½-inch pipes to connect with the coils, of which there should be one on each side wall, with five 1¼-inch pipes in each. These should run around the south end to the center, or to the door if there is one. The coils should be given a slight fall, and from the end of each there should be a connection with a 1¼-inch pipe to carry the drip back to the boiler. There should be an air cock in the end of each coil. This piping should give a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees in zero weather.

DOES NOT HEAT EVENLY.

At present we have one greenhouse, running east and west. We expect to extend this house and also to build another house, parallel with the present one, but detached from it. No. 1 is the present greenhouse, a carnation house, erected in 1909. It is 42x150 feet, seven feet high to the eaves and eighteen feet to the ridge, with three feet of glass in each side and glass ends. This house does not heat evenly, but has a temperature of 50 degrees near the boiler and 60 degrees at the opposite end. It contains twenty-eight 2-inch pipes, six of them under each of the outside beds and four under each of the other four beds. The water is carried to the far end by one 4-inch overhead flow, which is highest just over the boiler and is connected at the far end with manifolds under the beds, for the 2-inch returns. How can we make the system heat more evenly? We want a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees throughout the house, as we grow only carnations in it.

House No. 2 is a proposed 100-foot extension to house No. 1. It will be built next year and will be used for carnations. No. 3 is a proposed new house for roses, parallel with No. 1, as already stated, but not connected. It will be 42x250, with walls of the same height and the same construction as in house No. 1. It will require a temperature of 55 to 65 degrees. It will contain five beds, each six feet wide and extending the full length of the house except the walks at each end. We wish to heat with 2-inch pipes under the benches. How can we adjust the piping so as to get an even temperature in all parts of the house? Please tell us how to arrange the flows, tank, valves, etc.

At present we have one boiler, at the west end of house No. 1. It is an old Ideal boiler, manufactured by the American Radiator Co. We expect to install a new 11-section Mills boiler between the west ends of the two houses, and to pipe this boiler so we

Dear Sir:—

You ask to explain about the Morehead Traps. I am so well pleased with them and don't see how I could get along without them. I have two No. 3 Traps. My houses are on the level, although I have just a little fall to the receiver. My returns are 2-in.; main, 4-in., 100 ft.; 12,600 feet 1¼, 2200 ft. 2-in. My boilers, one 60 and one 80 horse-power; my houses are 7 ft. to gutter and I heat 60,000 square feet. I have never had any trouble with keeping my houses warm since I had the Morehead Steam Trap.

Best wishes,
Yours truly,

D. & S.

The question states that one 4-inch flow and twenty-eight 2-inch returns are used to heat a house 42x150 feet. From this it will be seen that the 4-inch flow has to supply about 2,200 square feet of radiating surface; also that there is the equivalent of thirty 2-inch pipes in a house forty-two feet wide, which would be sufficient to heat the house to 63 degrees if the piping is properly arranged.

The reason why the temperature varies at the different ends of the house is because it is not possible to properly supply twenty-eight 2-inch pipes with a 4-inch flow pipe, and consequently the water cools rapidly in going the length of the house. As already stated, the radiation in the house

Test at 32° below zero; Kroeschell Boiler easy to fire with soft coal

I have 7800 sq. ft. of glass; this boiler would take care of about two greenhouses of the same size. I maintain temperatures from 50° to 80°—did not have the least bit of trouble when thermometer was 32° below zero. In zero weather fired at half past nine in the evening, went to bed, slept all night, got up at five in the morning and found a good fire at that hour. The boiler is giving the very best of satisfaction. Yours is the first hot water boiler I have had in use, but have fired steam boilers of different makes. The Kroeschell is certainly the best and quickest-heating boiler that I have had anything to do with. As to the Kroeschell Generator, I would take no amount of money for it; I can run the water above boiling point and have no trouble. I give your boiler, generator and piping system the highest praise. F. H. Hamilton, R. F. D. No. 3, Robbinsdale, Minn.

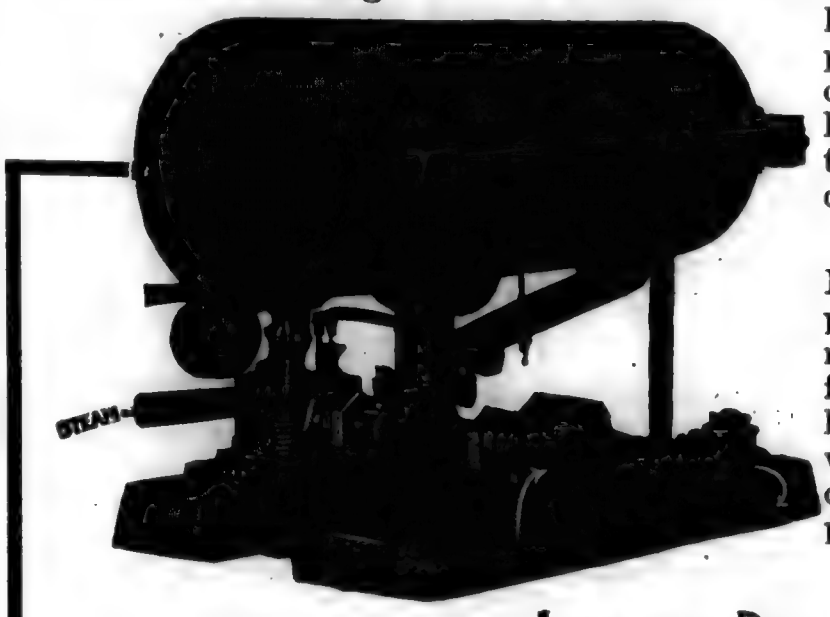
would be sufficient to maintain nearly 65 degrees, and if 50 degrees is all that is required, the removal of eight or ten of the pipes would bring the radiation down where it should be, and, as the main could then supply these fairly well, the temperature would be much more uniform. An even better way to pipe the house would be to put in five 2½-inch flow pipes and twenty 2-inch returns. Or, if house No. 2 is to be piped through the same coils, use four 3-inch flows and twenty 2-inch returns running through both houses, to secure 55 degrees.

For the rose house, 42x250 feet, use five 3-inch flows and twenty-five 2-inch returns. Connect the boilers by means of one 6-inch or two 5-inch flows, and returns of the same size. Connect the expansion pipes with the highest part of the flow and take off the mains to the different houses. Run these with a slight fall through the houses and distribute them on the walls and posts or suspend them from the roof, as will be found most convenient. Also give the returns a drop of one inch in twenty feet.

RADIATION IN DWELLINGS.

In the reply to J. F. C., in The Review of June 15, page 78, an error occurred in giving the formula for estimating the radiation required in the dwelling. It should have read: For the dwelling use as many square feet of radiating surface as there are square feet of exposed glass, plus ten per cent of the area of exposed wall surface, or five per cent of the wall surface when adjacent to an unheated room, plus one per cent of the cubic contents of the room.



MONTANA HOUSES AND LEAN-TO.

What quantity of 2-inch piping, for hot water, will be required to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in houses eighteen feet wide and seven feet high to the gutter, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero? Please state, also, what piping is necessary for a temperature of 60 degrees in a lean-to house eight feet wide and four feet high to the gutter. A. R. S.

The question does not state the length of the houses, or the amount of glass, if any, in the side walls, but the letterhead shows two houses which appear to be about 100 feet long and to have about four feet of glass in the wall which shows in the picture. For such a house, eighteen feet wide, it will be

The Market.

With plenty of work in the various lines, market conditions have been quite satisfactory. While stock was cleaned up every day, the supply the next day would be great enough to meet all demands. Valley and sweet peas, owing to the numerous June weddings, found ready sale. Roses, too, came into prominence, and the supply of these, in extra good quality, was just about equal to the demand. Good carnations are becoming scarcer from day to day, due, no doubt, to the recent hot spell, which took the "tuck" out of most of the indoor stock. Lilies, which have been hanging fire for some time, are again holding their own. The new crop of common ferns is of good quality; in fact, taking it all in all, the green goods market is well supplied.

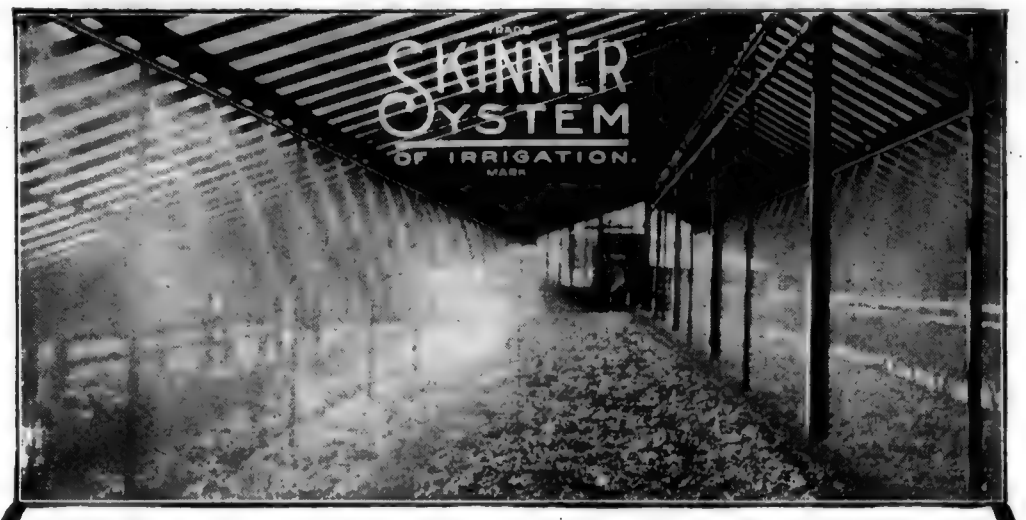
All outdoor crops are looking fine, owing to the bounteous rains within the last fortnight.

This week ought to be a good one, as most of the commencement exercises take place now. Even though there are rules prohibiting the custom of sending flowers for these occasions, the florists have found that these rules have had little or no effect.

Various Notes.

The J. Sherer Co., which conducted a flower store on Wisconsin street for about a year, has again transferred the property to James Chacona, who was proprietor previous to his trip to his native land.

John Arnold, whose greenhouses are located at Port Washington and Green Bay roads, will, as soon as the rush is over, erect an apartment building on his premises. This will necessitate the removal of one of his greenhouses.



The thirty-third convention of the National Singers' Society will be held in this city June 23 to 26, and quite a few who are connected with the florists' business will be met here then. A great deal of cedar wreathing will be used for this occasion.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. reports an extra good week in shipping trade.

At the establishment of the C. C. Pollworth Co. there seems to be no letup; business is rushing all the time.

"It was one continual rush all last week, filling orders for all occasions," is the report of the Currie Bros. Co., and, with the graduation exercises this week, they expect to keep on hustling.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Last week was one of the most disagreeable in the history of June, with continuous heavy rains and chilly nights, a direct reversal of the excessive heat at the beginning of the month. This being the commencement season, however, there was more activity than would otherwise have been the case, and a large number of weddings and receptions, with a good demand for funeral work, all contributed to rounding out a good week.

The unseasonable weather has been injurious to bedding stock, and there is a good demand for plants to replace those previously set out, which have failed to start off well, but the local supply of good, sturdy plants is nearly exhausted.

One of the noticeable improvements this season has been the large number of rose bushes that have been sold.

Various Notes.

This city was visited by a disastrous hail storm, Monday, June 12. Nearly one-half of the florists were hard hit, some places losing three-fourths of their glass. Isaac H. Moss suffered damage amounting to $8,000, James A. Hamilton lost nearly $10,000, and F. C. Bauer, Stevenson Bros., M. Thau, G. M. Cook and C. J. Gregorius were also sufferers.

The heaviest storm was around Govanstown and Towson, where the hailstones were as large as walnuts. Thousands of dollars' worth of plants were ruined by the falling glass. Carnations and all kinds of outdoor plants were mowed to the ground and shrubbery looked as though it had just been pruned. There is a short supply of glass in Baltimore and a good deal of it will be ordered from out of town.

Q.

A. Spath, Jr., & Son, at Embla Park, in this city, report considerable damage to their greenhouses from the terrific hail storm of Monday evening, June 12. About 1,500 panes, 16x18, were broken out, but practically no growing stock was damaged, as the storm came just at the time when the greenhouses were empty, prior to being filled with mums and other fall crops. The damage was estimated at about $500. An order has been placed with the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. for sixty-one boxes of 16x18 glass, with the putty and other necessary materials, and the work of rebuilding will begin at once. This firm has been in Embla Park for only two years.

Derry, N. H.—W. J. Kingsbury's Franklin street greenhouses were well patronized during the Memorial season. Every flower that he could cut was required for bouquets.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business remains good. This month, as usual, has called for a great variety of work. The commencements are creating their usual big demand for stock. Weddings are also causing a heavy demand, although the decorations are not so numerous this year.

The extremely hot weather in May had its effect on the quality of stock. Roses are small; so, also, are carnations. Peonies have been good.

Club Meeting.

A well attended meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held June 19. The entertainment committee was authorized to make arrangements for holding the outing at Bois Blanc, the date to be announced later. An invitation was received from the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange to be the guests of the company sometime in the near future.

H. B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, addressed the members on the work at the experimental station at Urbana, Ill. He spoke of the untiring efforts of the Illinois florists to bring about the appropriation by the legislature for carrying on this valuable work. Twenty million square feet of glass are devoted to the growing of plants and flowers in the state of Illinois alone. In 1907 the sum of $15,000 was appropriated and in 1909 the sum of $16,000, showing that Illinois is doing its share for floriculture. Mr. Dorner is very enthusiastic about his work and his talk was most instructive and interesting.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyer's have discontinued their branch at 211 Woodward avenue. Work on their new store is progressing rapidly.

Mrs. Sullivan, though steadily improving, is still at St. Mary's hospital. This is the sixth week of her stay there.

J. J. Karins and Samuel Seligman were elected members of the Detroit Florists' Club.

Another baby boy arrived at the home of Albert Pochelon. I say another, because this is the third boy.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

All kinds of stock are scarce. Roses are small and carnations are not plentiful and the prices on them are high. Outdoor stock is also scarce, as it is too dry and hot. No rain has fallen for many weeks, causing grass and shrubbery to die in the yards. Sweet peas will be a failure, green aphis having a great hold on them, and the hot wind is killing the stems. Gladioli are not in yet and few are expected. Asters, if not watered, are burning in the fields.

Various Notes.

The Rock Flower Co. is making large preparations to grow violets, a great many of which will be grown in coldframes. Their roses are looking fine and a big force of men are busy getting in new soil. Some of the soil has been shipped in from quite a distance and a test will be made to see if better stock cannot be grown in Missouri. The carnations in the field are looking fine, considering the exceedingly dry weather. They are growing their asters under tall sheds shaded with laths. These laths are woven with wire and can be handled easily; the wind cannot throw them and the sun has no effect on the laths, as the wire holds them straight. Their hydrangeas, in bloom under some large shade trees, are extra fine. The large lake of water is about exhausted and the city's 8-inch main will soon be tapped to supply them.

Charles Humfeld, of Clay Center, Kan., made us a visit last week. He reports dry weather and excessive heat. His carnations are in full crop at present. They are just finishing up a 15-acre patch of sweet potatoes. He is using a machine this year that plants and waters each plant as fast as the two horses draw it.

E. H. Frandsen reports a good spring trade. He is now looking up material for one more greenhouse.

Andy Arnold reports that he is about all sold out. He had a splendid trade.

Jacob Tobler did not go to the market square this season to sell his plants. His home trade takes all he can grow. His business was fine.

Humfeld-Orear Floral Co. reports a splendid trade. They had hard work to find enough plants to supply the demand.

L. Orear is one of the happiest men in the southern part of the city. An eight and one-half pound boy arrived June 11. Mother and baby are doing well. The boy's grandpa says that it is the finest boy he has ever seen.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

CAXTON BUILDING

508 South Dearborn Street

CHICAGO

Advertising forms close

TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Eldora, Ia.—R. C. Hindeman, a landscape gardener from Cleveland, has become manager for the Polland Floral Co.

Reno, Nev.—According to a recent newspaper report, Fred J. Fischer now has a reputation not only as a good florist, but an excellent amateur detective, as he shrewdly managed the arrest of Henry Stewart Harris, of Salt Lake City, who had defrauded many business men by the use of forged checks.

THE MODERN FLOWER SHOP

HINTS ON A TIMELY TOPIC.

Beauty a Business Asset.

Only a few years ago a store was just a store, nothing more. One iron-clad type was followed for drugs or dry goods, furniture or furnishings. But nowadays stores are designed with direct reference to the business to be carried on. The chain of stores corporation adopts a distinctive front, and one quite different from that which would be wanted by a decorator; the ladies' tea room tears out the front the drug store used and puts in one as different as possible, with interior trimmings to match.

Why? Because the up-to-date business man thoroughly understands that individuality, if not beauty, is a commercial asset. So he pays skilled artists to design his advertisements, and skilled architects to design his building. He knows the public is not attracted by ugly things.

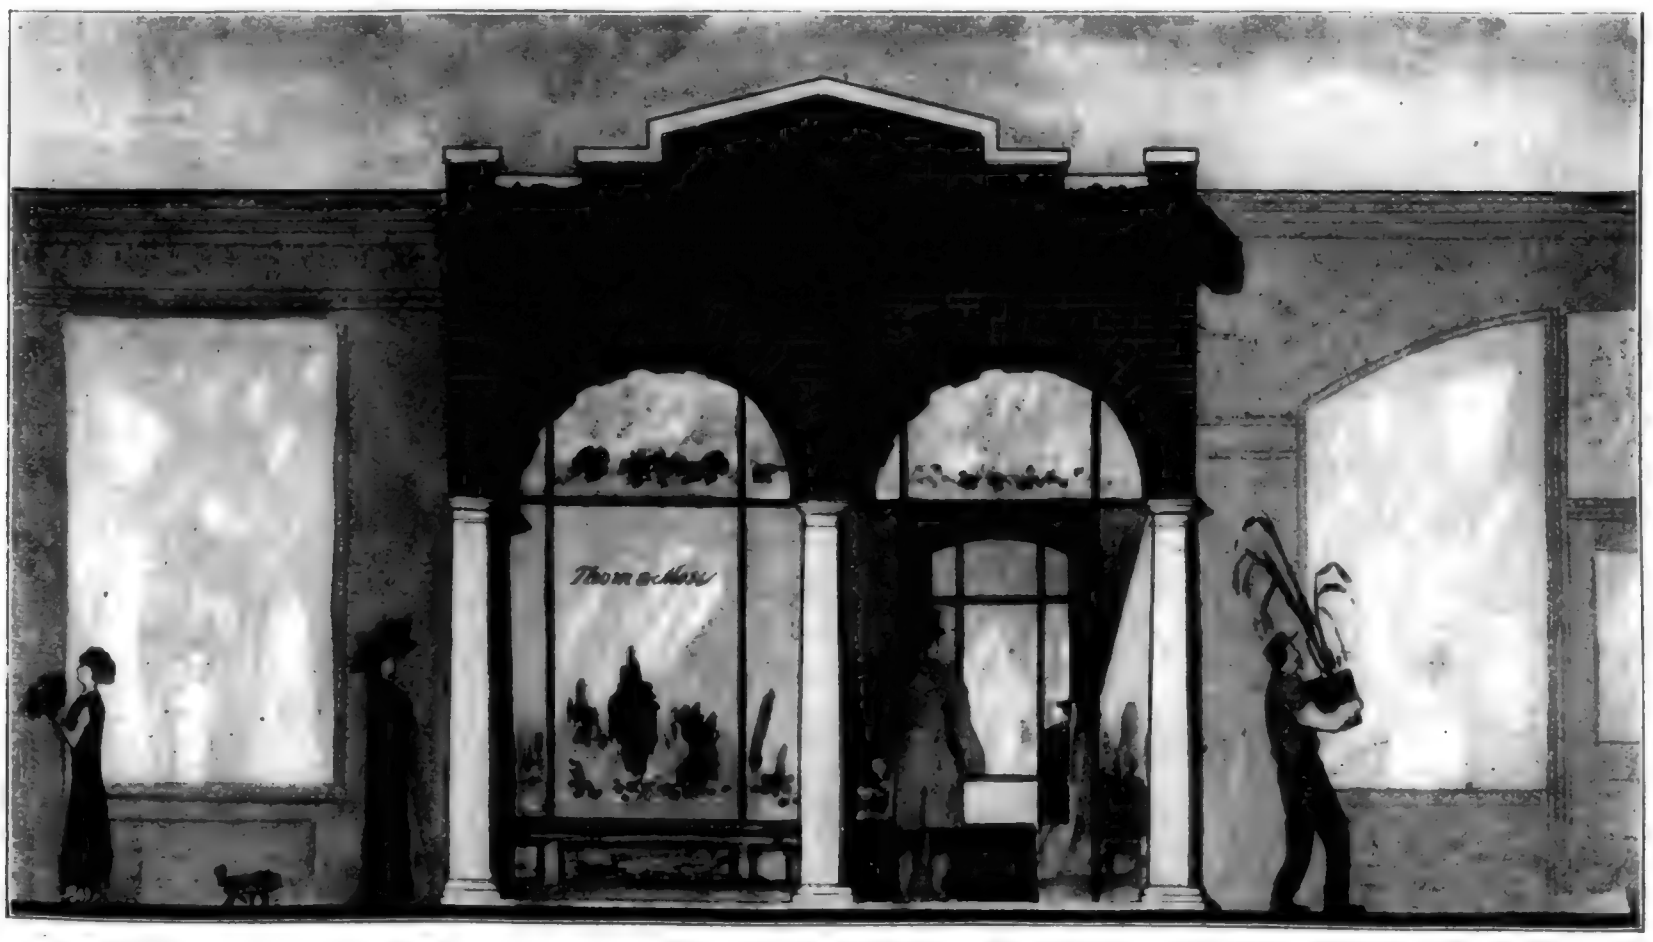
Improvement in Flower Shops.

It is only within recent years that retail florists have given thought to special construction to meet the needs of their individual line of business. In the beginning of retail flower selling in practically all the smaller cities, the florist merely rents a vacant store, puts in some fixtures and is ready for business. Eventually, however, the florist comes to want something distinctive. Then he either remodels an old building or builds one suited to his need.

So here's a flower shop carefully planned for beauty and service. With slight modifications the plans can be adapted to any special circumstance; the store either can be erected from the bottom up, complete, or some of the ideas suggested can be embodied in the alteration of a building already standing.

A Distinctive Front.

The flower store front should break away from the commonplace lines of the other buildings in the block; the dead level of commonplaceness never attracts special attention. Therefore, in the plan, three cream white columns carry the arches and brick work—tapestry or some similar rough, picturesque brick is proper here. Then, just below the coping, a line of brackets carries a long, copper-covered box, which can be filled with evergreens in winter and planted with geraniums and vincas, or with any number of other suitable subjects, for summer decoration.



A flower shop should be a flower shop!

The Interior.

Inside comes a salesroom. The interior fixtures must be planned in accordance with the florist's own ideas. Many modern flower shops contain no counters, while some have no ice-box, the stock being displayed on tables. But the average store in small cities will want shelving or display cases along one wall, with a counter in front, and the glass-fronted refrigerator on the other side of the store.

In the present instance leaded glass doors across the rear add to the attractiveness of the interior. At the left one pair of these doors opens upon a small yard; the other pair, into a conservatory. A variation from the plan would be to put a workroom at the rear, instead of in the basement, as is intended in the present instance. If the workroom were to go at the rear, it would be wise to place a specially built refrigerator across the store at the partition dividing salesroom from workroom. In this case plate glass doors in front would give the salesmen access to the stock, while doors in the rear of the box would permit access from the workroom. Also, the box would be built so that ice would be put in from the workroom, thereby saving much disorder which cannot be escaped if the box is located wholly within the salesroom.

One of the greatest conveniences a flower store can have, however, is a conservatory. If decorating is part of the florist's business, he must have some place to store his plants. Also, stock for sale keeps better, looks better and sells better if kept in a greenhouse, instead of in the store. At holiday times, especially, such a convenience is of value.

But these features depend entirely on the width and depth of the lot. The plans must be altered to meet the needs of each individual case. But the style of construction can be followed, no matter what the adaptations.

Details of Construction.

Now for more definite detail of construction. The wood columns in the Section Plan for Flower Store.

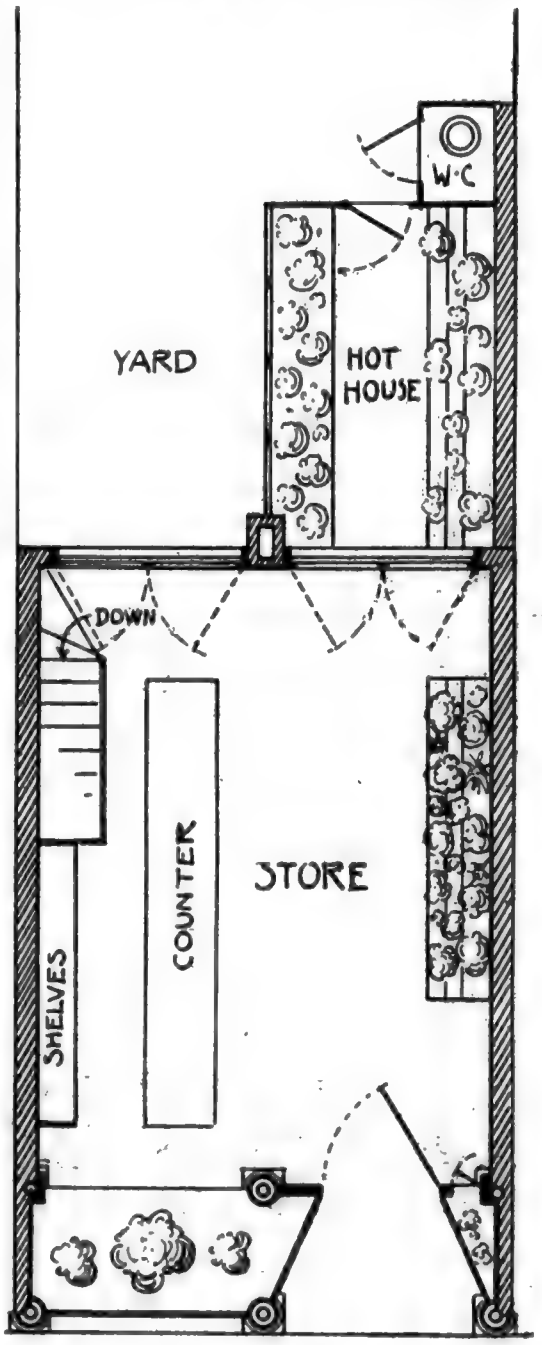
front are merely ornamental coverings, the actual load being carried by slender pillars of iron pipe within the hollow woodwork. Plate glass with green copper frames makes the bulk window. The panel work at the base of this is of this same green copper. At the line of the springing of the arches an upper floor is laid in the window. Here more plants can be set or fancy articles from the stock of florists' supplies can be shown. Over to the right of the entrance is a small show window, a plate glass mirror backing this up and doubling its effectiveness. The lot width has been taken as sixteen feet, about the average size of small, single-store frontages. There is no reason, however, why a front of greater size might not use this design by adding a third archway, holding another show window.



The window-box over the arches is covered by green copper. An iron water pipe full of small holes runs along this, with valve connection with the plumbing, giving the means of watering the plants in the box without effort. The box should have proper drainage, surplus water escaping by a drain pipe to the roof gutter.

Instead of a flat roof, we have one with considerable pitch. This allows an effective arching of the ceiling, far more beautiful than the usual level affair, and less expensive, since the side walls of the building may be kept comparatively low.

Workroom and Conservatory.

There is nothing of note about the basement, save that it extends under the sidewalk and is lighted by prism glass. Here the workroom and storage rooms will be located, if it is more convenient to place the workroom there than to extend the building and locate it on the street level. In the basement, also, is a small hot water heater to warm store and conservatory.

One point about the conservatory: Its location at left or right will depend naturally on the exposure, and the elaborateness of the construction will depend on the view from the street. If placed on the opposite side of the rear entrance from the one shown, it would be well if the entrance of the store also should be set over. This cannot be done if the store happens to be on the corner, but in that case a number of other modifications will be necessary. The point in having the store entrance directly opposite the doors to the conservatory is to provide as long a view as possible for the customer opening the door.

Floor Plan for Flower Store.
(Scale ⅛-inch to one foot)

Color Scheme and Lighting.

The outside color scheme is in three tones: Dark brownish-red bricks, verdigris-green copper and cream white columns. The inside, however, is buff, sand-finished plaster and white enamel. But the floor should be of large, square red tiles. These tiles, though, should not extend behind the counter, if there is one. Nothing but ordinary pine flooring goes there, else the sales people will be needlessly lamed and tired from standing on a hard, inelastic surface.

The lighting question deserves careful consideration, but it depends much on local conditions. At any rate, there should be a series of small electric bulbs, green and white alternately, along between the brackets of the window-box over the front. These lights will be extremely effective peeping through the foliage of the trailing plants. For the windows small Tungsten lamps should be set in reflectors along the top, to throw the illumination downward and not outward, into the eyes of passers-by. Within the store a line of similar lamps could be hidden over the cornice, casting their light up against the arched ceiling, from which it is then reflected down. This method is being used very successfully in factories, where it gives a pleasant, diffused effect, while at the same time affording adequate illumination. Finally, of course, there should be plenty of lamps in the conservatory.

Estimating the Cost.

It is useless to give any estimate of the cost of such a building, for prices vary enormously in different sections of the country, in addition to which practically everyone who makes use of the suggestions here given will make different modifications of the plans to meet his own needs. But if these pages are taken to a local architect he can readily make such adaptations as are needed and can prepare an approximate estimate of the cost that will be close enough to show whether the advantages of having, next season, a store with an individuality make it worth while going on with the work.

Detail of Front for Flower Store.
(Scale ⅛-inch to one foot.)

A TANK FOR MANURE WATER.

Will you please tell me the best way to build a manure water tank? We have 100,000 feet of glass. We shall use a gasoline pump. C. S.

Much depends upon the arrangement of the buildings. Convenience in getting the manure into and out of the pit should be considered, and if it can be located outside, where a steam pipe can keep it from freezing, it can be handled with little difficulty. For the winter, at least, it should have a roof, a portion of which should be removable.

A suitable size would be eight feet wide by twenty to thirty feet long, according to the crops to be grown and the amount of the liquid that will be used, with a depth of five to six feet, of which not more than three or four need be below the surface. The walls should be of grout, ten inches thick at the bottom and tapering to six inches at the top. Across one corner should be a partition, with an opening at the bottom one foot square, closed by an iron or wooden screen with a rather coarse mesh. Outside this partition there should be a "well," about two feet deeper than the pit itself, from which the liquid manure can be pumped. The bottom of the tank should consist of about four inches of grout and may be given a slope of a foot toward the well.

STARTING HARDY PERENNIALS.

I have several hundred each of the following hardy plants just coming up from seed: Hollyhock, coreopsis, foxglove, poppy and sweet william. When they get about two inches tall I intend to transplant them to beds, 6x12 feet, in which I shall put about five inches of horse manure and on top of that three or four inches of soil. Kindly let me know whether the plants will live through the winter in these beds. I am located near Cleveland, O., where the temperature seldom gets below zero in winter. I have sashes to cover these beds, and also plenty of dead leaves. If I should use the sashes or leaves, or both, when should they be put on and when taken off? When is the best time to put in seed of hardy plants, so as to have good, strong plants next April? Kindly let me know whether there is a hardy salvia and a hardy variety of stocks. I should also like to know whether hardy plants, from seed put in the hotbed about the middle of February this spring, will blossom this summer. I was told that no hardy plants will blossom the first season, or, if they do, that the blossoms will be weak. Any information you can give me on the growing and wintering of hardy plants will be greatly appreciated. How many hardy plants, on an average, will one of these beds, 6x12 feet, hold? L. S.

You are making the beds extremely rich for the hardy plants you have named. If, instead of transplanting to these beds, you will plant out in the field in nursery rows, you will get much better plants. Plant the hollyhocks a foot apart in the rows and allow the same distance for Coreopsis grandiflora and foxgloves. The sweet williams and poppies can be set more closely. Planted out in this way and kept well cultivated, they will make big, strong plants before fall. In the beds you have prepared the probability would be that you would plant too closely and thus spoil much of the stock. All the plants named, if planted in well drained ground, where no water can stand, will winter if given a light covering of leaves when the ground is firmly frozen. Do not apply it earlier, as it only causes some of the plants to damp off. I say advisedly a light covering; a heavy one would kill a large proportion of the plants. Lay some brush over the leaves to prevent them from blowing away, and do not remove them until the early part of April. It is best not to be in too big a hurry about uncovering, especially if there are sharp April frosts.

You can lift the coreopsis and foxgloves, if desired, as they are the least reliably hardy of the varieties named, and plant fairly thickly under coldframe sashes for the winter, merely giving them a coating of leaves. Treated thus, not a plant should be lost.

From April to July is a suitable time to sow seeds of most perennials for flowering the following year. Some varieties, like aquilegias, are better sown in April, but it is a good time now to sow foxgloves, Canterbury bells, coreopsis, delphiniums, pyrethrums, rockets, lychnis, lupines and other varieties, while a little later is better for pansies, myosotis and daisies.

There are several hardy salvias, including azurea, sky blue; Pitcheri, dark blue; Sclarea, purple and white, and pratensis, deep blue. The last named is one of the most intense blues we have in hardy plants. It is better to lift the roots and heel them in a coldframe over winter. There are no hardy stocks like the annual ten weeks' type, but perhaps you have in mind the hardy rockets, Hesperis matronalis, which are sometimes classed as stocks.

Seeds of quite a few hardy perennials, if put in as early as February, will flower the same year. Some, such as Delphinium Chinense, will bloom even if sown now. Some of those which will flower the first season are: Lupines, larkspurs, Lobelia cardinalis, some of the varieties of Shasta daisy, lychnis, hibiscus and asters. Of course, all bloom more strongly the following year.

A bed 6x12 will not hold over 300 sweet williams; in fact, if the plants grow well, they would be crowded, and only half this number of Canterbury bells, coreopsis and hollyhocks could be accommodated. There are some weaker growing sorts, such as aquilegias, Delphinium Chinense, heucheras, etc., which can go much more closely. Of course, seedlings transplanted after July could be planted more thickly in the beds. C. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS

To Members:

Secretary Dorner is sending each member of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists a message calling for just a little effort on the part of each individual member, and it is earnestly hoped that every member will respond promptly.

It is requested that each member send in one new name for membership in the Society. There is not one member who can not easily do so, and this action, by increasing the membership, would mean a great deal for the welfare of the Society and the trade in general. As the secretary points out in his message, the florists are greatly indebted to the Society for its excellent work in the past, and a large membership roll will most certainly give it strength when there are wrongs, local or national, to be righted in the future.

The Society needs the support of all the trade, and each member should see that every commercial establishment in his locality is represented in the national organization. Open the campaign now by securing one new member. Take advantage of the local club meetings and summer outings to talk it up with those in attendance, pointing out that each name added to the list increases the usefulness of the Society and makes it stronger when it has a case to present before the courts, the legislatures, the express companies, the interstate commerce commission, the railroads, or any other body which has power to extend or withhold privileges.

In other lines of business grievances are quickly removed by close organization of the interests affected, and our difficulties in making new laws and amending old ones would be greatly reduced if we could present a more united front and batter down the opposition. Farmers and others get what they want in this way and there is no reason why we should not get prompt consideration if each member of the organization does his duty now. The work is light—secure one new name now, and this strengthened membership will just double the power of the organization in acquiring rights and privileges too long denied us.

I say again, we need added force, the strength of numbers. Business conditions grow more strenuous every year and we need the assistance of everyone in every effort for the general good. The Society exists for the good of all and every man in the trade should help.

George Asmus

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A SUMMER SELLER.

The florist with the empty store in summer also is the one with the empty cash-drawer. Of course summer is a quiet season, but it is neither necessary nor wise to shut up shop. Keep the store looking fresh and attractive and there will be visitors; carry some bright, clean stock and there will be buyers. No need at all to let things run down to just funeral work.

For example, more fern dishes can be sold in summer than are sold in winter, especially in the cities, where people do not have gardens. The flat-dwellers want something for the table and the fern dish takes the place of the cut flowers that are none too good in summer.

Nearly all flower stores in residence districts have facilities for filling fern dishes for their customers; they have to have, for the demand is steady and valued customers will go elsewhere if not taken care of on this need and, besides, there is a good profit in it. Most florists, too, now sell fern dishes, but how often does the florist show fern dishes, filled, ready for sale? Not often. And still less frequently does one see a flower store making a special drive on fern dishes, the way the candy store next door always is doing with one thing or another.

Fern dishes, nicely filled, will sell if they are shown, not only in winter but in summer, and the duller trade is the more time the florist has to think up plans for attracting special attention to his shop.

NASTURTIUM NOTIONS.

Fine Effects at Slight Cost.

With a flower that blooms so easily from June to October and can be sold so cheaply as nasturtiums, there is a good opportunity to realize on decorative work and improve on a reputation in that line also. With the flowers obtainable by the thousand and leaves by the ten thousand, with buds thrown in, the most striking and handsome effects, as well as dainty and cunning arrangements, can be devised.

Neither need there be a stop at flowers and foliage, for in many places entire plants and beds of them can be transplanted and remain in good shape for a series of functions lasting through several days. There is a growing tendency to use live plants in this way, and it is a long stride in the right direction. Many times we strive to produce the effect of growing plants with cut flowers and foliage, and here is the whole to be had for the mere transplanting. Not only for decorating private residences, but also for the hotel and restaurant trade, this practice ought to be encouraged. Better results from an artistic standpoint, and benefits which are more lasting, are the best of inducements along this line. When once a taste for helps like this is established in the summer by the use of cheaper flowers, there will be a stronger inclination to keep it up during the rest of the year, even at a higher rate for greenhouse flowers.

Unaided by Other Flowers.

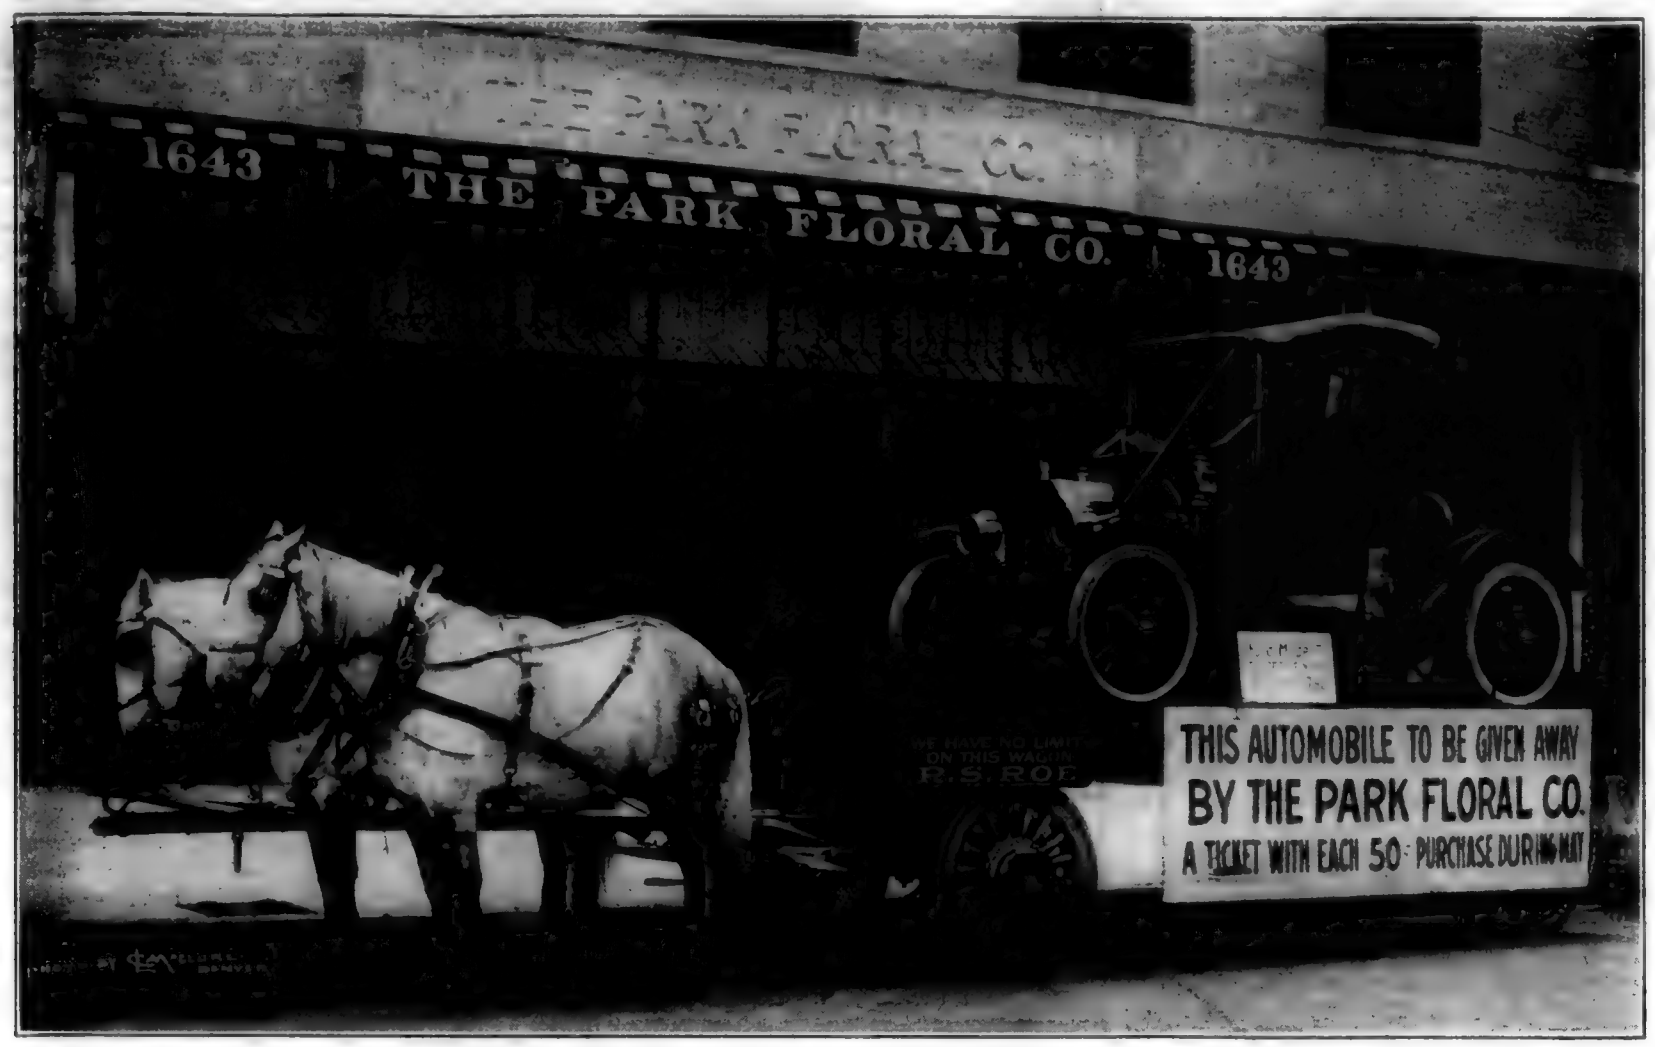
The charm of this flower appears in a surprisingly large number of ways, if developed by liberal designing. There is scarcely any other flower which in combination will add to the attraction of nasturtiums. White and the orange salmon sweet peas or marguerites might be tolerated, but without feeling or reason. Marigolds or zinnias, being unlike in habit, would be in decidedly bad taste. There are soft browns and creams which, so far as color goes, would fill the bill in numbers of other flowers, but not in the way of form harmony. Water lilies in yellow and cream might be used in the same room, but not so well in direct combination; for instance, in a dining-room nasturtiums may be used for the table and the water lilies for sideboard or mantel.

The fine range of unusual colors in the nasturtium is another important element in its usefulness. Yellow is a much wanted color, and difficult to find in anything like a tempting variety.

The rich yellows, oranges and salmons, and the trailing habit of the nasturtiums, are best developed by the use of bark or rock backgrounds and other rustic settings. Twig and bark boxes are available in dark green, red, brown and gray, such as are found in cedar, cork or birch bark, as well as in the dark brown bark. Bases covered with the twig or bark and equipped with pans can be made to fit mantel shelves, window sills, sideboards, plate rails and all such places.

A Bower of Trailing Vines.

A dining-room can be made into a bower of trailing vines in this way. Panels of bark can be hung from the picture molding at convenient intervals around a room. Little pockets which will hold Kift vases or other small receptacles can be made in these panels. The pockets will hold several long branches containing flowers and foliage too, with buds. These nasturtium and bark panels, alternating with the plain panels of the wall and extending nearly to the floor, will make a study for a fresco artist as well as a floral decoration. The long vines will exist on the small allowance of water which is tucked away in the pockets of the panels—which could not be said of stems of woodier structure. Touches of ferns of the smaller variety might be added with good effect. This scheme of decoration is well adapted to a store or banquet hall, too. G. B.



PULLING IN THE PUBLIC.

How a Denver Retailer Did It.

A few months ago the people of Denver were aroused by a novel advertising scheme, announced by the Park Floral Co. Indeed, aroused is hardly a strong enough word to use, especially as regards the other florists of Denver. Not only was the undertaking of the Park Floral Co. unique in character, but it came at a season when most florists are resigning themselves to a period of light business. The average florist who undertakes anything at all in the way of expensive advertising puts his effort into autumn work, when he will have a long season before him in which to reap the benefits. But the Park Floral Co. chose the last weeks of the spring season.

The plan was to offer chances on an automobile, one chance with each 50-cent purchase. Raffles are as old, almost, as business itself, but not often has the raffle been for such an expensive article as an automobile, and of course this raffle was advertised extensively. The machine was mounted on a big 4-horse truck and carted through the streets of Denver, decorated and emblazoned with signs. Circulars were distributed, and it is safe to say everyone in Denver was made to know an auto was to be had for nothing.

So much popular attention was attracted that it seemed the trade would be interested in knowing just what process of reasoning led to the adoption of so spectacular a method of advertising a flower store, and just what were the results.

To Emphasize Change in Location.

"When business begins to slacken," said J. A. Valentine, president of the Park Floral Co., "when all your neighbors are beginning to complain, then is the time to begin boosting; first, because without some stimulant your business is likely to drop back; also, and second, because others are likely to be retrenching and your own efforts attract more attention by comparison.

"We recently moved into a new store and advertised the change in various ways until we felt our old customers were pretty well informed concerning it. But it seemed necessary to actually get them into the place before they would be sure to remember it.

"We were also anxious to get a lot of new customers, and while you can depend upon a policy of good stock and good service to hold the customers you already have, it is necessary to do something striking to attract the attention of strangers and draw them into your store.

"The desire to get something for nothing, the hope of being the lucky one out of thousands, is a part of human nature, and so a drawing of some sort struck me as likely to attract new customers.

"There is no fad that has such a hold upon the people of America as automobiling, and to put up an automobile as a prize offered opportunities for spectacular advertising that seemed bound to bring results.

"I chose the car I did because it was a handsome machine at a low price, and because I had already driven one thousands of miles in the mountains and had proved its worth.

The Results.

"We sent out thousands of circulars to all parts of the city, announcing a ticket on the automobile with each 50-cent purchase. We used the theater programs extensively, but the most effective advertising was when we loaded the machine on an immense truck and hauled it through the busy streets, and through the theater district at night. When so displayed the machine itself was generously decorated with flowers or filled with blooming plants, but the photograph was taken before the decorating was done.

"We had the drawing at the close of the performance at a popular theater, and the tickets were drawn out by Maude Fealy, the leading lady. Nine tickets were drawn out for cash prizes ranging from $5 to $45, in addition to the automobile.

"Our florist competitors had thousands of tickets in the box, but they were not a lucky lot, as not one of them drew a prize.

"We think that the cost of the scheme was about fifty per cent of our increased business. Whether it paid can only be told later, when we are able to tell how many new customers become permanent buyers.

"One material advantage gained is a large addition to our mailing list, as each ticket was signed by the purchaser and his address given. I am a firm believer in personal appeals, and we use the mails extensively for that purpose.

"After the issuing of tickets had stopped, several buyers came in, but went away without buying when told that tickets were not being issued. Prior to that one woman came in and bought 50 cents' worth and told us to send them to some hospital, frankly saying that it was the ticket she wanted and not the flowers."

There will be a lot of new ideas in that, for more than one retailer.

FORCED GLADIOLUS BULBS.

I have a bed of gladioli forced under glass. After cutting them, can I take up the bulbs and heel them in? Will they mature without injury to the bulbs? B. B. C.

You can lift the bulbs carefully, preserving a little soil with each, and heel them in outdoors to ripen. The bulbs made will be of good size, but, whether they are of the large or small flowered types, they do not force satisfactorily the following season; neither do they flower any better outdoors. I have tried varieties of G.

nanus grown in flats and allowed them to ripen off without disturbance. They produced finer bulbs by far than the original imported ones, but did not flower at all well, and I came to the conclusion that it did not pay to carry over any forced gladiolus bulbs, far better results being had from new bulbs which had been grown outdoors. Were bulbs bench-grown and allowed to ripen where they flowered, they might do well, but it would never pay to give up bench space to them, since it could be much more profitably utilized. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Summer Lilies.

With the arrival of the two hot summer months flower demand slackens appreciably and the call for longiflorum lilies is never robust. People seem to tire of them and want a change. The speciosums, therefore, make a welcome addition to our none too lengthy list of summer flowers.

The earliest of the fall potted speciosums are now coming into flower and the flowers of both the white and pink varieties are splendid in all classes of design work. Keep the plants cool and well watered; also see that the pollen masses are removed daily, so that they cannot discolor the flowers. Speciosums grown under glass are finer in every way than the outdoor ones and do not become spotted by heavy rains and spells of damp, muggy weather. Their great foe is green aphis, but there is really no occasion for this troubling them if the hose is used freely among them and a fumigation given once a week. It is easy moving the speciosums to a cold cellar to retard them for special occasions, while we need not state that well flowered pots, neatly staked, are salable.

The outdoor lilies, such as speciosum, auratum, Henryi and tigrinum, will be benefited by a generous mulch of old, decayed manure. In dry weather, if water can be given them occasionally, their quality will be vastly improved. Henryi grows tall and some staking of this and auratum should be done to hold the stems erect and keep the flowers clean.

Gardenias.

The gardenia plants benched early in June are now making a good growth and are taking hold of the soil nicely. To avoid the yellows, do not soak the whole bench space when watering; rather give it to the plants. They will soon have their roots all through the soil, when water can be gradually increased. If the soil is sufficiently porous it will dry out readily and there will be little danger of pale foliage. Use the spray nozzle on the plants at least once a day and close them up in the afternoon with an abundance of moisture. A night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees is about right. Of course this will be exceeded on warm nights. Air freely during the day, and when the nights are hot a crack can also be left on. Pinch back the runaway shoots for some time yet and do not forget to scratch over the surface of the benches occasionally. We can have them in flower the year around under glass by growing a winter and summer crop.

Lorraine Begonias.

The earlier propagated plants of Lorraine begonia are now making an excellent growth and will need some attention, as they should not be allowed to become potbound. Keep flowers removed as they appear and pinch back all the strong shoots. In potting always use a light compost; one composed of equal parts of flaky leaf-mold and loam (which has been laid up since last year and mixed with cow manure), with sand, will make a good potting medium. Do not make the mistake of shading the plants heavily. They do not want it and are hurt, rather than benefited by it. They like to be grown pretty warm and in this respect differ from the tuberous section, which enjoy cooler and airier conditions. Keep on propagating. These late cuttings will make nice plants in 4-inch pots or pans and there was a marked shortage of them at Thanksgiving and Christmas last year.

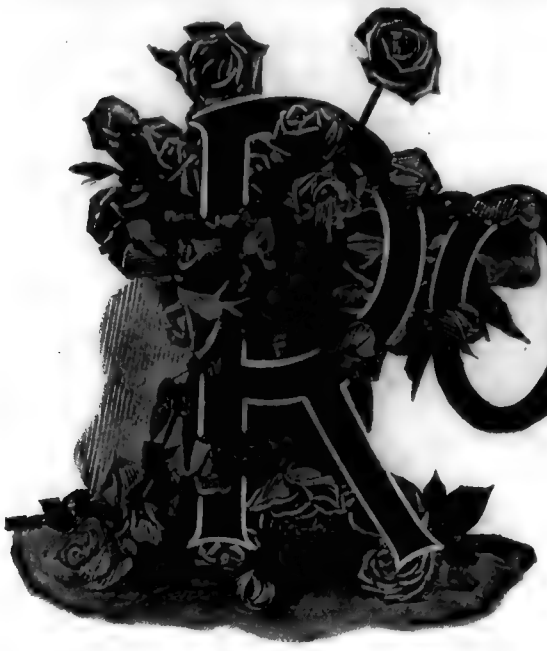
Gesneras.

Gesneras are little seen nowadays. They can be had in bloom either in summer or fall, being specially useful in August and September. They are easily raised from seed, which if sown in February will give nice flowering plants the same year. From a batch of seedlings just as fine varieties may be selected as the higher priced named kinds. They are better grown in pots singly, unless the colors are known, in which case several can be used in 8-inch pans to good effect. Gesneras like a warm house, but should not have a stove temperature, which is too warm and moist and draws them too much. They make one of the most charming of plants for centerpieces. They grow well in a light, fairly rich soil which contains a good proportion of sand to give it porosity.

Trimming Hedges.

The end of June and first week in July is a suitable time to trim hedges of California and other privets, also of Berberis Thunbergii and any other deciduous hedge plants which are grown in formal hedges. Two or three clippings a year for the California privet makes the hedges more dense, and where hedges have become thin and naked a good heading back should be given. It is now, however, late for this work, which is best done when growth starts in spring. The California privet is not altogether reliable as to hardiness, and where temperatures of 5 to 25 degrees below zero are recorded it will usually be cut down to the ground. For this reason Ligustrum Ibota, the Japanese privet, L. Regelianum, L. Amurense, the Amoor river privet, and L. vulgare, the English privet, should be chosen in preference, as they are much hardier and all make excellent hedges. The Berberis Thunbergii loses much of its beauty when closely sheared. To see it at its best it should be used for a natural hedge.

Such evergreens as Norway spruce, Thuyas occidentalis and Sibirica (arbor-vitæs), retinosporas and hemlocks can all be clipped now, so that they will make a little new growth to take away their extreme stiffness before fall.



Geraniums

GERANIUMS IN RAISED BED.

We should like to know whether geranium stock plants could be put into a bed in the house at this time of the year with good results. Can geraniums be grown properly on a raised bed on the north side of a sweet pea house, with a solid wood wall to the north? Can you inform us what kind of house is best? F. B.

Geraniums can be planted in the bed in question now and will give excellent results. You will find that cuttings taken from plants from under glass are firmer and show a much smaller percentage of loss from damping off than do cuttings from outdoor plants. They will require an abundance of fresh air. If they stand near the glass there is a possibility of red spider attacking them. The judicious use of the hose, however, will prevent this.

Geraniums will, of course, grow on the north side of a sweet pea house, but it is hardly the location to be recommended for them. They must be near the glass if you want hard, stocky cuttings. An even-span house is the best, not only for geraniums, but for all other bedding plants. In making up the compost for geraniums, do not use the same proportion of manure as you would for mums, sweet peas or roses, or they will grow too rank. A 4-inch pot of fine bone to each bushel of compost helps to keep the growth short-jointed, and an occasional light top-dressing of this or some reliable chemical, such as Clay's fertilizer, will keep them in good growing condition. Four to five inches of soil is ample for them. C. W.

THE ROSE AMERICAN PILLAR.

The June number of Country Life in America had an article describing the leading varieties of climbing roses, such as Crimson Rambler, Lady Gay, Dorothy Perkins, Tausendschon and Hiawatha, but nothing was said about American Pillar.

This beautiful climbing rose is a seedling of Dr. Van Fleet's. Its exact parentage is unknown. One of the parents is believed to be the Michigan rose; there are evidences that American Pillar has some of the sturdy blood of Prairie Queen. While American Pillar was sent out some years ago, it is little known in this country; in England it is better known and is highly prized as one of the best climbing roses.

It is a wonderfully vigorous grower, plants in their second year throwing up heavy canes to a height of four to six feet—canes that are densely clothed with luxuriant, glossy green foliage, seven to nine leaflets to each leaf. This foliage seems absolutely free from mildew, a virtue that will recommend American Pillar to many who have found Crimson Rambler wanting in this respect.

The most striking feature of American Pillar is its wonderful flowers. Many of the trusses on the young plants that have been outside little more than a year measure from six to nine inches in diameter and bear nearly 100 individual flowers. The flowers resemble the wild rose in size and appearance and are an unending source of beauty. They open early in June in the latitude of Philadelphia, when the petals, five or six in number, may be described as carmine, shading to white at the base. The effect in the earlier stages is of carmine and gold, the number and size of the stamens giving a yellow hue. Later, as the flowers develop, the carmine changes to a beautiful shade of Killarney pink; as the stamens dry, the white center lends softness; during the third and fourth week the color becomes that of a soft peach blossom, only a thought less beautiful than before.

The effect of a row of American Pillar roses, covered with immense trusses of pink flowers, is one long to be remembered. The rich, dark green foliage is a perfect background for the glowing pink blossoms.

The constitution, coloring, vigor and freedom from disease of American Pillar lead to the belief that this rose, when well known, will be considered the best in its class. Nay, more than that; when Crimson Rambler first appeared it was heralded as ushering in a new floral era; American Pillar is as far superior to Crimson Rambler as the latter variety is to the older climbing roses.

This description is the fruit of a happy hour spent with Antoine Wintzer at West Grove, Pa. Phil.

ROSEBUDS NOT OPENING.

What causes hardy rosebuds, such as Cochets, to blight? They turn black and fail to open. The foliage is apparently in good condition, but the petals turn black when the bud is ready to open and the blighted petals seem to glue the bud shut and it dries up in this shape. F. M. R.

The Cochets and some other tea roses will sometimes fail to open their buds. This is particularly true when we get a spell of dark, moist weather, or, on the contrary, when the ground is dry. With a fair amount of sunshine and the necessary moisture in the ground, the buds should open satisfactorily. All the tea roses are benefited by a summer mulch outdoors of old, decayed manure, and to have them really satisfactory they should get an abundant water supply. They prefer the soil to be light, rather than heavy. C. W.

BLACK SPOT ON ROSES.

I have some Killarney and Richmond roses that are affected with black spot. The plants are in pots, waiting to be planted in benches as soon as my greenhouse is finished. I am dusting them with air-slaked lime. What else shall I do to them to rid them of this trouble? J. D.

The black spot has undoubtedly been caused by excessive syringing, especially on days when there was little sun and the foliage was damp at nightfall. The big rose specialists guard against the attacks of mildew and black spot in summer by using a little steam heat when weather conditions demand it. Dusting air-slaked lime on the plants, holding off syringing and picking off affected foliage are the best, in fact the only remedies. Do not allow the plants to be too crowded and when you syringe be sure that the foliage will get dry before sundown. On damp, sunless days keep all moisture from the plants and do not keep the houses shut up tightly, as this only aggravates the evil. With clear, warm weather the plants should, when planted, soon outgrow the black spot. C. W.

PEONIES NOT FLOWERING.

I have about 1,500 large peony clumps and at least twenty per cent of these do not bloom at all. They are perfectly healthy looking, with an abundance of good foliage. They have been treated the same as the others and have been grown in good soil, which has been well fertilized, etc. Other people have the same trouble. I also have two small clumps in my garden, where the soil is light. They had not bloomed for fifteen to twenty years. This year both clumps bloomed sparingly. How do you account for it? C. S. R.

Your trouble is not by any means an uncommon or exceptional one. The most likely cause for the plants not blooming is that they in all probability have not been divided and replanted for a good many years. Some peonies may grow and bloom for twenty-five years undisturbed, especially if the flowers are not cut to any extent and the plants are well fed, but as a general rule they deteriorate after being planted ten years and finally do not flower at all. There is no reason, however, why your clumps should not flower satisfactorily if you lift, divide and replant them, giving them good soil which has been liberally enriched.

Another reason why peonies flower poorly is that many growers cut away too much foliage with the flowers. Of course, the craze for long stems is responsible for this. I have seen growers cut close to the ground, removing every flower a plant carried. The chances are ten to one that such plants will either not flower at all, or only sparsely, the following season. Last fall, winter and spring were abnormally dry in the east and this seriously affected the flowering of peonies, growers with light land not getting a quarter of a crop. One of the foregoing causes, or a combination of them, may be responsible for your plants flowering poorly. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business last week was quite good and both growers and retailers are much pleased with June sales, which have been the most satisfactory in years. The numerous school graduations, Harvard class days, and weddings cleaned up the market nicely. The present week opens with more of a lull, but the absence of excessive heat is a strong factor in favor of sales, for the cool weather has caused quality to average good, and there has not been the waste that often occurs during hot weather. We are now nearing the end of June and the temperature has not been over 87 degrees during the month, so we are more fortunate than many other large markets.

Roses have been selling exceptionally well; in fact, it has been the best June for the rose men in years. Beauties, Carnots, Kaiserins and Killarneys all sell well. Few hybrids from outdoors have appeared and these are not of good quality. Sweet peas are not yet overabundant. The indoor crop is now over and outdoor crops are away below the average. It is seldom that good peas have made 75 cents and $1 per hundred at the end of June, as this year. Carnations are getting small and the season for them is nearing the end. Asters have appeared from several growers, the variety being Queen of the Market.

Peonies are over. Some marguerites still arrive, but are not of the best quality. Small gladioli are over, but there are some fine lots of America, Augusta and other large-flowered sorts which sell fairly well. Valley has been selling well, but the demand has decreased. Cattleyas are now scarce and selling better. Lilies are still mainly longiflorums and the demand is light. There have been good sales of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus.

Rose and Strawberry Exhibition.

The adverse climatic conditions seriously affected this annual exhibition and neither in quantity nor quality was it up to the average. Miss S. B. Fay, through M. H. Walsh, was the largest and most successful rose exhibitor. Some of these blooms were fine, the most noteworthy being Frau Karl Druschki, Margaret Dickson, Mrs. Sharman Crawford, Mavourneen, Ulrich Brunner, Duke of Edinburgh, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Baron de Bonstettin, Clio and Baroness Rothschild. W. J. Clemson, J. D. Christensen gardener, was the second largest exhibitor. The display of hybrid teas from Miss S. B. Fay was noteworthy and attracted much attention.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had their usual extensive display of hardy herbaceous plants in great variety. They also had a fine table of peonies. T. C. Thurlow & Sons had a choice collection of peonies and other herbaceous flowers. E. J. Shaylor had a fine collection of late peonies.

William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, had a large general display, including some beautiful delphiniums. Mrs. E. M. Gill was on hand, as usual, with an excellent assortment of roses and many other seasonable flowers. W. N. Craig had a large vase of the pale blue Trachelium cæruleum. J. T. Butterworth had several seedling orchids, Cattleya Mendellii alba x Lælia Digbyana, C. Harrisoniæ alba x C. Gaskelliana alba and Lælia purpurata x Lælia Digbyana, awarded honorable mention. Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, had several well flowered plants of Oncidium flexuosum.

Strawberries were not so fine as usual, owing to the long drought. Golden Gate showed up the best. Next to this came Marshall. The new Black Beauty, same color as Marshall, captured the leading prize of the day, beating Marshall and Golden Gate.

Various Notes.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is one of the few growers of hardy hybrid perpetual roses. He has had some nice Brunners of late. He has had a splendid June cut of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, which are always cleared out early.

Perry Green, of Quincy, among his other specialties has a fine cut of bachelor's buttons, sweet sultan and sweet peas.

John W. Foote was one of the first in the market with asters. He has cut a large quantity of Bouvardia Humboldtii during June, it being in brisk demand for brides' bouquets. No other grower in this section has been able to handle this beautiful bouvardia as well as Mr. Foote.

The annual sweet pea show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held at Horticultural hall July 15 and 16.

Frank E. Putnam, of North Tewksbury, in addition to his high grade carnations has a grand lot of America and Augusta gladioli.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, through E. J. Rogean, is disposing of fine shipments of salpiglossis, gypsophila and asters.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has work well advanced on a new iron-frame greenhouse 25x100, with propagating house, service room, etc., for F. L. Ames, North Easton.

Samuel Ralby, of J. W. Howard's staff in Somerville, was married June 20. His many friends wish him good luck.

David Welch sailed for a European trip June 27, on the steamer Franconia. A number of friends wished him bon voyage. Mr. Welch is just convalescing from a long illness and the foreign trip will build him up in fine shape for fall trade.

M. H. Hambro, salesman for S. J. Reuter & Son, is handling some fine White Killarney. Special grades of these have made as high as $16 per hundred this month. Mr. Hambro says he never had a more satisfactory June business.

William A. Hastings, local state vice-president for the S. A. F., is planning to round up the biggest delegation which ever left Boston for any convention. Mr. Hastings has not yet lost avoirdupois in his efforts, but will do considerable hustling within the next six weeks. His always genial smile is hard to resist.

Robert E. Lassman, the veteran Watertown florist, has had a good season with bedding plants, violets and his other specialties. At present he is busy marketing tomatoes of the Comet variety.

M. B. Dallachie, of East Woburn, is one of the local growers who is early in the market with a fine crop of asters.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of Walter Lockwood, Orleans, Mass., June 21, to see his peony garden, and found a magnificent collection of 300 varieties, mostly in flower. The rambler roses in many varieties were also in full beauty, Carmine Pillar being grand.

A. P. Dewar, of the R. & J. Farquhar & Co. force, with his wife and family, sailed on the steamer Zeeland June 20 for an extended European trip, in the course of which he will visit many prominent seed and bulb growers.

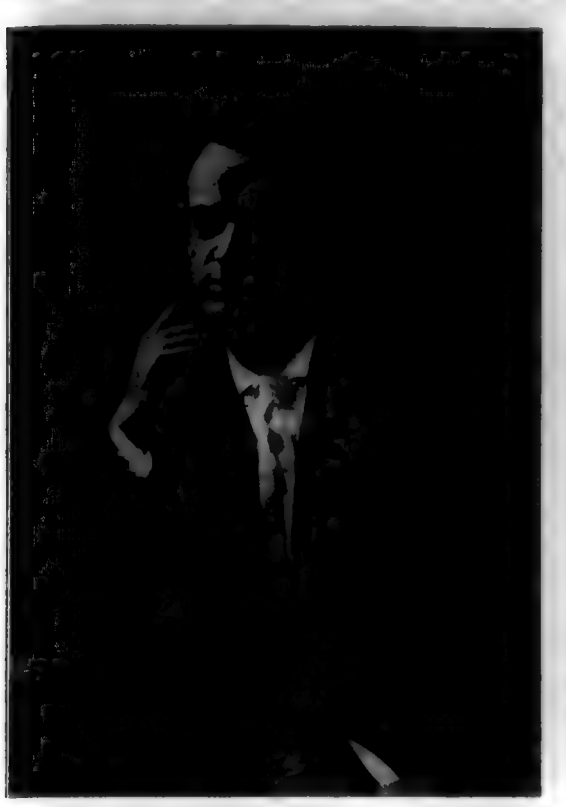
A fierce hail storm visited the Boston district on the evening of June 20. Glass was broken only to a minor extent, but such plants as lettuces, beets and cabbages were simply cut to pieces in some places. Hardy roses suffered severely. M. H. Walsh had wheelbarrow loads of fine blooms ruined at Woods Hole.

William Penn, one of the well known Bromfield street brothers, and Miss Sophie Rosenbush were married June 27. The bride carried one of Penn's finest shower bouquets, which have been in tremendous demand the last few weeks.

Mrs. Aaron Ward rose as grown by W. H. Elliott is still of fine quality and the color is even better than in winter.

The Boston Flower Exchange baseball nine played its first game of the season June 24, their opponents being the Brookline landscape gardeners, at the grounds of the latter.

P. J. Donahoe, the popular head salesman for the Waban Conservatories for many years, is now manager for the Boston Rose Co., Pemberton square. His firm is receiving some fine shipments of roses and carnations and doing a steadily growing trade.



Mann Bros. have had a fine cut of outdoor iris of late. They still have lilies in quantity and have had a successful bulb season on the whole. Their trade in bedding plants also beat all records.

T. F. Galvin had a charming window of aquatics at his Tremont street store last week, which looked cool and restful. He has had a busy June with wedding and other decorations.

W. N. Craig.

Galena, Ill.—B. F. Vandervate, from whose home $170 was recently stolen, has been fortunate enough to secure the return of all but $7 of the money.

Lynn, Mass.—Reuben S. Goodwin, a florist who resides on Grove street, recently made a forcible plea before the municipal council for the life of a large elm which stands opposite his house, and which, he says, has sheltered him since his eyes "opened on this world." Some of his neighbors had petitioned the council to chop the tree down, as being decayed and dangerous to property, but Mr. Goodwin maintained that the tree was in good condition and merely needed to be trimmed and treated. The council took the matter under advisement.

Guy Raburn.

Alex. Henderson.

A. Miller.

Members of the New Chicago Firm of A. Henderson & Company.

THE NEW CHICAGO FIRM.

Within the last week it has developed that since June 1 A. Miller has been a partner in the firm of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago. Like the original members, Alex. Henderson and Guy Raburn, he is a graduate of that school of commercial floriculture which has educated so many successful young business men in this trade, Vaughan's Seed Store.

The firm of A. Henderson & Co. started January 1, 1911, doing business in temporary quarters at 162 North Wabash avenue. Mr. Henderson says it is the object of the firm to locate a suitable place where they can carry on a retail seed business, as soon as obtainable, in connection with the wholesale trade. At present they are doing only a wholesale business with florists.

Alex. Henderson, the senior member of the firm, is a native of Scotland, born in Aberdeen, and has spent over twenty years in the seed business. After five years in the business in his native town and a year in England, he came to America and spent a brief period at Hamilton, Ont., going thence to New York, where he remained for two years with Peter Henderson & Co. and F. E. McAllister Co., leaving there to take the position at Chicago in which he remained for fourteen years, rising to be a department manager and buyer. Mr. Raburn has been connected with the trade for twelve years, his first position being with Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa. After serving that company five years he went to the Riverton greenhouses of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia. Removing to the west, he was at first employed in the greenhouses, but was later sent on the road. He has traveled for the last five years.

Mr. Miller, the new member of the firm, started his floricultural work, after graduating from the public schools of New Orleans, as apprentice in the Mannard greenhouses. Later he took a four years' course in an eastern agricultural school, specializing in greenhouse work. Then he took a position in one of the largest cemeteries in Brooklyn, as an assistant to the superintendent, but greenhouse work proved more congenial, and for three years he worked in various commercial plants through the country, then spending two years on the road for the Chicago seed store and later working in the same capacity for Skidelsky & Irwin Co., of Philadelphia.

Messrs. Raburn and Miller will do the traveling for the firm, while Mr. Henderson will act as buyer and manager of the office.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

The Market.

In this city of big manufactories the June business has been excellent in some respects and poor in others. Going back as far as Memorial day, there was a falling off from last year, partly because last year was better than usual and partly because of the extreme heat that came in the end of May this season. There have been more weddings in June this year than in any previous June, and the bedding out has been heavier in June than it was in other years. Last season those who put out their bedding stock early lost a good part of it in the late frost and this year planting was delayed until after Memorial day. There have been more bedding plants sold than ever before, but there is still some stock on hand, though the demand locally has practically ceased. In the cut flower line the weddings have made the principal demand, the weather having been too hot for transient trade.

Little is expected after July 1 until September, but everyone here has confidence that the business next season will beat all records. The demand is growing noticeably year by year.

Various Notes.

The Beyer Floral Co. reports more wedding work this June than in any previous year. This concern makes a specialty of birds and goldfish and finds this a profitable side-line. Unfortunately, neither birds nor fish are in good supply or in good demand in summer, when the flower business itself is dullest, but a side line in the fish department is minnows for fishermen's bait, and these sell steadily through July, August and September. The Beyers carry a large stock of florists' supplies.

At Willis R. Kinyon's it is said that though business now is quiet, it has been the best season his establishment ever has known. There has been good trade at the store and much bedding out has been done. The greenhouses are now being put in shape for next season.

A. & C. Kinyon are now proprietors of the South Bend Floral Co. Formerly the three Kinyon brothers were in business together. Willis Kinyon is running that business today. After selling out to him, the other two brothers took over the greenhouses and store of the South Bend Floral Co. The business was then in a rather run-down condition, but it is said they have this spring done twice as much business as last spring and they are well pleased with the progress made. The greenhouses are in good shape.

W. D. Rettic has had a big spring business in bedding stock in his greenhouses on North Lafayette street.

Irving Gingrich is now giving vocal lessons in South Bend and neighboring towns.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business done last week among the retailers was good, in spite of the fact that graduating exercises and weddings are about at an end. There was a good deal of shipping trade to nearby towns for wedding decorations and funeral work, but not much of anything is expected until fall. Some of the employees of the retail stores have already started on their vacations. The wholesale houses have been cleaning up daily on their roses of good grade. Carnations and peas went at fairly good prices. Gladioli are in big demand and bring as high as $8 per hundred. The daily supply is not nearly enough for the demand. All outdoor stock is coming in poorly, as the long dry spell has and this seriously affected the flowering of peonies, growers with light land not getting a quarter of a crop. One of the foregoing causes, or a combination of them, may be responsible for your plants flowering poorly. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business last week was quite good and both growers and retailers are much pleased with June sales, which have been the most satisfactory in years. The numerous school graduations, Harvard class days, and weddings cleaned up the market nicely. The present week opens with more of a lull, but the absence of excessive heat is a strong factor in favor of sales, for the cool weather has caused quality to average good, and there has not been the waste that often occurs during hot weather. We are now nearing the end of June and the temperature has not been over 87 degrees during the month, so we are more fortunate than many other large markets.

Roses have been selling exceptionally well; in fact, it has been the best June for the rose men in years. Beauties, Carnots, Kaiserins and Killarneys all sell well. Few hybrids from outdoors have appeared and these are not of good quality. Sweet peas are not yet overabundant. The indoor crop is now over and outdoor crops are away below the average. It is seldom that good peas have made 75 cents and $1 per hundred at the end of June, as this year. Carnations are getting small and the season for them is nearing the end. Asters have appeared from several growers, the variety being Queen of the Market.

Peonies are over. Some marguerites still arrive, but are not of the best quality. Small gladioli are over, but there are some fine lots of America, Augusta and other large-flowered sorts which sell fairly well. Valley has been selling well, but the demand has decreased. Cattleyas are now scarce and selling better. Lilies are still mainly longiflorums and the demand is light. There have been good sales of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus.

Rose and Strawberry Exhibition.

The adverse climatic conditions seriously affected this annual exhibition and neither in quantity nor quality was it up to the average. Miss S. B. Fay, through M. H. Walsh, was the largest and most successful rose exhibitor. Some of these blooms were fine, the most noteworthy being Frau Karl Druschki, Margaret Dickson, Mrs. Sharman Crawford, Mavourneen, Ulrich Brunner, Duke of Edinburgh, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Baron de Bonstettin, Clio and Baroness Rothschild. W. J. Clemson, J. D. Christensen gardener, was the second largest exhibitor. The display of hybrid teas from Miss S. B. Fay was noteworthy and attracted much attention.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had their usual extensive display of hardy herbaceous plants in great variety. They also had a fine table of peonies. T. C. Thurlow & Sons had a choice collection of peonies and other herbaceous flowers. E. J. Shaylor had a fine collection of late peonies.

William Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, had a large general display, including some beautiful delphiniums. Mrs. E. M. Gill was on hand, as usual, with an excellent assortment of roses and many other seasonable flowers. W. N. Craig had a large vase of the pale blue Trachelium caruleum. J. T. Butterworth had several seedling orchids, Cattleya Mendellii alba x Lælia Digbyana,' C. Harrisoniæ alba x C. Gaskelliana alba and Lælia purpurata x Lælia Digbyana, awarded honorable mention. Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, had several well flowered plants of Oncidium flexuosum.

Strawberries were not so fine as usual, owing to the long drought. Golden Gate showed up the best. Next to this came Marshall. The new Black Beauty, same color as Marshall, captured the leading prize of the day, beating Marshall and Golden Gate.

Various Notes.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is one of the few growers of hardy hybrid perpetual roses. He has had some nice Brunners of late. He has had a splendid June cut of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond, which are always cleared out early.

Perry Green, of Quincy, among his other specialties has a fine cut of bachelor's buttons, sweet sultan and sweet peas.

John W. Foote was one of the first in the market with asters. He has cut a large quantity of Bouvardia Humboldtii during June, it being in brisk demand for brides' bouquets. No other grower in this section has been able to handle this beautiful bouvardia as well as Mr. Foote.

The annual sweet pea show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held at Horticultural hall July 15 and 16.

Frank E. Putnam, of North Tewksbury, in addition to his high grade carnations has a grand lot of America and Augusta gladioli.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, through E. J. Rogean, is disposing of fine shipments of salpiglossis, gypsophila and asters.

The Lord & Burnham Co. has work well advanced on a new iron-frame greenhouse 25x100, with propagating house, service room, etc., for F. L. Ames, North Easton.

Samuel Ralby, of J. W. Howard's staff in Somerville, was married June 20. His many friends wish him good luck.

David Welch sailed for a European trip June 27, on the steamer Franconia. A number of friends wished him bon voyage. Mr. Welch is just convalescing from a long illness and the foreign trip will build him up in fine shape for fall trade.

M. H. Hambro, salesman for S. J. Reuter & Son, is handling some fine White Killarney. Special grades of these have made as high as $16 per hundred this month. Mr. Hambro says he never had a more satisfactory June business.

William A. Hastings, local state vice president for the S. A. F., is planning to round up the biggest delegation which ever left Boston for any convention. Mr. Hastings has not yet lost avoirdupois in his efforts, but will do considerable hustling within the next six weeks. His always genial smile is hard to resist.

Robert E. Lassman, the veteran Watertown florist, has had a good season with bedding plants, violets and his other specialties. At present he is busy marketing tomatoes of the Comet variety.

M. B. Dallachie, of East Woburn, is one of the local growers who is early in the market with a fine crop of asters.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of Walter Lockwood, Orleans, Mass., June 21, to see his peony garden, and found a magnificent collection of 300 varieties, mostly in flower. The rambler roses in many varieties were also in full beauty, Carmine Pillar being grand.

A. P. Dewar, of the R. & J. Farquhar & Co. force, with his wife and family, sailed on the steamer Zeeland June 20 for an extended European trip, in the course of which he will visit many prominent seed and bulb growers.

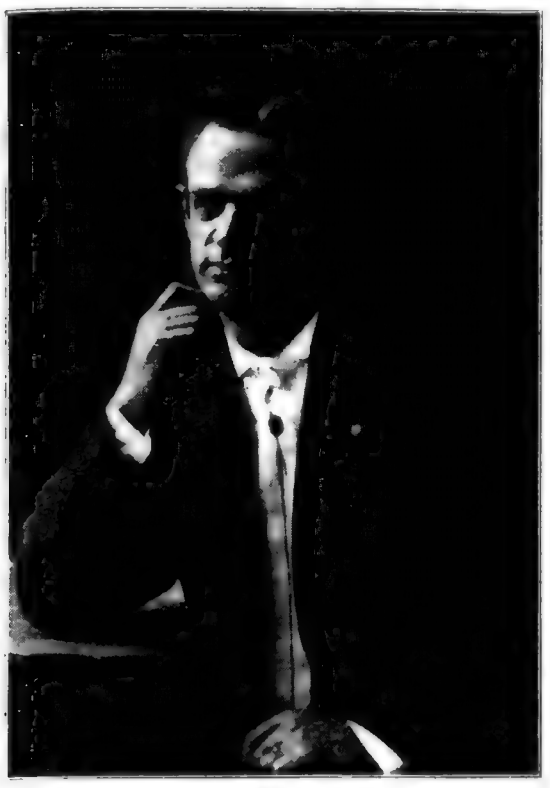
A fierce hail storm visited the Boston district on the evening of June 20. Glass was broken only to a minor extent, but such plants as lettuces, beets and cabbages were simply cut to pieces in some places. Hardy roses suffered severely. M. H. Walsh had wheelbarrow loads of fine blooms ruined at Woods Hole.

William Penn, one of the well known Bromfield street brothers, and Miss Sophie Rosenbush were married June 27. The bride carried one of Penn's finest shower bouquets, which have been in tremendous demand the last few weeks.

Mrs. Aaron Ward rose as grown by W. H. Elliott is still of fine quality and the color is even better than in winter.

The Boston Flower Exchange baseball nine played its first game of the season June 24, their opponents being the Brookline landscape gardeners, at the grounds of the latter.

P. J. Donahoe, the popular head salesman for the Waban Conservatories for many years, is now manager for the Boston Rose Co., Pemberton square. His firm is receiving some fine shipments of roses and carnations and doing a steadily growing trade.



Mann Bros. have had a fine cut of outdoor iris of late. They still have lilies in quantity and have had a successful bulb season on the whole. Their trade in bedding plants also beat all records.

T. F. Galvin had a charming window of aquatics at his Tremont street store last week, which looked cool and restful. He has had a busy June with wedding and other decorations.

W. N. Craig.

Galena, Ill.—B. F. Vandervate, from whose home $170 was recently stolen, has been fortunate enough to secure the return of all but $7 of the money.

Lynn, Mass.—Reuben S. Goodwin, a florist who resides on Grove street, recently made a forcible plea before the municipal council for the life of a large elm which stands opposite his house, and which, he says, has sheltered him since his eyes "opened on this world." Some of his neighbors had petitioned the council to chop the tree down, as being decayed and dangerous to property, but Mr. Goodwin maintained that the tree was in good condition and merely needed to be trimmed and treated. The council took the matter under advisement.

THE NEW CHICAGO FIRM.

Within the last week it has developed that since June 1 A. Miller has been a partner in the firm of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago. Like the original members, Alex. Henderson and Guy Raburn, he is a graduate of that school of commercial floriculture which has educated so many successful young business men in this trade, Vaughan's Seed Store.

The firm of A. Henderson & Co. started January 1, 1911, doing business in temporary quarters at 162 North Wabash avenue. Mr. Henderson says it is the object of the firm to locate a suitable place where they can carry on a retail seed business, as soon as obtainable, in connection with the wholesale trade. At present they are doing only a wholesale business with florists.

Alex. Henderson, the senior member of the firm, is a native of Scotland, born in Aberdeen, and has spent over twenty years in the seed business. After five years in the business in his native town and a year in England, he came to America and spent a brief period at Hamilton, Ont., going thence to New York, where he remained for two years with Peter Henderson & Co. and F. E. McAllister Co., leaving there to take the position at Chicago in which he remained for fourteen years, rising to be a department manager and buyer. Mr. Raburn has been connected with the trade for twelve years, his first position being with Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa. After serving that company five years he went to the Riverton greenhouses of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia. Removing to the west, he was at first employed in the greenhouses, but was later sent on the road. He has traveled for the last five years.

Mr. Miller, the new member of the firm, started his horicultural work, after graduating from the public schools of New Orleans, as apprentice in the Maynard greenhouses. Later he took a four years' course in an eastern agricultural school, specializing in greenhouse work. Then he took a position in one of the largest cemeteries in Brooklyn, as an assistant to the superintendent, but greenhouse work proved more congenial, and for three years he worked in various commercial plants through the country, then spending two years on the road for the Chicago seed store and later working in the same capacity for Skidelsky & Irwin Co., of Philadelphia.

Messrs. Raburn and Miller will do the traveling for the firm, while Mr. Henderson will act as buyer and manager of the office.

SOUTH BEND, IND.

The Market.

In this city of big manufactories the June business has been excellent in some respects and poor in others. All outdoor stock is coming in poorly, as the long dry spell has burned it out. The recent rains, however, should do a great deal of good. Asters bring from $3 to $5 per hundred and lilies sell well at $10 per hundred. There are plenty of greens in the market now.

Various Notes.

The committee, consisting of E. W. Guy, W. C. Smith, Charles Schoenle and J. J. Beneke, of the Florists' Club, which has the arrangements in hand for the florists' picnic, has arranged to hold the annual event Thursday, July 20, at Ramona park, and Max Peletier's famous band has been engaged for the occasion. The Florists' Club pays all the expenses, and all florists, their families and friends are welcome. All the wholesale houses, as well as many of the retail stores, have agreed to close on that day, to give their employees a day's outing.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold its monthly meeting Monday, July 3, at 8 p. m., in the Knights of Columbus hall. "There is a raft of business to be transacted," says President Sanders, and a full attendance is requested. The newly elected secretary and treasurer will be installed.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers said she would like to be present at the Florists' Club banquet, June 28, but, owing to the fact that she is the only lady member of the club, she declined the invitation. David Geddis represented the firm at the banquet.

The committee which will handle the games at the Florists' Club's picnic this year has been selected from the four wholesale houses and consists of Frank Windler, Albert Gums, George Schriefer, Fred Alves, Otto Bruening and P. Patton.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Y. Ellison are enjoying their vacation at the northern lakes.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., will leave this week for her summer home in northern Wisconsin.

Pierre Schneider, of the Oakland Floral Co., at Kirkwood, says that their greenhouses are all in shape again and they are sending to C. A. Kuehn a nice, clean lot of carnations.

E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, Ill., were here last week, buying supplies. They say that business for the first two weeks in June was splendid with all the Belleville florists.

Nurserymen of this vicinity have suffered a great deal from the long dry spell and a great deal of the young stock has been killed. C. C. Sanders says the loss to the local nurserymen will run into several thousands of dollars. Relief came Saturday, but not enough. A good soaker is badly needed.

Theo. Klockenkemper has made application for the position of superintendent of public parks. He was superintendent twelve years ago and made an excellent record during his four years in office, and his appointment would be a popular one among the local florists.

W. J. Pilcher, Frank Fillmore and J. J. Beneke have again been appointed as the reception committee for the florists' picnic. This committee has served in the same capacity for the last five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Weber celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary June 20, at their home. Mr. Weber is state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern Missouri.

Louis Magen, a retired florist, aged 60, living at Maplewood, was killed last week by a train on the Missouri Pacific railroad. Further particulars will be found in this week's obituary column.

Woerner Bros., of Clayton, Mo., are sending some extra good Killarney roses to this market. They expect to increase their glass for roses this summer.

H. Heselmeyer, of the St. Louis Seed Co., is traveling in Europe in the interests of the firm. He was last heard from in Holland. Martin Moran, of this firm, says the recent rain has started the business going again.

That wholesale quartet, composed of Messrs. Smith, Ossick, Windler and Patton, is surely a good one. Your scribe was invited to one of their rehearsals last week. J. J. B.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Thanks to the reduction in shipments of cut flowers, an encouraging improvement is noticeable in prices and a steadiness that indicates the summer average has been reached. The lowest prices of the season have probably been seen. Even midsummer rates seldom touch the bottom May and June have done this year. This week should be a busy one for the retailers, for commencements are numerous. The June weddings continue to give encouragement in numbers. The big ships still carry multitudes to Europe and every steamer is freighted with floral baskets, and boxes and bouquets innumerable.

American Beauties when good sell readily at 25 cents, and there are not enough of them. Some notable banquets last week used all the available supply. Of the other roses, Maryland is in best demand and of fine quality. So are Kaiserin and Killarney, when selected. Most of the Killarney now arriving are short-stemmed, however. Only the top grade deserves consideration. Many thousands of carnations sold last week at $10 per thousand, and from that down to 25 cents per hundred for the leftovers. Even the best of the newer varieties brought no more than 2 cents. The extreme heat put a large proportion of the arrivals to sleep. Lilies and valley are firmer. The market now seems able to digest the orchid shipments and, while prices have not advanced, there is no surplus. Long-stemmed sweet peas are in constant demand. There is an abundance of iris. The peony has fulfilled its mission and departed. Gladioli are not yet abundant. Of outdoor flowers, both old and new, there is a sufficiency and the Crimson Rambler is head and shoulders above all else in quantity and beauty.

Various Notes.

The New York Florists' Club held its annual outing June 28, too late for an account of it to appear in this issue.

July 6 the Greek-American Florists' Society will have its annual celebration, also at Wetzel's, going by boat, and furnishing an extensive program of dinners, games and dancing. Last year the attendance was over 500 and this year, George Cotsonas says, they will double the number.

The sweet pea convention this week at Philadelphia will draw a good attendance from New York and vicinity. M. C. Ebel, of Madison, will have his insecticide products on exhibition and give a demonstration, which he will repeat at the Baltimore convention.

The Forster Mansfield Co. has been filling some large contracts at Newport.

Interest in the coming convention of the S. A. F. is growing daily. There will be a big delegation from New York. A special train will start at 10:30 a. m. Monday, August 14, and those who can join the New York crowd are requested to send their names to Chairman Frank H. Traendly, of the transportation committee, 131 West Twenty-eighth street.

July 1 and 2 the Horticultural Society of New York will have an exhibition of outdoor roses, irises, sweet peas, herbaceous plants and vegetables; Richard Richter, manager. Nearly $100 in prizes is offered. The show will be held in the museum of the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park. Dr. Britton will lecture there, at 4 p. m. Saturday. At 5 p. m. Geo. V. Nash will escort those in attendance over the beautiful grounds of New York's finest park.

Patrick O'Mara left June 28 for an outing in Europe, and doubtless an examination of the Blarney stone on his travels. The New York Florists' Club sped him on his way with a box of perfectos.

Myer, the retailer at Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, is spending his week ends on his farm near Middletown, N. Y. He has purchased four fine cottages at Averne, L. I.

Among the notable dinners last week was the one given by the Canadian Club of New York, in honor of the coronation, at which President Taft was the honored guest. The floral decorations were by M. A. Bowe.

McKinney, at Forty-second street and Fifth avenue, had the contract for a large Brooklyn wedding last week and some Delmonico dinners that were greatly to his credit. Arthur Merritt was the artist in the Brooklyn decoration.

"Temporarily closed," is the notice on the door of the Buds seed store, on Barclay street.

Jos. J. Levy was celebrating last week the second arrival of the stork at his home, with a daughter.

Miss Horn and Miss Hess have decided not to close their store at 767 Lexington avenue during July and August, as has been their custom. These young ladies have an excellent business established.

G. Lionel, formerly with Brower, has opened a store at Hastings on the Hudson, with New York headquarters with Kessler Bros.

George Saltford will enjoy his summer outing at his old Rhinebeck home. Clarence Saltford's week ends include some fine catches of the finny tribe at Atlantic Highlands.

The employees of the wholesale section have arranged for a fishing excursion. The managers of the affair are the foremen in P. J. Smith's store. All the tickets are already sold.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht had a fine display of gigas and other popular orchids last week.

J. K. Allen has fully recovered from the grip and is on deck every morning again, as usual.

M. Neigel, with Bonnot Bros., and Miss Nora Lonergan were married June 24 at St. Stephen's church. The firm supplied an abundance of flowers for the occasion.

A. L. Miller's foreman leaves for Switzerland July 1 for a month's visit with relatives.

J. Mieklejohn, representing Frank Darrow, is enjoying his vacation at his home in New York.

Bowling.

The bowlers are rolling away above their reputation and improving weekly. The scores last week were:

Player.	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.
Kakuda	156	213	158	146
Nugent	106	108	156	107
Scott	166	158	151	169

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business has fallen off considerably and so also has the stock of flowers, the exception being sweet peas, which appear to be rather plentiful and are selling at from 25 to 40 cents per hundred. Carnations are beginning to shorten up and those that arrive are exceptionally poor in most cases.

The copious rains of the last few days, when as much as three inches fell in twenty-four hours, have hammered the life out of outside stock. The temperature has been in the neighborhood of 90 degrees every day, and it is not hard to guess what this is doing to stock in greenhouses. Many growers are throwing out the carnations and the roses are so small that it hardly pays to cut them. There is a little good stock coming in, but even that does not sell well, and if it were not for the school commencements of last week there would be practically nothing doing.

Various Notes.

Mrs. James Glass sailed for Ireland Saturday, June 24, with her three children. Mrs. Glass will be gone about ten weeks.

Charles Seybold and wife are in Germany on a pleasure trip.

Mrs. G. A. Lotze, of Glenburnie, Md., has been seriously ill with appendicitis, but is improving and will be able to be taken to her home in a few days.

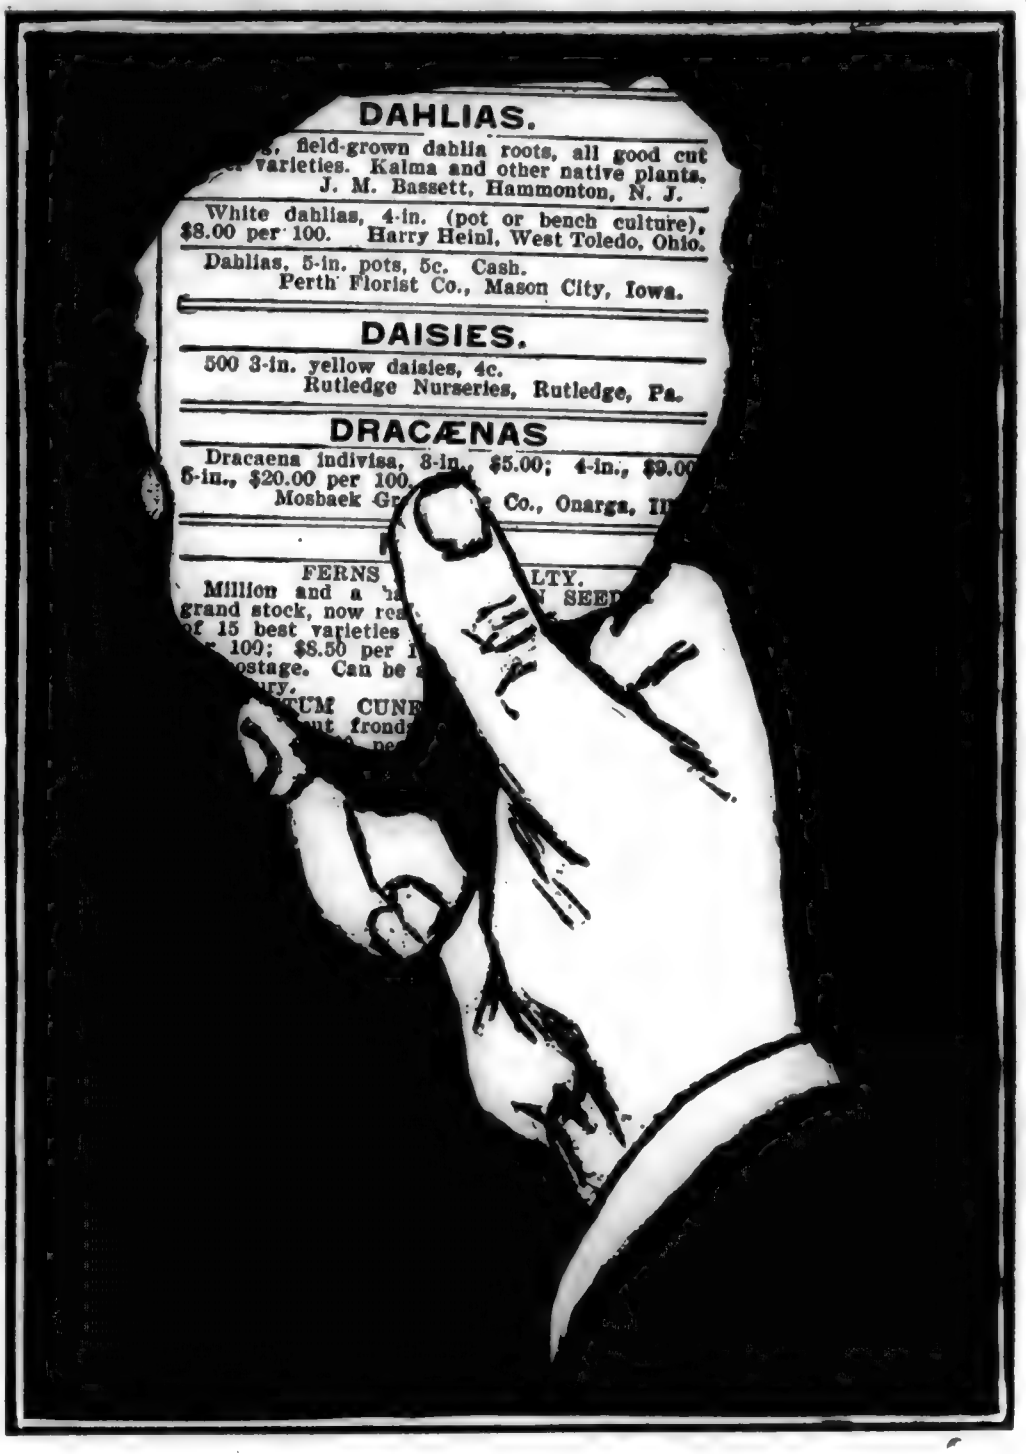
Q.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Last week was, indeed, a busy time for all. The supply in all lines was large, but with the numerous commencement exercises, plus the wedding and funeral orders, stock was cleaned up in good shape. This being the last week in June, many of the florists' best friends will leave for their summer homes, thus putting the finishing touches on the season 1910-11.

Various Notes.



Last week we experienced the hottest weather thus far this season. June 23 the thermometer registered 98 degrees in the shade, helping to give those who attended the singers' convention a warm reception. Among the many thousands of visitors the following florists called on their friends: Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo; A. Ringier, with W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Fred Rentschler, Madison, Wis., and Bernard Koebele, Detroit.

Thursday, July 6, is Florists' Club meeting. The Quiet House, the former meeting place of the club, is now a thing of the past and new quarters have not yet been chosen.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co. still is cutting carnations of really good quality; no red spider on them either.

These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Alfred Hannah.

Mrs. Jennie O. Hannah, wife of Alfred Hannah, of the Grand Rapids Floral Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., died at the residence of her son, Wilfred Hannah, 1145 South East street, June 14, after a month's illness. She was born in Richmond Center, N. Y., seventy-four years ago and was married to Mr. Hannah in 1876. Besides the son, Wilfred, she is survived by a daughter, Dorothy.

Louis Magen.

Louis Magen, a retired florist, aged 60, who resided at 7416 Canterbury avenue, Maplewood, St. Louis, Mo., was killed by a train on the Missouri Pacific railroad on the night of June 21. His decapitated body was found on the tracks early the following morning and his friends suspect foul play. He was president of a society known as the Greenhouse Club, an exclusively social organization of Maplewood. A widow and three children—Charles, 23 years old; Mary, 20, and Ella, 16—survive. Mrs. Magen said her husband left home on the afternoon of the fatal day with $200 to place in his safety deposit box in a St. Louis bank.

Preston W. Butler.

Preston W. Butler, a florist and nurseryman of Penfield, N. Y., died at his home in that town June 14, at the age of 79 years. He was a lifelong resident of Penfield. He was twice married, and, besides his wife, he leaves three daughters, Mrs. John Van Alast, of Fairport, and Misses Sarah and Lerena Butler, of Rochester; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen Holdredge, of Rochester, and Mrs. Celinda Wagner, of Penfield, and three brothers, A. Butler and Wilbur Butler, of Penfield, and Benjamin, of Fairport.

Springfield, Ill.—A. C. Canfield made the first shipment of asters June 26, 1,175 blooms. The variety was Canfield's sport of Semple's Shell Pink. While the parent variety does not bloom until August, the first flowers of the Canfield sport were cut this season June 7.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Fourth of July, a legal holiday, this year falls on Tuesday, the busiest day of the week in The Review office, and the day on which advertising forms close.

Advertisers and correspondents are urged to mail matter for the issue going to press July 5

ONE DAY EARLIER THAN USUAL

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

When you telegraph an order add the code word "Transmit," which means "Mentioned in your advertisement in the Florists' Review."

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

With no chrysanthemum show at Chicago this year, it will lie between Milwaukee, St. Louis and Cincinnati which shall have the honor of holding the biggest autumn exhibition of 1911.

The minimum charge for a shipment by freight has been 25 cents. This the railroads north of the Ohio purposed advancing July 1 to 35 cents, but the Interstate Commerce Commission has delayed three months.

The premium list for the Illinois State Fair, Springfield, September 29 to October 7, has been issued. It provides liberally for floriculture, exhibits to be staged October 2 to 5. Since there is to be no big fall show at Chicago this year, the State Fair show should be much larger than ever before.

The annual volume of the American Carnation Society has been received, containing the official report of the twentieth annual meeting and exhibition at Boston, March 28 to 30, 1911. In addition to the usual list of members and list of registrations for the year, there is a list of the varieties registered with the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society of England.

How many florists make any real effort to reach the flower-buying public? Not one in a dozen. The average florist is content with a good window as his only bid for business—that and the reputation resulting from good work. When florists go out after business the way the grocers, the hatters and the candy-store men, not to mention the department stores, do, the use of flowers will be multiplied many fold. For a starter, it is not necessary to use such expensive methods, or such spectacular ones, as those of Penn, of Boston, described in the last issue of The Review, or of the Park Floral Co., Denver, reported in the present issue.

If your city is not already represented in the news columns of The Review, how would you like to contribute news letters? There are openings in several good cities.

One of the British firms manufacturing greenhouse material advertises: "American glasshouses at English prices; we are glad to be able to announce that by a new system of wire trussed rafters we are able to build glasshouses in widths up to forty-eight feet, either singly or in blocks, without additional purlin supports or other obstructions."

IN A HURRY.

If you have stock you don't need for your local trade, why not turn it into cash? This is the way it works when any good, seasonable stock is offered in the classified columns of The Review:

Your paper certainly gives good results; we sold out in a hurry and had to return money to a lot of buyers whose orders came late.—D. Ruttle & Son, Latonia, Ky., June 12, 1911.

DUTY ON IMMORTELLES.

Following the decision reported in The Review for May 4, the U. S. Board of General Appraisers has modified the action of the collector of customs at Boston, who levied a duty of sixty per cent on an importation of immortelles consigned to the American Express Co. A special report of the appraiser states: "The merchandise subject of protest consists of immortelles or everlasting flowers, some of which are made up in the form of wreaths and which have been chemically treated to enhance their durability." For the board, General Appraiser McClelland finds "from the evidence that the item described on the invoice as '3125 yellow natural' consists of immortelles in their natural condition. This item is dutiable, as claimed, at the rate of twenty-five per cent ad valorem, under paragraph 263, tariff act of 1909. To this extent the protest is sustained, the decision of the collector being modified accordingly. Abstract 25349 (T. D. 31524)."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market has settled into the summer routine earlier than in any recent year. Because of weather conditions the peonies, the sweet peas and the candidum lilies are finished and the market is left with a more limited assortment of stock than has been the case at any time heretofore this year. The last of the peonies were sold early this week. The indoor sweet peas are practically over and the outdoor crop does not have the quality to make it an important factor. The candidum lilies were cut almost at one time; they did not last nearly so long this season as usual. Gladioli still are confined to the indoor crop and only a few asters have appeared. For the present the market is dependent on roses, carnations, lilies and a few other of the indoor crops.

The supply of Beauties is not nearly so large as it has been and the average quality is greatly improved. It is stated that the average price doubled last week, the reason being that clean-up sales at sacrifice rates are no longer necessary.

First-class roses sold excellently all last week, and still are doing so. The

FINEST SUMMER BEAUTIES

SPECIAL CROP—ALL YOU WANT

Year after year we have supplied the trade with the finest Beauties available in summer. Not only has the quality of our summer crop been exceptionally good, but our growers have been able to maintain a steady supply—we have been able to furnish the best Beauties all the time. The steady summer cut is on again. If you are familiar with this crop, you already are buying of us. If you don't know these Beauties, we shall be glad to have you get acquainted—there will be profit in it for both of us.

KILLARNEY

White and Pink—the finest stock

These are cut from houses handled specially for a summer crop—the longest-stemmed roses on this market. There are so many short roses now offered, and so few long-stemmed roses, that you don't want to lose sight of the fact that the longest stems carry the largest flowers. We can supply in quantity.

Valley

Order Valley of us and you will draw on a never-failing source of supply. We have the best grade.

Cattleyas

For quality these will stand with the best seen anywhere in this country and we always can supply.

EASTER LILIES

You can get here all the Lilies you need. We have a big supply of fine home-grown stock. Can furnish in thousand lots and will quote special prices on quantities if you write or wire.

Glads

America and other finest varieties.

Daisies

Shastas that are sure to please.

CARNATIONS

We can supply as good stock as the season makes it possible to obtain.

reason is not so much the strength of the demand as the lightness of the supply of long-stemmed flowers. There are plenty of short roses, but not many long ones. Killarney holds its lead and it appears that the market will be largely dependent upon White Killarney for white roses this summer; there are few Kaiserin and hardly any Bride. Most of the White Killarney are short and there are not many but what show the characteristic summer color. Such Kaiserin as come in command an extra price. Maryland and Jardine are in good form. Only a few Field are seen. Richmond is in slight request, for red roses are not much wanted in summer.

There continue to be large supplies of carnations, although no such glut as existed a few weeks ago. The shipping demand for these is not strong and summer prices are the rule, for summer quality is all that can be expected.

Easter lilies continue abundant. A few first-class indoor gladioli are seen. Orchids have become one of the short items. Valley is abundant.

The new crop of ferns is here in large quantities and prices have fallen still another notch.

Last week business was entirely satisfactory by comparison with what has gone before. The city trade is not strong, though there have been a fair number of weddings to use up the special stock. Shipping demand is good. The number of orders received is large, but the average size of the orders is small. It appears that the country buyers have all the poor stock they can dispose of; they send to Chicago only for the better grades of stock, material for filling orders that call for better flowers than the home production.

Beginning July 1, the wholesale houses will close at 5 p. m.

Big Spring Show.

Secretary J. H. Burdett states that the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago has voted not to hold the usual fall flower show in the Coliseum building this year, but to hold a big exhibition next March in its stead. A dahlia and aster show will be held at the Art Institute in September, the exact date to be determined by the seasonable conditions. A premium schedule for this exhibition is now being printed and will be issued shortly. A premium schedule for the spring show next March is being prepared by a special committee, which held a meeting at the office of W. N. Rudd June 26. It will offer prizes as large as usually given in the fall show at Chicago. It is hoped in the spring exhibition to obtain a more varied display, and to arouse renewed public interest in the flower show.

Growers' Association Announces Plans.

A lease has been executed by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association on the entire building at 176 North Michigan avenue (old number, 81 Michigan), and it is planned to open for business July 15. A meeting was held June 27 at which all details were closed up except the selection of a manager, which will remain open until July 5.

The location is between Randolph and Lake streets, the property being store, basement and three upper floors, each 24x130. A five years' lease has been made at an annual rental of $4,800. The store floor and basement are to be occupied by the wholesale house, fixtures having been ordered, and the upper floors sublet until such time as the growth of the business calls for their use. Officers of the company state that all the shares of the company have for the present been placed with growers; that consignments will not be handled except from stockholders and that the stock of supplies carried will, at least for a time, be limited to such articles as are used by growers, the effect being to give the stockholders the benefits of coöperative buying and selling.

The management, until a permanent manager is appointed, rests with President J. F. Kidwell. The other of-

Various Notes.

Wilhelmina is the name Hoerber Bros. have given to a new bright pink rose a shade darker than Killarney. It has been registered with the S. A. F. as of unknown parentage, having the habit of Killarney and flowers the shape of those of Golden Gate, but much larger, growth strong and free, a fine forcing rose, at its best from October to May.

Phil Schupp and A. H. Budlong spent June 23 to 26 at Lake Geneva, where the Budlong families are summering in their cottages.

Charles Klehm, of Klehm's Nurseries, says they never sold out of peonies as quickly as this year. They appear thoroughly well pleased with the peony season.

Bassett & Washburn have replanted half the space devoted to carnations. Mr. Washburn says they would grow all their stock indoors all summer were it feasible to make all the space ready for early planting.

Vaughan & Sperry say the last half of June has been so good that it has made up for the falling off in the volume of sales in the first half of the month, when the market was so badly glutted.

Frank Pasternick and his bride of June 21 have returned from their honeymoon in Wisconsin.

A. L. Randall has gone to Michigan to remain until the fruit crops are harvested.

E. H. Hunt's business year ends June 30 and inventory will make July 1 and succeeding days as busy as any of the season.

H. W. Rogers, of Weiland & Risch, is vacationing at the family home at Pentwater, Mich.

Miss Martha Gunterberg's father, mother and brother were in the wreck of the homeward-bound Milwaukee singers June 25. Mrs. Gunterberg was badly cut and bruised, but the male members of the family escaped with nothing more than a shaking up.

E. E. Pieser still is away from business.

Cut spiræa has been one of the unusual items. Consigned by one of the Percy Jones growers.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports an excellent latter half of June.

E. C. Amling Co. says this has been a poor season for the sweet pea growers. The heat not only took the value out of the Butterfly peas, but killed the vines.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Cut flowers are selling well, but carnations are of poor quality. American Beauties are good for the season and are selling well. A fine lot of lily of the valley is arriving. Large quantities of Harrisii lilies are being cut by the local florists.

The trade in the Sixth Avenue Flower Market is practically at a standstill, except on Saturday afternoons.

Various Notes.

Ben George is making hay while the June sun shines, with a big daily crop of nice valley.

E. H. Freise, Highlands, Ky., is keeping this market supplied with Easter lilies.

The show committee had a meeting at Max Rudolph's, June 23. Growers, take notice: There will be some good premiums offered, that will be worth while going after. The preliminary list of prizes can be had by addressing George S. Bartlett, 131 East Third street.

Skidelsky & Irwin Co. and Wm. Murphy have secured the stock of the new carnation, Delhi, originated by C. C. Murphy. It will be disseminated in the spring of 1912.

Ray Murphy is away on his vacation at Portsmouth, Ohio.

B. P. Critchell has suffered an attack of heart trouble, but is able to be around again.

The Rising Eastern Market.

"Business has reached a summer level." That is the way a leading wholesaler described the situation this last week in June, a terse expression that clearly conveys the idea of the conditions governing the cut flower market. There is a fair amount of business out of town, chiefly for the last of the important weddings, and a little doing in town, but not much. The feature of the market is the improvement in Easter lilies, now an important factor. They are good, also plentiful. Valley is disposed of in quantity. The quality is excellent. Roses are plentiful. The best Beauties come from down east. The local stock is of lower grade, in most cases. Kaiserins are improving and there are more of them. Marylands are fair and there are some nice Brides. Cattleyas are scarce. There are lots of nice sweet peas, but not many gilt-edged blossoms. Carnations are not nearly so plentiful; some few still are nice. Cornflower, coreopsis and candytuft are abundant. Fancy water lilies are in fair supply. Double white petunias are selling well. Greens are not selling.

Barnegat Bay.

Commodore John Westcott opened the Waretown season June 23, when he entertained a large party at his club house in handsome style. The Commodore's guests were: Wm. F. Gude, Wm. R. Smith and John Clark, Washington, D. C.; J. K. M. L. Farquhar and W. J. Stewart, Boston; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; George Anderson, John Burton, George Craig, Robert Craig, D. C. Donohoe, Hugh Eble, Robert Kift, Dr. P. M. Lane, J. C. McKinney, F. J. Michell, Jr., Samuel S. Pennock, David Rust, George C. Watson and William B. Westcott. At the dinner in the evening Robert Craig presented the hospitable Commodore with a set of Balzac's works on behalf of his guests. The Commodore replied in suitable words, expressing his appreciation. Speeches were also made by William F. Gude and William J. Stewart. Most of this party stayed to try the motor boat the next day. The affair was most successful and greatly enjoyed.

The Pennsylvania Society.

There has been for years a feeling among leading horticulturists in and about Philadelphia that the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society did its work well in some respects and neglected it sadly in others. The management stands for all that is best in horticulture; its courtesy, liberality and fair dealing are unquestioned, but it makes little effort to interest the general public or bring them to the shows in Horticultural hall. The large special and the regular monthly shows are, as a rule, poorly attended. These shows attract the initiated, who are aware of the high standard of excellence almost invariably shown in the exhibits, but they do not attract those who are uninitiated, the masses who would gladly come were the shows half as well advertised as

MELODY

In selling this rose early in the season we did not recommend it as a summer bloomer, our feeling being that it was an unusually good winter forcer. Now after a month or more of hot weather we find it a splendid summer rose, holding its color and form in fine shape. As a cut flower it has been and is selling extra well and at present we are often unable to take care of all orders that come in to us. Unquestionably we recommend it as the very finest yellow rose and one of the best money makers on the market. For a grower retailing his own cut flowers it hasn't an equal in the rose line today.

Own root plants, 2½-inch pots, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

DOUBLE PINK KILLARNEY. It has no equal commercially. Own root, 2½-inch, $20.00 per 100; $150.00 per 1000. Grafted, 2½-inch, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

PRINCE DE BULGARIE. Entirely different from any rose grown. Own root, 2½-inch, $15.00 per 100; $120.00 per 1000. Grafted, 2¼-inch, $20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000.

During July and August we will close at 5 p. m.

they deserve to be. I have before me a letter today from one of the leading horticulturists in the east on this subject. He says that he would gladly make an exhibit of a certain flower at the monthly meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, but that he feels that this is time and energy thrown away, as the society makes no effort to bring people to its meetings. He further suggests that much may be done if the society will change its policy in this matter and take its rightful place as a public leader in affairs horticultural.

With this object in view these lines are written, in the hope that some member of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will recognize their truth and push forward the reform that can do so much for floriculture and for the society.

Griffin Bros.

A discerning salesman, one of the most active of the corps who regularly visit the florists in the suburbs of Philadelphia, says that Griffin Bros. always have $1,000 ready for anything attractive that comes along. That means that Griffin Bros. are good business men as well as good florists.

The firm has stood as one of the leading flower firms in Frankford for many years past. They do a general business, retailing chiefly and wholesaling the balance. They depend principally on

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

YOUR SUMMER INCOME

Can be increased by forethought.

A pretty window arrangement, a dainty touch here and there in your shop will often attract people and then remind them of a gift they would take or send to someone, and you benefit, rather than the confectioner or the fruit dealer.

Take our Imperial Chinaware, for instance; some of the pieces artistically filled and arranged are certain to give pleasure and make the best form of advertising, because they will make so strong an impression that people will think of them and of you when they want something choice. The cost is small and they are not expensive to fill.

Then there are our tasty little French Handle Baskets and Hampers and many other pretty things that bring business and make your stock look so well. To see means to want.

We can help you increase your earnings this summer; will you let us try?

that form of our business that appeals so strongly to outsiders because of its two profits, a little profit on growing and a little profit on selling. Practically it takes a pretty clever man to do this nowadays, as each, growing and selling, has become a branch by itself. There evidently are pretty clever men in the square of glass and outside planting where the firm does business.

James Griffin, one of the founders, supplies the knowledge and steadiness, while his son, Bruce Griffin, furnishes the modern ideas and enthusiasm illustrated in the orchid department that is now proving one of the main features in the business. The largest crop of orchids ever harvested in Frankford was brought in last Easter by Griffin Bros. So successful have they been that the maximum returns were gathered from the minimum space devoted to this tropical flower—returns so large that I hesitate to name them, fearing you might say it is just a newspaper story, instead of believing it, as you would were you told by young Mr. Griffin himself. The smaller variety, Cattleya Harrisoniæ, is coming into bloom now; it is grown for variety's sake and is quite acceptable, because its season comes when the finer cattleyas are out of bloom. The other greenhouses are devoted to carnations, bedding plants, palms, asparagus, asters, chrysanthemums and poinsettias.

Mr. Griffin has a place at Cornwall, where he resides in summer, and is planning to add to his range there. An Overland machine carries him back and forth in a half hour's time.

Various Notes.

Godfrey Aschmann reports an excellent demand for bedding plants in June. May, Mr. Aschmann says, was too hot and dry to encourage outdoor decorations of porch and garden, but June has been most encouraging, the demand lasting throughout the whole month.

H. F. Littlefield, of Worcester, Mass., was in town recently.

The Florex Gardens have decided not to discard Beauties, as announced last month. Beauties will be planted, it is now planned, in one or two of the medium sized houses.

COLUMBUS, OHIO

Buffalo, N. Y., called on her way home from Atlantic City, to see the new styles in florists' supplies.

Henry F. Michell is at the city by the sea.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., is busily engaged in receiving his house's foreign importations. The advance cases included many attractive baskets in natural bamboo, lavender, Nile green and blue antique baskets with gold finish.

The Collingdale Greenhouses have a large stock of chrysanthemums planted for cut flowers. Alfred M. Campbell is pushing things lively.

Frank Hastings will leave July 1 for a month at the seashore.

Robert Shoch, with M. Rice & Co., has returned from a trip to Baltimore and Washington. Mr. Shoch saw the beautiful decorations for the president's silver wedding anniversary. The Washington florists used many baskets of orchids on this memorable occasion.

Here's a Mighty Fine Opportunity for a good man who knows the Nursery Business, or a firm that wants a branch house

I own one of the best greenhouse and nursery plants in the country—50,000 feet of glass is now in carnations and 130 acres in general nursery stock. I am a banker, a mighty busy man, and cannot give this enterprise the attention it deserves. A reliable nursery firm or a competent man who possesses good business ability will be sold a half interest at a fair price and on reasonable terms. It is desirable—but not absolutely necessary—that such a man should have a knowledge of greenhouse management, and a married man is preferable. This locality is unexcelled for growing many kinds of nursery stock, and I believe it is an opportunity for a nursery firm or a capable man to establish a splendid business. If you feel that you are the type of a partner I am looking for, and can invest from $15,000 to $20,000, write to me at once.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

There has been no pronounced falling off of business during June. Stock is good and the quantity about right. There is no great scarcity and no great surplus. Carnations, although good, sell rather slowly in the city, but they ship well, and for that reason are in demand in the smaller towns.

Outdoor sweet peas have made their appearance and are fairly good. Shasta daisies, gaillardia, coreopsis and Lilium candidum seem to be favorites in the way of outdoor stock. In the almost total absence of other greens, asparagus from the garden finds ready sale. Fern leaves are wanted badly, but it is next to impossible to get them here in good condition during this extremely warm weather, and few are to be had.

Various Notes.

The Cut Rate Flower Store, on Broadway, has closed its doors, after a most successful spring business.

Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Sullivan have been made happy by the arrival of a

Mrs. Fred Hall and her daughter, Mary, were called to New York last Tuesday on account of the death of a relative.

It has leaked out that a half dozen or more of our prominent florists have been having social poker parties; enjoyable little affairs, so it is said. First they have a nice, quiet game, with just enough up to make it interesting, and after that the host gives them a spread, consisting of most of the things men like to eat and drink. We are not at liberty to name the members of this card club, but if you are on the outside, are a "good fellow" and would like to join, just approach any one of the prominent florists. Perhaps he will give you the necessary information.

more than one year. At present there are included four or five ex-employees. At the close of the dinner, Mr. Valentine, in behalf of the Coterie, presented to Mr. and Mrs. Cooper for their daughter, Edith Virginia Cooper, a silver bowl and plate, engraved "The Coterie's First Baby." After some gentle hazing, Miss Avery Edwards and Mr. Hugo Neff were admitted as members. The Coterie consists of Mr. and Mrs. Valentine, Mr. and Mrs. Neiman, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy, the Misses Page, Webb, Edwards and Jennings; Messrs. Gillis, McCord, Rackham and Neff.

W. C. Walter is no longer connected with the Denver Wholesale Florists' Co. His retail trade has increased rapidly, and he feels it is all he can take care of. His stock in the wholesale company was bought by Fred Hall and C. F. Maler.

This is the time of year when the growers' contracts with the retailers expire, and there is much guessing as to whether some of these contracts will be renewed. If they are not renewed, then comes the question as to what disposition the growers will make of their stock. There are only three solutions

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE crop inspectors are afield in force.

SWEET CORN and the vine seed crops will be the next thing the anxious will want reports on.

BEANS have gone into the ground in good shape and as a general thing good stands are reported.

THE northern Michigan farmers are reported to be still busy planting late potatoes. The recent high prices of that commodity evidently make them feel that it will pay to take chances.

TURNIP seed and beans are in good demand at present. It is said that "living prices" are being paid for these articles also, which is a help to those living at a distance from Marblehead, Mass.

THE onion crops in the marsh districts of Ohio and Indiana are reported to be suffering; it is insect pests now which seem to be cleaning up what plants the wind storms earlier in the season left standing.

J. E. HOOPES & Co., on Muscatine Island, out in Iowa, have had a hard time to get their pepper fields started this season. It turned so hot the plants scalded and dropped. They replanted three times before they could get a good stand. Drought has been a severe handicap to all crops in their region.

THE Michigan radish crops are reported to be doing well. The acreage is short of last year, and the weather at the start was not as favorable as it might have been, but the soil in the sections where the best growers operate is well adapted to this crop and it responds quickly when conditions become seasonable.

THE Treasury Department has issued its annual instructions to collectors of customs to forward two-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage plant seeds to the Department of Agriculture for examination. This order is to hold good throughout the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912.

IT seems to be too early to get anything definite as to the pea crops. Reports are varied, the different sections showing different conditions and all holding off for the inevitable something that reaches sooner or later to cut the crop. The chances seem to be even that things will be no worse than last year, and it is hoped that they will prove to be somewhat better.

THE Chicago onion set crop has been hurt considerably by the maggot during the last week. Quite a few acres have been plowed up and there are more to follow if conditions do not change. The weeds have been a source of annoyance, also, and the outlook is not as encouraging as it was several weeks ago. The acreage to start with was much less than it was last year and, although the stand at the beginning was better, the present condition of the crop is much below normal. A two-thirds crop is about all that the growers count on now, and to get this much the crop will need to keep right on doing its best.

WALTER MOTT has joined the road force of Wm. Elliott & Sons, New York.

THE English seed growers have had a dry season to last mail, sweet peas having suffered as much as anything.

THE Leonard Seed Co. has enlarged its Chicago plant 15,000 square feet by taking in number 226 West Kinzie street.

SWEET peas in California and garden peas in Michigan and other sections are about all in the same class—no full crops anywhere.

IT is reported that L. B. Ransom, of Columbus, O., is organizing a seed company and has decided to establish his headquarters at Champaign, Ill.

F. W. KOSEK, until recently with the Farmers' Seed & Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn., has become manager for the minnesota Seed Co., New Ulm, Minn.

IF France has another poor crop of radish this year, prices are likely to advance sharply. Reports from California indicate no unusually heavy supplies from that section, and known acreage in Michigan is lighter than last year.

Leonard H. Vaughan.
(President American Seed Trade Association.)

THE optimistic Chicagoan notes that the central west continues to advance steadily as a seed growing section. He thinks that in due time the mellow prairies of the states tributary to the "great central market" will be the seed garden of the world.

THE insecticide act of 1910 makes it the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture to exclude from this country importations of insecticides or fungicides that do not come up to the requirements of the law, and the Secretary of the Treasury has just issued orders making the regulations for gathering samples, etc., under the pure food law apply also to importations of insecticides and fungicides.

THE United States Seed Co., of Fredonia, N. Y., and San Antonio, Tex., has established a branch also at Memphis, Tenn., with offices at the corner of Front street and Gayoso avenue. The company's general manager, F. M. Roesch, of Fredonia, has recently been in Memphis, taking temporary charge of affairs. Charles Jackman, also of Fredonia, has been appointed manager of the Memphis branch.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, president of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, will not be able to preside at this week's convention at Philadelphia. After the date had been set as originally, June 23 and 24, he arranged a trip to Europe and sailed from New York June 28, accompanied by Mrs. Burpee and their sons.

No longer satisfied with selling both the seed trade and the florists in the United States, some of the Holland bulb houses are this season going after the orders from the general public. The Garden Magazine for July contains the advertisements of four such bulb exporters and one Overveen firm offers "bulbs direct by parcels post, from the Holland grower, orders of $4 and above carriage free."

THE MARBLEHEAD MEETING.

[The reports of officers and committees, essays, etc., were covered in the account of the convention published on this page last week.]

Officers Elected.

President—Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, Ill.

First vice-president—Marshall H. Duryea, New York city.

Second vice-president—Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.

Secretary-treasurer—C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Assistant secretary—J. H. Ford, Ravenna, O.

Membership committee—Albert McCullough, Cincinnati; Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; J. W. May, Alexandria, Va.

Position of Disclaimer.

In The Review for July 28, 1910, there appeared the following item:

An attorney whose specialty is commercial law states that no part of what may be printed on a letter-head is a part of a contract unless it be between the date line and the signature, except a reference appears between those parts to practically bring the outside words within the body of the letter itself. This would apply to the non-warranty clause as printed on most seedsmen's stationery.

This was the subject of considerable discussion among the trade and many letters reached The Review, from seedsmen who wanted further information. These were advised that the opinion was based, among other things, on a decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois in which it was held that "printed matter in a letter-head forms no part of the letter written on the sheet, and will not qualify an absolute contract which results from an acceptance of an offer by such letter." See 153 Ill., 102. As a result some of the trade printed stationery on which the disclaimer appears just below where the typewriter puts the words "Dear Sirs."

President Page, in his annual address, referred to the importance of this point and later in the week there was a general discussion of it, with the result that a committee consisting of Curtis Nye Smith, attorney for the association; Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., and S. F. Leonard, of Leonard Seed Co., was appointed to consider and report on the need for the general adoption of the new position for the disclaimer.

echo in a resolution introduced by Kirby B. White. As reported in The Review, James R. SWEET CORN and the vine seed crops will be the next thing the anxious will want reports on.

BEANS have gone into the ground in good shape and as a general thing good stands are reported.

THE northern Michigan farmers are reported to be still busy planting late potatoes. The recent high prices of that commodity evidently make them feel that it will pay to take chances.

TURNIP seed and beans are in good demand at present. It is said that "living prices" are being paid for these articles also, which is a help to those living at a distance from Marblehead, Mass.

THE onion crops in the marsh districts of Ohio and Indiana are reported to be suffering; it is insect pests now which seem to be cleaning up what plants the wind storms earlier in the season left standing.

J. E. HOOPES & Co., on Muscatine Island, out in Iowa, have had a hard time to get their pepper fields started this season. It turned so hot the plants scalded and dropped. They replanted three times before they could get a good stand. Drought has been a severe handicap to all crops in their region.

THE Michigan radish crops are reported to be doing well. The acreage is short of last year, and the weather at the start was not as favorable as it might have been, but the soil in the sections where the best growers operate is well adapted to this crop and it responds quickly when conditions become seasonable.

THE Treasury Department has issued its annual instructions to collectors of customs to forward two-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage plant seeds to the Department of Agriculture for examination. This order is to hold good throughout the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912.

IT seems to be too early to get anything definite as to the pea crops. Reports are varied, the different sections showing different conditions and all holding off for the inevitable something that reaches sooner or later to cut the crop. The chances seem to be even that things will be no worse than last year, and it is hoped that they will prove to be somewhat better.

THE Chicago onion set crop has been hurt considerably by the maggot during the last week. Quite a few acres have been plowed up and there are more to follow if conditions do not change. The weeds have been a source of annoyance, also, and the outlook is not as encouraging as it was several weeks ago. The acreage to start with was much less than it was last year and, although the stand at the beginning was better, the present condition of the crop is much below normal. A two-thirds crop is about all that the growers count on now, and to get this much the crop will need to keep right on doing its best.

WALTER MOTT has joined the road force of Wm. Elliott & Sons, New York.

THE English seed growers have had a dry season to last mail, sweet peas having suffered as much as anything.

THE Leonard Seed Co. has enlarged its Chicago plant 15,000 square feet by taking in number 226 West Kinzie street.

SWEET peas in California and garden peas in Michigan and other sections are about all in the same class—no full crops anywhere.

IT is reported that L. B. Ransom, of Columbus, O., is organizing a seed company and has decided to establish his headquarters at Champaign, Ill.

F. W. KOSEK, until recently with the Farmers' Seed & Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn., has become manager for the Minnesota Seed Co., New Ulm, Minn.

IF France has another poor crop of radish this year, prices are likely to advance sharply. Reports from California indicate no unusually heavy supplies from that section, and known acreage in Michigan is lighter than last year.

Leonard H. Vaughan.
(President American Seed Trade Association.)

THE optimistic Chicagoan notes that the central west continues to advance steadily as a seed growing section. He thinks that in due time the mellow prairies of the states tributary to the "great central market" will be the seed garden of the world.

THE insecticide act of 1910 makes it the duty of the Secretary of Agriculture to exclude from this country importations of insecticides or fungicides that do not come up to the requirements of the law, and the Secretary of the Treasury has just issued orders making the regulations for gathering samples, etc., under the pure food law apply also to importations of insecticides and fungicides.

THE United States Seed Co., of Fredonia, N. Y., and San Antonio, Tex., has established a branch also at Memphis, Tenn., with offices at the corner of Front street and Gayoso avenue. The company's general manager, F. M. Roesch, of Fredonia, has recently been in Memphis, taking temporary charge of affairs. Charles Jackman, also of Fredonia, has been appointed manager of the Memphis branch.

W. ATLEE BURPEE, president of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, will not be able to preside at this week's convention at Philadelphia. After the date had been set as originally, June 23 and 24, he arranged a trip to Europe and sailed from New York June 28, accompanied by Mrs. Burpee and their sons.

NO longer satisfied with selling both the seed trade and the florists in the United States, some of the Holland bulb houses are this season going after the orders from the general public. The Garden Magazine for July contains the advertisements of four such bulb exporters and one Overveen firm offers "bulbs direct by parcels post, from the Holland grower, orders of $4 and above carriage free."

THE MARBLEHEAD MEETING.

[The reports of officers and committees, essays, etc., were covered in the account of the convention published on this page last week.]

Officers Elected.

President—Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago, Ill.

First vice-president—Marshall H. Duryea, New York city.

Second vice-president—Edgar Gregory, Marblehead, Mass.

Secretary-treasurer—C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

Assistant secretary—J. H. Ford, Ravenna, O.

Executive committee—E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.; C. C. Massie, Minneapolis, Minn.; Henry Nungesser, New York; C. F. Wood, Louisville, Ky.

Membership committee—Albert McCullough, Cincinnati; Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.; J. W. May, Alexandria, Va.

Position of Disclaimer.

In The Review for July 28, 1910, there appeared the following item:

An attorney whose specialty is commercial law states that no part of what may be printed on a letter-head is a part of a contract unless it be between the date line and the signature, except a reference appears between those parts to practically bring the outside words within the body of the letter itself. This would apply to the non warranty clause as printed on most seedsmen's stationery.

This was the subject of considerable discussion among the trade and many letters reached The Review, from seedsmen who wanted further information. These were advised that the opinion was based, among other things, on a decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois in which it was held that "printed matter in a letter-head forms no part of the letter written on the sheet, and will not qualify an absolute contract which results from an acceptance of an offer by such letter." See 153 Ill., 102. As a result some of the trade printed stationery on which the disclaimer appears just below where the typewriter puts the words "Dear Sirs."

President Page, in his annual address, referred to the importance of this point and later in the week there was a general discussion of it, with the result that a committee consisting of Curtis Nye Smith, attorney for the association; Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., and S. F. Leonard, of Leonard Seed Co., was appointed to consider and report on the need for the general adoption of the new position for the disclaimer.

echo in a resolution introduced by Kirby B. White. As reported in The Review, James R. the better of it at that time, but he got his answer when the Seed Trade Association unanimously adopted Mr. White's resolution, as follows:

Whereas, It has been charged in the present Congress of the national legislature that the seed trade of the United States was under suspicion of having committed fraud in importing certain seeds under false pretenses, and that American dealers have systematically committed perjury to escape the payment of lawful excises; and,

Whereas, These charges, if true, are worthy of unqualified condemnation, but if unfounded are a libel on the trade in general; now, therefore,

Be it resolved, In justice to ourselves and in the name of simple decency, that we urge the legislative and executive branches of the government to spare no pains to ascertain the facts in the case, and to prosecute all offenders wherever found; and further,

Resolved, That to the end of securing punishment for the guilty and vindication for the innocent, we pledge ourselves individually and as an association to cordially support all reasonable efforts to secure rigid justice; and

Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be respectfully submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the Hon. James R. Mann.

Mr. White also introduced, by request, a resolution which was unanimously adopted, urging upon Congress the need for amendment of the corporation income tax law, whereby it shall be made permissible for corporations to make returns as of the close of their individual fiscal years, to the end that obedience to the law may be rendered less burdensome and accurate compliance with its provisions possible. Several members urged all present to have similar action taken by such other mercantile bodies as they may be members of.

Members and Meeting Place.

The 162 active members and two honorary members were reinforced by the election of the following to active membership:

Buck, E. A., & Co., Worcester, Mass.
Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, Cal.
Woodruff, F. H., & Son, Milford, Conn.
McCullough, H. T., Santa Ynez, Cal.
Schulte, L. B., Houston, Tex.
Cobb, W. F., Franklin, Mass.

The selection of the next meeting place is in the hands of the executive committee, but informal discussion showed the general opinion to be that the meeting should be held in the middle west, probably at some lake resort.

The State Correspondents.

The state correspondents were provided for by action of the association at Atlantic City in 1910. They have been so valuable an assistance in handling the work of the association that President Page recommended their reappointment and pointed out ways in which their usefulness may be extended in other directions than the handling of seed legislation, the subject covered in the reports presented this year and referred to the executive committee.

Obituary.

The ranks of the association having suffered depletion by death to a greater extent than in any previous year, President Page appointed a committee on obituary. At the final session Charles N. Page, chairman, presented a report containing eulogies as follows: On the death of Charles P. Braslan, San Jose, Cal., prepared by C. C. Massie, Minneapolis; on W. A. Denison, Ellisburg, N. Y., prepared by W. C. Langbridge, Cambridge, N. Y.; on William Rennie, Toronto, prepared by Herman Simmers, Toronto; on S. M. Pease, Avon, N. Y., prepared by Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; on John L. Turner, Baltimore, prepared by William G. Scarlett, Baltimore; on R. C. Steele, Toronto, prepared by E. F. Crosland; on Edward L. Coy, prepared by S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn.

The Banquet.

The annual banquet of the association was made the occasion for the presentation of a handsome gold watch to President Page. The oratory was provided by Frank C. Woodruff. Mr. Page acted as toastmaster. Those called upon included Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; George H. Clark, Ottawa, Ont.; H. L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa.; Hon. J. L. Ellsworth, Secretary of Agriculture for the state of Massachusetts; Frank H. Smith, Norwich, Conn.; W. C. Langbridge, Cambridge, N. Y.; C. F. Wood, Louisville, Ky.; S. F. HOLLAND BULB CROPS.

The lifting of the bulbs in Holland has begun as early as usual, in spite of the vicissitudes through which the crops passed in the early part of the season. Tulips have undoubtedly suffered considerably, first by the severely cold weather after growth was well along, and later by blight in the leaves. It is thought the quality of the crop will be satisfactory, but that the quantity will be less than usual. The ripening process has progressed rapidly since the flowering season, because of constant warm, dry weather. Young stocks of hyacinths have been lifted, at least in part, and the bulbs for export will follow shortly. Growers aver that the flowering qualities will be excellent, in spite of some deficiency in the size of the bulbs. The quantity of the crop is satisfactory. Holland exporters are counting on a considerable increase in the demand for hyacinths because of a reduction in the duty paid for admission to America to one-fifth of what has been paid the last two seasons.

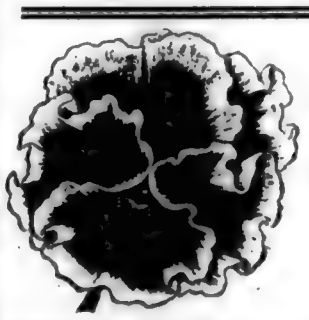
ROCHESTER.



The Market.

"Remarkable" is the word applicable to the weather last week, for it was really remarkable for June. Though the days were warm, there were cool breezes and cool nights. This ideal weather has made stock good and business brisk.

Roses are good in all grades. Killarney and White Killarney are retailing for $1.50 per dozen; Richmonds, $2.50 per dozen; Mrs. Aaron Ward, $2 per dozen. Brides and Bridesmaids are poor and retail for $1 per dozen. Kaiserin Augusta has not made its appearance in our market as yet, which we much regret, for it is one of the best summer roses. Special grades of Killarney, Maryland and Richmond are retailing for $2.50 per dozen. American Beauties bring $4 to $6 per dozen. Lilies of the valley are selling for 75 cents per dozen. Sweet peas are scarce and bring about $1.25 per hundred. Baby gladioli are coming in more plentifully now and bring 50 cents per dozen. Carnations are fair and still run quite large, retailing at 50 cents per dozen.

Hardy ferns are quite scarce just now. Rochester needs a man who would deal in hardy ferns of good quality and supply the market the year around. There is a good opening for someone in this line. Bedding plants are pretty well sold out and few remain that are at all good. Bedding plants have not been quite as good as in other years. Summer trade is settling down gradually to that low ebb when we feel the necessity of a change and a vacation.

work in baskets, jardinieres and boxes, made of birch bark, etc. These rustic articles are for S. A. Anderson's fall and winter trade in Buffalo.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, shipped a fine lot of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine to J. B. Keller's Sons last week. Mr. Anderson's begonias are famous.

T. Ogston is enjoying himself at Conesus Lake.

F. J. Keller reports that he had a rushing trip to New York and Philadelphia and encountered cool weather in both places.

Harmon Clarke, formerly with W. J. Palmer & Son, Buffalo, has gone into the automobile business here. We wish him success.

Dick Salter is back from the mountains, lamenting the fact that it rained all the time he was away and spoiled his pleasure.

George Hart's business seems to be increasing. He is looking for another bookkeeper, we understand.

The caterpillar of the tussock moth is infesting the apple and plum orchards of Oakfield, N. Y., and vicinity to an unusual extent. Orchards which are frequented by song birds, and those which have been sprayed thoroughly for several successive years, seem to be suffering the least.

J. B. Keller's Sons filled several orders for the commencement exercises at Vassar, Smith and Wellesley colleges.

H. E. Wilson did two good wedding decorations last week at the Smith-Thomas and Crouse-Sable weddings. Horace J. Head assisted in the work.

Some of the local florists will begin closing their stores at 6:30 on Saturday evenings, July 1, and will also give their employees a half holiday during July and August.

George Boucher had another unique window display last week. E. C. A.

Canon City, Colo.—John L. and James R. Calvert, who last fall built a vegetable house on their 4-acre tract in Hot Springs addition, have been particularly successful in growing and marketing their stock and have decided to build another house at once. One of their specialties is celery, and their output of this is said to be of extra fine quality.

Freesia Purity

From Original Stock—Greenhouse-grown

ALL those who grew our Greenhouse-grown Purity Freesia last year have given it highest praise and have in many cases increased their orders this year, thereby giving their unqualified endorsement to its merit.

Our bulbs have been grown by a Freesia Specialist, under glass, in a temperature of 45° to 50°, especially for us under contract, and are well-matured, fine, plump bulbs. This method of growing ensures stock being absolutely true.

E. E. Stewart Grower for the Wholesale Trade
Rives Junction, Mich.

When Uncle Sam wants horses for war—real use—he doesn't select them from beauty shows nor according to looks. He buys up such as street-car horses—all he can get—and such animals as have made good by steady, honest work—the animal that averages well, day after day, for they have the power of endurance that will surpass anything in the world.

Cold Storage Horseshoe Brand Giganteum have the same superior power of endurance. They have proved good—have stood the storage strain—and will average higher than any brand known in flowering results. We still have a limited quantity of fully matured Giganteum of last December delivery, which are excellent Cold Storage goods. They cost a little more, perhaps, than some brands, but they are worth a lot more, we think. Try them—order now.

PACIFIC COAST.

Aberdeen, Wash.—M. C. Louis, formerly of Chicago, is now proprietor of the Aberdeen Greenhouses, in this town, and recently opened a store on East Heron street.

Tacoma, Wash.—At a recent meeting of the Tacoma Florists' Association an able paper on dahlia culture was read by E. R. Roberts, formerly superintendent of parks in this city.

Eugene, Ore.—R. Rae, who has been conducting a flower shop on East Ninth street, has purchased the store of Ruggles Bros., on the same street, and will consolidate the business of the two places.

Alameda, Cal.—Simon Winkler and William F. Resimius have severed their connection with the firm of Gresens & Werner. Henry Gresens and Carl Werner will remain in business together and will retain the Park street store, while Messrs. Winkler and Resimius will conduct the business at 1419 Bay street.

Spokane, Wash.—The Inland Nursery & Floral Co. has completed its new range of greenhouses at Washington street and Madison avenue, at a cost of $30,000. The new structures include a large concrete office building. The business of this company was founded eight years ago, by H. C. and E. L. Rice and J. H. Mumm.

Los Angeles, Cal.—It is said that Ranier Duinker, from Boskoop, Holland, is establishing a business here in the growing of the azalea-rhododendron. He is reported to have brought with him, from the University of Boskoop, a special variety of the flower, which is particularly well adapted for the California soil and climate and may be grown here to great commercial advantage.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is down to summer level; there is practically nothing doing except an occasional funeral or wedding to break the monotony. With the passing of the fair graduates, there is nothing special to look forward to, except vacations, which are the next in line on the calendar.

Carnations, roses and sweet peas are in abundance, and the first named can be bought as low as $1 per hundred; of course the prices on the better grades are firmer. Delphiniums, gaillardias, coreopsis and campanulas serve their purpose for decorative work.

Peonies are on their last legs; only a few more days of sunshine and they will be gone. Lilium auratum is being displayed in various windows.

Various Notes.

Activity in greenhouse construction is noticeable on all sides, and only the best types and materials are considered. The rapid growth of the city makes it expedient for the growers to build farther out, where more space can be secured at a nominal cost.

Through the efforts of J. B. Pilkington, the American Association of Nurserymen will be invited to Portland for 1913, in conjunction with the Pacific Coast Association, which is meeting at San Jose, Cal., this year.

E. J. Steele, a local pansy grower, contributes an extensive article in the June issue of the Pacific Monthly, on pansy culture and its possibilities.

A rose exhibit is being held this week at the Portland Heights Club and many rare blooms are shown. E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There has been no change in business during the last week, except that there has been a little more in the line of funeral orders. The weather, except for one or two days, has remained cool and, as a consequence, flowers of all kinds are in splendid shape. It is rare in the middle of June to find roses and carnations up to form and color, but they are certainly that way this year. Sweet peas are a glut in the markets and still they are the most popular flower at present. Quite a lot of Lilium longiflorum are being brought into town, but they do not move well. The same can be said of valley and gladioli. In fact, it is hard to tell just what the dear public wants at this time. Apparently everyone with any money has gone to the mountains or the seashore, and those who are left are not patronizing the florists to any great extent.

Various Notes.

M. H. Dunn, head gardener for the town of Alameda, has refused to accept a dismissal from his position at the hands of the park commissioners of that town and will carry his case to the courts.

The Realty Syndicate Nursery has abandoned its grounds at Piedmont and will subdivide the property for building purposes.

Frank Clarke, of Clarke Bros., Oakland, is absent on a trip to Portland, Ore.

PARSLEY FOR WINTER.

Please give directions for starting parsley, to be wintered in coldframes, so that it may be cut through the winter. F. E. S.

Parsley may be sowed now and will make good plants to take in in the fall. Lift them and transplant them to coldframes or greenhouses after frost comes, taking care to get all the roots and as much soil as possible with each plant, and then trim the leaves nearly all off, to aid them in starting. H. G.

PLANTS FOR EMPTY BENCHES.

What can I put in my empty benches now to make me something until I can put them in lettuce in the fall? What cuttings should be started during the latter part of June to September 1? L. M. S.

It is a little late now to start any crops from seed to net you anything. If you had had tomato plants of good size and could have planted them not later than the first part of June, they would have brought in good returns; so also with cucumbers, but if planted now they would be just coming well into bearing when you would want to start your lettuces. The same applies to such crops as melons and eggplants. There are no flowering plants which you could grow satisfactorily through the summer months, unless it might be some of the early varieties of chrysanthemums, like Glory of Pacific, Golden Glow, Polly Rose, etc. These could still be planted and the crop cleared before the middle of October.

Propagation is always at a low ebb during the hot summer months and unless you had plants of the varieties to be propagated from, it would not pay you to do anything in this line. Outside of ornamental-leaved plants, cuttings of deciduous flowering shrubs and some few other plants, little is done in this line until cooler weather. Another season cannot you plan somewhat differently? Empty benches do not pay and it would be much better to run lettuces, say, until the middle or end of April and then follow with strong tomato plants or cucumbers, whichever you would have best market for. These would produce profitably, especially the tomatoes, until you had to prepare for the fall lettuce crop. Many growers grow violets, planting in October, pull these out about the end of March or a little later, and follow with tomatoes. These two crops prove good paying ones and lettuce followed by cucumbers and tomatoes, which could run until September 1, would prove equally profitable. C. W.

Norwalk, Conn.—George C. Comstock, of Broad River, furnished the decorations, comprising 1,000 fine white carnations and a large number of roses, for the Dennis-Post wedding, June 17.

Danville, Ill.—Harry A. Du Bois, who recently purchased the Wadsworth establishment, on West North street, has now bought also the greenhouses which formerly belonged to John Willius, south of the city. The Willius range, it is said, contains 25,000 square feet of glass and is in good condition.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June, 1912.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Preston W. Butler, a nurseryman and florist of Penfield, N. Y.

T. C. THURLOW'S SONS, of the Cherry Hill Nursery, West Newbury, Mass., had a fine exhibit, consisting largely of peonies, at the flower and strawberry show in the Fair building at Amesbury, Mass., June 22.

THE roses at the Ellwanger & Barry nursery, Rochester, made a grand showing last week and attracted many hundreds of visitors. William C. Barry did the honors and saw to it that every inquirer found the blue roses. The Rochester papers gave the showing much publicity.

THE nursery interests are unalterably opposed to any bill that, becoming law, will give one man power to shut off the European supply of raw material. One man power always is exercised in one of two ways: either so laxly as to amount to non-enforcement or so arbitrarily as to do injustice.

A FORWARD step in the conservation of Missouri's resources has been taken by the University of Missouri in the appointment of Prof. J. A. Ferguson, of State College, Pennsylvania, to the position of Professor of Forestry in the College of Agriculture. Professor Ferguson is a graduate of Yale Forestry School, and has for nearly two years been head of the Department of Forestry at State College, Pennsylvania.

THE Rhode Island Nursery Co. is a new organization, formed June 1, with offices at 112 Stewart street, Providence, R. I. The officers are: President and manager, A. M. Hartwell; vice-president and auditor, J. Frank Parker; secretary and treasurer, T. S. Ware. All these men are experienced in landscape work, and Mr. Hartwell has been in the business for many years. He was formerly with C. R. Fish & Co., of Worcester, Mass. Removing to Providence nearly four years ago and engaging in business for himself, he soon built up a large trade.

OPPOSITION TO SIMMONS BILL.

Backing for A. A. N. Committee.

The proposition to give the Secretary of Agriculture discretionary power to prohibit the importation of nursery stock from "infested" districts (embodied in the Simmons bill), has resulted in more ill feeling than has come from any other agitation of recent years. The legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen charges bad faith and misrepresentation against those who seek the enactment of this restrictive legislation, as, for instance, in such official utterances as that of F. L. Washburn, the Minnesota state entomologist, recently quoted in this column. At the St. Louis convention the committee, which consisted of Wm.

Pitkin, Irving Rouse, J. H. Dayton, J. M. Pitkin, Abner Hoopes and Thos. B. Meehan, presented a history of the so-called Simmons bill in a report 5,000 words in length and called attention to various statements which have been made that the committee, in opposing the bill as it has done, has not correctly voiced the sentiment of the nurserymen of the country. The report was thoroughly discussed and, as reported in The Review for June 22, a resolution was adopted putting the association on record as opposed to the bill. The full text of the resolution, which was adopted by unanimous vote, was as follows:

Resolved, That the report of the chairman of the legislative committee be accepted, and that this association heartily and thoroughly approves of the course of its legislative committee in connection with federal legislation during the past three years, and further

Resolved, That this association confers on its legislative committee full power and authority to act for it during the coming year in all matters of federal legislation, with the suggestion that this association favors federal inspection of foreign nursery stock on safe, sane, and practical lines, and that said committee shall use its strongest efforts to defeat any legislation that will place such absolute, arbitrary, and discretionary powers in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture and his bureau chiefs as has been proposed by the bills under discussion during the past three years.

EXTENDING THE RETAIL MARKET.

[A paper by F. H. Stannard, of Ottawa, Kan., read at the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen in St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.]

Macaulay says: "Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly, as when they discuss it freely." So, in presenting this subject for your consideration, I shall attempt to show the points which I consider essential in extending the retail market, with the view of starting a discussion among the retail nurserymen present.

Our business, in a way, is peculiar. We grow a large amount of merchandise every year, which, in a sense, has no fixed market value. If you pick up your morning paper, you can see at once the market price of corn, wheat, cotton, pork or beef, but where do you find a market price for nursery stock? The market for nursery stock is largely created. How? By the traveling salesman and by advertising.

The only way we know of making a retail market for nursery stock is to go out and see the planter in person, and explain to him the advantages and profits to be derived from planting trees. This means that we must keep a corps of salesmen. They should be busy, intelligent salesmen, and they need just as much care and just as constant attention as the most tender plant in the nursery.

The Salesmen and Their Mission.

Get out of the habit of thinking you must employ old men. Pick up new men. Teach them your ways. They will be more valuable to you, more loyal to your business. The old men frequently have too much experience.

Salesmen sometimes need one thing and sometimes another, but they always need encouragement, and, to do their best work, they must have confidence in you and in the goods they sell. A man going out to sell a commodity, or selling it in his office, must secure the confidence of his patrons, and to do this he must have confidence in his goods, his business and himself.

The inexperienced nurseryman may feel that the way to increase his sales, or establish himself in a territory, is to offer his goods at low prices, furnishing a large amount of goods for little money and letting the public know that he is the fellow who sells cheap, but my observation has shown that such experiments have been failures. Trees, well grown and well graded, are not too high. On the contrary, they are sold cheaper now than they should be, and the only way, in my judgment, to establish a retail trade on the right basis is to furnish superior stock and get prices that will justify hiring a good class of salesmen, who will make and take care of a market.

Reckless and Random Prices.

Not long ago a salesman told of having a customer for some nursery stock.

which he agreed to furnish for $200, but another nurseryman had agreed to furnish the same numbers and varieties for $150. He tried to get his price, and, rather than lose the order, saw him the next day and offered to split the difference and take $175. His customer then told him that a third nurseryman had agreed to fill the bill for $100, and the salesman retired from the field, with no hope of closing the order. A week later he met this prospective customer, who stated that he had received a letter and catalogue from still another nursery, quoting this stock for $67.50, and the customer was disgusted and said he thought the nursery business a swindle. He did not buy any stock that spring. These wide differences in prices by nurserymen in the same territory, and under practically the same conditions, lost a good customer. This is one of many similar instances, and they would not occur if the nurserymen supplied a good grade of goods, and knew what it really cost, one year with another, to produce the trees, deliver them to customers, make the collections and make allowance for a reasonable shrinkage.

A Rational Basis for Prices.

If we were to make inquiry of half a dozen different lumber companies, or any other class of firms dealing in a certain commodity, we would surely not get such a wide difference in quotations. It costs a certain amount to grow the tree, plus the cost of creating the market and then marketing the product, and any nurseryman who would establish the business on a firm foundation, in my opinion, must consider these points. Otherwise, his house is built upon sand. You cannot successfully conduct a retail business and allow the retail prices to fluctuate with the wholesale prices; so it is necessary to establish a price which will be fair to the customer and, at the same time, yield a fair profit to the nurseryman.

The mail order men may want to be heard from here, and I do not want to speak disparagingly of the mail order business, but the question is: If there were no traveling salesmen to work up the demand for the nursery stock, would the mail order business, of itself, flourish? As it is, the farmer is shown by the traveling salesman that it is profitable to plant trees. In other words, the demand is created. He—the farmer—then begins investigating the matter of prices. The nurseryman who sends out the salesman who is a good enough man to create this demand, must ask a fair price for this stock, in order to pay the salesman. Once this demand is created, then the catalogue man can send out his little folder and, naturally, gets his share of the business, as he can make low prices, having no expense in creating this retail market.

Extending the retail market is a matter of first importance to each and all of us, and there is not a nurseryman present who, when he considers this seriously, will not want to do his part, as a matter of self-preservation.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Pittsburg has received its share of the extreme weather that has been going the rounds and it has had its effect on stock. The only wonder is that there is as much good stock as is coming in. Longiflorum lilies and valley are the leaders in quality. Beauties are becoming both smaller and scarcer. The Killarneys are fair and carnations are holding out quite well. There were enough weddings, funerals and commencements last week to clean up everything.

Asters have not yet arrived here, as there was no inside stock grown and the dry weather in May delayed the outside plants. Sweet peas from outside are not so good as in other years.

A few of the plantsmen failed to clean out on stock, but taken as a whole it was a good plant year.

Various Notes.

Some of the employees at the wholesale houses have begun their vacations.

P. J. Demas, of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, opened his new theater last week.

Ed. McCallum made a trip to Conneaut last Sunday on his motorcycle.

The John Bader Co. celebrated the end of the plant season by giving its employees their annual picnic at the firm's expense, and all enjoyed a good time.

T. P. Langhans and Ben Elliott can tell you how to run an automobile. They are having the varied experiences of full-fledged chauffeurs. Hoo-Hoo.

TORONTO.

Trade is holding out well, but after this week it will be all over till September comes around again. The rest will be much appreciated, for, from the first of the month, everyone has been on the jump. Trade has been excellent. Stock is coming in fairly well. Roses are plentiful, but the quality is not startling. Quite a little mildew is seen. Carnations are rather small. Sweet peas are pretty nearly through and the outdoor ones will not be in for some time. Valley is still in good condition and selling well. Peonies are over. Asters are coming in a little better and the demand is excellent. Coreopsis are of excellent quality and sell well. S. Tidy & Son have had a chrysanthemum plant in their window. This was the first of the season. It was Golden Glow. The outdoor gladioli are not yet in.

SAGE AND CANNAS

Nothing is more attractive in garden or lawn than a bed of Scarlet Sage, the fiery red we grow, namely, the true Bonfire or Clara Bedman varieties.

We have a fine new sort of medium height, 4-in. pots, purposely raised for our customers for their summer trade. Price, 4-in. pots, $6.00 per 100.

Our other attraction is Large Bronze Leaved Cannas; they have no equal, if used in the center of the bed in connection with Scarlet Sage as a border. Nothing looks more attractive than a bronze center and a fiery red border. We provided especially for the beds by growing the Cannas, Robusta and Egandale; both have proved good varieties. The Robusta has large leaves and is now 2½ to 3 feet high (the Canna, to make it attractive, must be higher than the Sage), 4-in. pots only, $7.00 per 100. We also have a fine stock of the best green leaved varieties in 4-in. pots of the same size, at $7.00 per 100. Alphonse Bouvier, Richard Wallace, Austria, Maiden Blush, Mt. Blanc, Mme. GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The incessant nightly downpours, which began the day following Decoration day, continue and are usually accompanied with fierce thunder and electric displays and the temperature all through June has been excessively hot.

The bedding trade is about over, most of it being finished two weeks earlier than usual. More plants were sold this year than last and business as a whole has shown sufficient improvement so that all are satisfied.

Graduating exercises used up large quantities of roses in bunches, red principally, although a few used white. Carnations are small and inclined to be soft. Roses are plentiful and small. Some growers have sweet peas, the Spencer varieties, but the stems are short. Gladioli show no signs of diminishing and move well at $1 per dozen. Lilies are about over.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith is rebuilding three houses and putting up two small violet houses.

R. Yonkers and Blanksma Bros., both vegetable growers, are each putting up two new vegetable greenhouses.

Crabb & Hunter have sold their Madison property to the city for a park and playground, and will remove all the buildings to their Reeds Lake property. They expect to be kept busy on the job until snow flies, and maybe longer. G. F. C.

R. Yonkers is adding two new greenhouses to his plant south of the city, each 34x275 feet, and so built that a team can be driven in or a horse be used in the cultivation of the growing crop.

Peter Blanksma is rebuilding three of his greenhouses, with a view to making his plant thoroughly modern in arrangement. His specialty is cucumbers. With three of his houses out of commission this season, he is trying an experiment in growing the vines outdoors as they are grown under glass, training them up on wires instead of letting them spread on the ground.

Henry Smith is adding two large houses to his plant on West Bridge street and they will be used for violet growing.

Elmira, N. Y.—Harry N. Hoffman, of this city, acted as judge at the recent show of the Syracuse Rose Society.

Peoria, Ill.—Frank Jerabek has purchased the Kipler greenhouses, north of town.

REMEMBER

Araucarias Are Our Specialty

No one can beat us in this line.

WARNING.

DON'T BE DECEIVED! Now, as well as for the last 35 years, we hold the ground as leaders in the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria.

ARAUCARIAS. 6000 just received per Steamer Marquette from Antwerp, Belgium, more coming by next steamer. Araucaria Excelsa, Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, palms, etc. Florists, you know we are leaders for the last 25 years in importing, growing and shipping this so well known evergreen decorative plant. The Araucaria, more in favor now than ever. Almost every florist knows our Araucarias, therefore no argument is needed for our goods. We know what our customers want and need, and have provided for them and set aside special specimen plants of the Spring Importation 1910. These specimen plants will stand the climate everywhere and are especially adapted for decorating lawns, porches, verandas, bungalows, private summer residences, hotels and boarding-houses at the seashore or elsewhere. Our prices are very low for fine stock.

The Market.

Trade has slackened down to the summer basis now and a little funeral work and an occasional wedding is about the extent of the business. Stock has been rather scarce lately, with the majority of inferior quality. Roses are coming somewhat better. A few Mrs. Aaron Ward are on the market, but they are short stemmed. White and pink Killarneys are more abundant than any others and they seem to withstand the extreme heat better, although even they have suffered badly from the weather. Carnations are quite plentiful and some are of good quality. Sweet peas are quite abundant in fine quality and the demand has been good for them. Valley is in fair demand, mostly for weddings, and the quality is good. There has been a heavy demand for ferns and quite a number have been used for porches, etc.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting June 13, with a good number present, and it was decided to have the annual outing July 19, at Buckeye Lake, with a good list of amusements, etc.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. expects to plant half of its carnation range in the next week or so. The young rose stock is looking fine and some blooms are now being cut from it.

The Livingston Seed Co. is cutting some fancy sweet peas at present.

Charles Buehler reports good business this spring.

E. Metzmaier has cleaned up everything in the way of bedding stock and has had a good deal of funeral work.

Leo Miller is still cutting some good carnations.

Ralph Knight says he is right in the cucumber business now, as he grows quite a few for a late crop.

E. Metzmaier and daughter are in Pittsburg for several days' visit.

J. M.

Black Hall, Conn.—The firm of Brown & Howard, renters of the Black Hall Greenhouses, has been dissolved. Only about a month after a good start had been made in the business, Mr. Brown was stricken with sciatica, and it became evident, after three months of suffering and ineffective treatment of the malady, that a period of rest was necessary. James F. Barclay, of Rhode Island, has purchased the business and secured a lease for five years.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

SIZE OF BOILER.

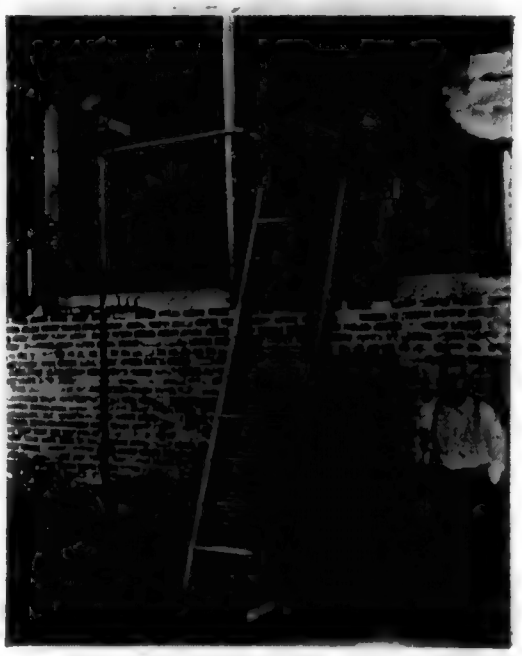
What size of hot water boiler will be needed for a house 30x100, to heat it to at least 60 degrees in zero weather? Our location is western Missouri.

J. P. W.

In a house measuring 30x100 feet, to be heated to 60 degrees in zero weather by means of hot water, about 1,200 square feet of radiating surface will be required, and to supply this amount of radiation with economy of fuel the heater should have a rating for 1,500 to 1,600 square feet. A simple method of arranging the piping would be to use four 2½-inch flow pipes and sixteen 2-inch returns. Two of the flows could be under the purlins and the others on the side walls. The returns could be distributed in four or more coils on the walls and under the benches.

BUILDING AND PIPING A HOUSE.

At present I have one greenhouse, 10x40, running east and west, with the boiler at the west end of it, and I propose to build another house, 25x60, running east from the present house. I wish to get your advice about the construction and piping of the new house.



I want to use a concrete and wood construction, but am not sure that my idea is practical in regard to fastening the eaves to the top of the wall. The idea is to have iron bolts imbedded in the last course of concrete, so that the bolts will project above the concrete about three inches, and then to drill a 2x6 cypress sill, to rest directly on top of the wall. The question is: How am I to get sufficient fastening, with a slope the same as the roof, for my mullions at the eaves? Should the eaves slope in or out of the house? How much purlin support will be required? Is it necessary to tie the purlins by cross-pipe connections, or just run them the entire length of the house? I should also like to get suggestions as to the height of the ridge and the side walls, the length of the sashbars, the thickness of the concrete wall and the depth to which it should be set in the ground.

How much piping would be required to grow a stock of miscellaneous potted plants, including geraniums, bulbs, primulas, etc., and perhaps a bench or two of carnations, in this New York climate? As the boiler-room is at the west end of the plant, the piping, of course, must be laid through the present house. The system is to be for hot water.

W. E. J.

There will be no difficulty in constructing the house about as described. The footing course for the wall should be about twelve inches wide. The depth for excavation would depend upon the character of the soil and the depth to which frost reaches, but if a good bot-

C. W. BROOKE, Esq.

Dear Sir:—

You ask to explain about the Morehead Traps. I am so well pleased with them and don't see how I could get along without them. I have two No. 3 Traps. My houses are on the level, although I have just a little fall to the receiver. My returns are 2-in.; main, 4-in., 100 ft.; 12,600 feet 1¼, 2200 ft. 2-in. My boilers, one 60 and one 80 horse-power; my houses are 7 ft. to gutter and I heat 60,000 square feet. I have never had any trouble with keeping my houses warm since I had the Morehead Steam Trap.

Best wishes,
Yours truly,
C. KRANTZ.

THE KROESCHELL GREENHOUSE BOILER

Here is the boiler that is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists and gardeners who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler the highest praise.

10,788,000 square feet of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years. You will find the new 1910 model Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler in every state in the Union and Canada.

Our Eastern business has been exceedingly heavy the past season.

Kroeschell vs. Cast Iron Boilers

Over 1500 Cast Iron Boilers were replaced by the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler during the past six years. It is a common occurrence for a Kroeschell to replace two to four cast iron boilers at a single place; this is the CENTRAL HEATING SYSTEM PLAN, and has saved many florists hundreds of dollars per season in fuel alone, besides a big saving in labor.

OUR HEATING ENGINEER has probably had more practical experience in this line than any other greenhouse man, and we place his experience at your service.

What the Users Say

Cast Iron Boilers Break Down Twice in 4 Years; Moral:—Use Kroeschell Boilers, They are Safe.

I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7000 square feet of glass; would take care of 2000 more. I have had a Cast Iron Boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down December 29th, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 Kroeschell Boilers, and do not worry about their breaking down. GRANT NEWPORT, Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

tom can be obtained at that depth, and if the wall can be banked up on the outside, it will answer if the excavation is made to the depth of eighteen to twenty-four inches. For the wall proper use a width of eight inches at the bottom and six at the top, the taper being on the inside. This will necessitate having the ridge supported or the roof trussed, so that there will be no side thrust against the walls. The plates can be bolted to the walls as planned or a 6-inch sub-plate can first be put on and then the regular plate can be nailed to this. The top of the plate should have a short, sharp slope toward the house and a much longer and slighter slope away from the house. The inner edge of the plate should be something over an inch thick and the outer edge should be not over three-quarters of an inch thick.

Make the walls five feet high. Use sashbars fourteen feet long, which will make the ridge about twelve feet high. While a grout wall may be used from the ground up to the plate, it would be better to build it only to the height of two and one-half or three feet and then have sashes in the side walls containing 24-inch glass, carrying them up to the plates. There should be a purlin in the middle of each side of the roof, and if these are tied together there will be no occasion for a row of posts under the ridge. It will be desirable, however, to have posts either under the purlins or under the ridge.

To heat the house to 50 degrees, use two 2½-inch flows and ten 2-inch returns. The flows and returns can be on the side walls or under the side benches.

HOT WATER FOR ONE HOUSE.

Will you kindly advise us as to the size and quantity of pipe required to heat a house 25x50 feet, and state what would be the best general arrangement of the piping? We require a temperature of 60 degrees, and in this part of New Hampshire the outdoor temperature occasionally falls to 15 or 20 degrees below zero. We intend to put in a good cellar under the potting shed and there will be a good fall to the boiler. We shall use hot water. What size of boiler, of sectional type, will be needed to heat the house in good shape? Is it absolutely necessary to carry the flows on the purlins, to get the best results? Is wrought iron pipe the best to use? H. D. W. & S.

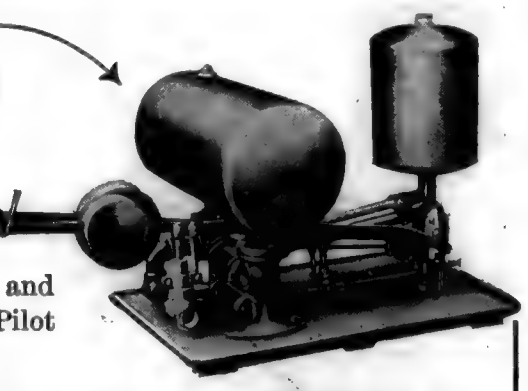
Under the rather severe conditions mentioned, to heat a house 25x50 feet to 60 degrees, it will be well to put in three 2½-inch flow pipes and sixteen 2-inch returns. With this arrangement it will be advisable to have one of the flows under the ridge, although it could be carried under the benches if the returns are well above the boiler. The boiler should have a rating of 800 to 900 square feet of radiating surface.

Whether wrought iron or cast iron pipe is preferable is largely a matter of opinion. Some think wrought iron is better, for one reason because it comes in longer lengths and has threaded joints; but others prefer cast iron and one of the largest greenhouse building concerns recommends its use with the statement that rust or caulked joints are the easiest joints there are to make.

BUILDING A BRICK STACK.

I am thinking of building a brick smokestack in place of my iron stack, which lasted only two winters. The present stack is eighteen inches in diameter and twenty feet high, which gives ample draft. The brick stack will be about seven feet from the boiler. Would an 8-inch wall and a height of eighteen feet be sufficient? How much larger should the stack be at the base than at the top? E. P. M.



There is nothing quite definite in the question regarding what will be required, and all that can be done is to base the answer upon the capacity of the present stack. Especially as the chimney is to be seven feet away from the boiler, it will probably be well to make it five feet higher rather than lower. If it is built about 16x20 inches inside, and with the walls eight inches thick and twenty-five feet high, it will probably answer. In case other houses are to be added, it may be advisable to make the chimney sufficiently large to provide for them. However, it will be possible to increase the capacity of the chimney fully fifty per cent by adding ten or twelve feet to its height whenever the other houses are built, if the chimney is so constructed as to permit this. The flue is so short that it would not be worth while to make any change in its interior diameter, but, unless the chimney is to be supported in some way, the foundations should be made broad and firm and the wall should be built heavier up to the height of ten or twelve feet.

IN CENTRAL MICHIGAN.

We are told that black iron pipes radiate heat better than galvanized pipes and that painted pipes are the worst. We are also told that 1-inch piping is better than 1½-inch. Please give us your opinion on this.

The floor of our present house is two feet below the level of the ground, with the piping under the benches. We are planning to build an extension on top of the ground, using beds instead of benches. The flow would work all right in the addition, but how should we plan the return heating pipes? The present house is 15 x 20. The addition would be twenty feet wide and probably forty-five feet or more in length. The east wall is five feet high, with three feet of glass; the west wall is the same height, with eighteen inches of glass. The house runs north and south and the south end is glass, of course. The south end will be left in for a partition, so we can heat one part more than the other. We propose to have the present part, 15 x 20, the warmer, with a temperature of 50 degrees at night and 70 to 75 degrees in the daytime. The larger and more distant part will be used for geraniums, carnations and spring vegetable plants. We will also have sixty feet of coldframes and perhaps a temporary addition, 10 x 20, for vegetable seed flats, heated with a coal stove. This has been all right this spring, giving us thousands of tomato and other plants in fine shape, though we did not know enough to make three plantings, as we will next spring. J. F. T.

The rougher the surface of the pipe, the greater the amount of surface exposed and the more heat it will radiate. It is for this reason that black pipe will give off more heat than pipe that has been either painted or galvanized. Most of the paints used upon greenhouse heating pipes are comparatively poor conductors of heat and for this reason thick asphaltum paint is not desirable for coating greenhouse pipes. A fairly good paint for this purpose, which will serve to prevent the rusting of the pipes and also interfere little with the radiation from the surface of the pipes, can be made from lampblack, with equal parts of linseed and kerosene oil.

For steam heating 1¼-inch pipe is generally selected, but, unless the boiler is well below the level of the pipes, nothing smaller than 1½-inch pipe is commonly used with hot water. If the pipes are considerably elevated, or if the runs are quite short, it might be possible to use 1¼-inch or even 1-inch pipe, but 2-inch pipe is generally preferred. If the end nearer the heater is to be kept the warmer, it will be a simple matter to pipe each house independently of the other. Carrying the flow and return pipes through the warm house will tend to raise the temperature several degrees. To heat this house will require about 120 square feet of radiation and this means 240 linear feet of 1½-inch pipe. This can be run around the walls and connected with the boiler by means of 2-inch flows and returns. To heat the addition, run a 2½-inch pipe from the boiler to the farther end and there connect it with ten 2-inch returns arranged in two coils. Connect each of these coils with the boiler by means of a 2-inch pipe.

A hotbed such as described can be used to good advantage for starting vegetable and bedding plants in the spring.

ERIE, PA.

Various Notes.

Christ Wolf met with a sad misfortune June 18, his sixteen-year-old son, Clarence, being killed while out bicycle riding. An auto ran into him, killing him almost instantly. Mr. Wolf, his father, is greenhouse manager for Chas. G. Offerle. Mr. Wolf has the sympathy of his large number of friends and brother florists.

The working force of the Baur Floral Co. is now complete. Jack Kallenbach, the foreman, is at work again after an illness of forty-four weeks, caused by the kick of a horse. It was found necessary to amputate Mr. Kallenbach's left leg six inches below the knee. With him as foreman, Eric Thompson as assistant foreman, Robert Birnie in charge of the rose section, Ed. Lichtinger in charge of the carnation section and A. J. Baur, the president of the company, looking after its business affairs, they expect to grow a larger and better stock of plants and cut flowers than ever before.

The Erie Floral Co., of which H. J. Wise is manager, is getting the place in fine shape, with seven houses, 30x150, in roses, and twenty houses, 24x125, in carnations. This firm has the reputation of growing some of the best cut flowers in Erie.

J. V. Laver's trade has increased to such an extent that he could sell about three times as much as his place produces. J. E. K.

Jermyn, Pa.—James Nicholson, of Jefferson avenue, has bought some greenhouses from Burton H. Park for $1,700.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The demand for flowers increased wonderfully last week, owing to the graduating exercises. All schools held the exercises and the sudden demand caused such a shortage as has not been experienced for a long time. Roses were especially short and it was impossible to fill all orders for them. Carnations were more plentiful, but, owing to the hot, dry weather, the blooms were small. Peas were also scarce. This about ends the rush for this spring and we can safely say that spring stock was never in such demand. Hardly a house in the city is without some sort of a decoration and the stock left is insignificant. Outdoor peas are now on the market and the price dropped immediately to an extremely low figure.

Various Notes.

Buffalo had the pleasure of entertaining the Modern Woodmen of America last week and the city was crowded. The convention created only a slight demand for stock. The windows were decorated for the occasion and some original ideas were displayed. The window of the Lenox Flower Shop was so good looking that one woman from Seattle knocked a large palm through the plate glass.

John Kramer will be married on Wednesday of next week.

S. A. Anderson has shipped a large quantity of young begonia stock, which left in fine shape. R. A. S.

NEWCASTLE, IND.

P. J. Lynch, whose company previously owned nine acres of land here, to be used as a site for a range of greenhouses, has now bought the adjoining property of the Indiana Fiber Box Co. and the Newcastle Canning Co., including three acres of ground, buildings, power, etc. This new purchase provides Mr. Lynch with offices, a storehouse and a power plant for his new range, and also equips him with railroad shipping facilities, through the Big Four switch to the old canning factory.

The new range will be started with the erection of three houses, each 35x 500. E. A. Parker, superintendent of the company's West Grove plant, was recently in this city, in consultation with Mr. Lynch in regard to the building operations here.

The best Labor Saving device on the place

Charles Moebius, West Toledo, Ohio, writes us:

"We find the Skinner System the best labor saving device we have on the place, and in fact we could not do without it. It will water the ground evenly and will not cake the soil. We think the man away out of date that uses a hose, as he will not be able to grow such fine stuff without your watering device."

This is but one of hundreds of similar letters we have gotten from florists all over the country.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Trade is assuming the summer aspect, as are also Beauties, roses and carnations. There has been a little funeral work and a few small weddings, but outside of that it is quiet. Sweet peas are about at an end. Shasta daisies, gladioli, lilies and outdoor flowers are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Walter Bertermann was one of the contestants in the endurance run to French Lick given by the Indianapolis Automobile Trade Association.

Albert Pittet has returned from a ten days' trip through Texas.

The committee in charge of the picnic of the State Florists' Association has decided on Fairview park. It will be held about the middle of July, and Mr. Ludlow, superintendent of the park, is aiding the committee in its efforts to make the picnic a success. There are to be numerous attractions, among them being the usual ball game, races on the ponies and numerous other events.

A. Wiegand & Sons have been cutting some fine orchids lately.

Fred Hukreide celebrated his tenth wedding anniversary last week.

Sidney Smith is busy overhauling his greenhouses. He says that when he gets through you won't know the place.

Herman Junge has been confined to his bed for a few days, but expects to be about soon.

George Wiegand is going down to Brown county this week for a ramble through the hills.

The Pahud Floral Co. had its boilers overhauled this week, having had to put in a number of new flues along with the other repairs.

Baur & Steinkamp is the name of the new firm of which Adolph Baur is the head. Mr. Steinkamp is a brother-in-law of Mr. Baur. This firm is still cutting carnations and has good prospects for a large aster crop. H. L. W.

De Land, Fla.—Wm. B. Currey has started business here and is building his first greenhouse, in which he will grow carnations and potted plants. He intends to erect a rose house next year. He has a fine, central location, on Oakland place. This town is a winter health resort and the seat of the J. B. Stetson University. He thinks, therefore, that he has good reasons for expecting an excellent winter trade.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There is not much exciting in the florists' business at present. June weddings are coming in daily and saving the day for the wholesalers and retailers alike. Stock is not scarce and it is not up to the top notch in quality, which is not unusual at this season of the year. Outside sweet peas are coming in and make a fine showing. Water lilies are plentiful, but unsatisfactory, except for daylight decorations.

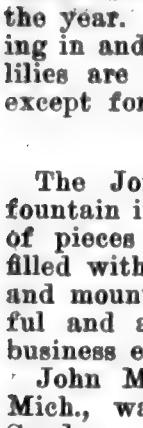
Various Notes.

The Jones-Russell Co. has built a fountain in the store. It is constructed of pieces of marble and granite and filled with umbrella palms, water lilies and mountain ferns. It is quite tasteful and attractive. The firm reports business excellent.

John M. Carey, of Mount Clemens, Mich., was a Cleveland visitor over Sunday.

Frank J. Ritzenthaler, who has been on the sick list, is able to be at work again.

H. P. Knoble, of Knoble Bros., has moved out to his country home, on the shore of Lake Erie.



The greenhouses of the J. M. Gasser Co. are in fine condition. They have their Killarney all cut back and their field carnations are looking fine. They have recently overhauled their rose range, painting and reglazing it.

The arrangements for the picnic are about completed. The date will probably be the last week of July; the place, Puritan Springs park.

The board of control of the fall flower show reports good progress. The guarantee fund is about completed. The enthusiastic response to their appeal is good proof of the progressiveness of Cleveland florists. C. D. F.

L. F. Darnell is offering for sale his holding of stock in the J. M. Gasser Co. It is understood Mr. Darnell intends removing from Cleveland, to give his attention to other investments.

WHEN? WHY? NOW!

Because you cannot get better and can get much worse.

The additional they may cost over the inferior kind is a very small proportion of the total cost, so why take the inferior?

The glass, heating and erecting cost the same in any case. Try it once and you will be convinced.

Send for question blank and bulletins, and we will figure for you.

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Grand Haven, Mich.—Kieft & Roossien have been in business here as growers for over a year. Peter Lubin, who formerly had a store on Washington avenue and purchased his flowers from Kieft & Roossien, has closed the store and gone to Newcastle, Ind.

Norwich, N. Y.—The members of the St. Paul's Cemetery Association have presented to Edward F. Quinn, the East Main street florist, a handsome $50 chair, as a token of appreciation of his services in aid of the association and in beautifying the grounds.

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY

THE PHILADELPHIA MEETING.

Officers Elected.

President—William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass.

Vice-president — Mrs. Seth Low, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Secretary—Harry A. Bunyard, New York city.

Treasurer — Arthur T. Boddington, New York city.

Recording secretary—John H. Pepper, New York city.

Executive committee—J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.; Harry Turner, Yonkers, N. Y.; W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa.

Next meeting place—Boston, date to be set by executive committee.

The Exhibition.

The third annual meeting and exhibition of the National Sweet Pea Society of America was held in Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, June 29 and 30. The exhibition, which was open to the public and advertised in the local papers, drew a good attendance, both Thursday and Friday, and it was interesting to see the care with which the leading varieties were noted by the visitors. This is a step in the cultivation of the great field of popular education. The weather, which has been anything but favorable for sweet peas, up to two days before the show, was simply ideal—clear and bright, not too warm, bringing out the colors splendidly.

The exhibition, taken as a whole, is said by competent judges to be the finest yet held by the society. While many exhibitors helped to make the show, one stood preëminently above the others. This exhibit was made possible by fall planting. Many small and would-be exhibitors said that they would have made a far finer exhibit later in the season, but the hot, dry spring had spoiled their chances.

The Burpee Exhibit.

The exhibit of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., covering the entire north side of the main hall, comprised 142 varieties of the best standard sorts and many novelties, some of them never before seen. It captured the society's silver medal for the best collection of sweet peas, six certificates of merit for the novelties, and the North American cup for a new color, Vermilion Brilliant, that may be described as a rose scarlet. Among their other notable varieties were: Sterling Stent, clear, shining orange, a new English variety not yet offered in America; No. 875, pale lavender; Irish Belle, warm rosy lavender; Fordhook Fairy, white with faint blush. The Burpee exhibit was beautifully staged, the tasteful arrangement enhancing the excellence of the individual vases. Pampas grass was used as a background, while the monotony of rows of even vases was relieved by a step at the back and by so-called trophies or pyramids of pocket vases that gave the effect, when filled, of a rich flower column. These pyramids, standing over four feet high on the table, were each completely filled with a single variety. They were: Marie Corelli, brilliant rose-carmine or red; White Spencer, pure white of largest size; Countess Spencer, lovely pale pink; Helen Lewis, large, wavy, orange-colored standard, rosy salmon wings; Dainty Spencer, white, edged pale pink; George Herbert, bright rosy carmine; Mrs. Routzahn, buff or apricot ground with delicate pink flush; Florence Nightingale, pale lavender; King Edward Spencer, red, almost a crimson. Every detail of culture and of arrangement bespoke the master hand and reflected the greatest credit on George W. Kerr.

There were many other excellent exhibits of sweet peas, showing fine, well-grown blossoms. The effect of several of the exhibits was heightened by the use of asparagus, relieving the whiteness of the tables and bringing out the soft colors of the flowers. The classes for the retailers were neglected. Robert Kift exhibited a bride's shower bouquet of white sweet peas, gracefully arranged, that attracted much attention.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

There were two orchid exhibits: one of thirty-two varieties from Joseph A. Manda, West Orange, N. J., that contained many fine specimens of rare and commercial sorts; the other of extra well-grown commercial varieties from the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J. The front of the stage was occupied by Bertrand H. Farr, Reading, Pa., with an exhibit of sixty-three varieties of Japanese iris that lent pleasing variety to the scene. John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., had a vase of his beautiful yellow calla, Elliottiana. Henry A. Dreer occupied a large part of the foyer with a fine exhibit of water lilies and Japanese iris. There were six tanks of nymphæas in hardy and tender varieties, the foliage lending a natural effect to the cut flowers, which were blue, pink, yellow and white. The tanks were banked with ferns. The iris were displayed in Japanese vases, each variety in a vase by itself. This exhibit was particularly interesting.

The balance of the foyer was filled by a variety of outdoor flowers, conspicuous among them being a mammoth deep crimson zinnia which attracted much attention for its size and richness of coloring.

William Sim.

(President-elect of the National Sweet Pea Society of America.)

The exhibit of the Pett patent flower vase demonstrated how flowers can have fresh water daily without disarranging them, the flowers being firmly held in place by a wire lattice in a cornucopia-shaped holder with screen bottom which fits into the vase filled with water. The advantage of this holder is that the flowers can be removed without disarrangement and fresh water put in for them. M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., brought an exhibit of Aphine, knowing full well that it is a true friend of the sweet pea.

Certificate of merit to Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Yonkers, N. Y., Howard Nichols, gardener, for collection of sweet peas.

The Business Meeting.

Howard M. Earl had some difficulty in gathering the clans for business, so interesting was the renewal of old friendships and the exhibition. There was a good attendance of members and those interested when Robert Craig made the address of welcome in his usual happy style. Harry Turner, of Yonkers, N. Y., responded on behalf of the society. Vice-president Sim occupied the chair in the absence of President Burpee, who was on the ocean. Secretary Bunyard read the following letter from Mr. Burpee:

Will you kindly express to our fellow members of the National Sweet Pea Society of America my sincere regrets that instead of being present to deliver the president's address, I am compelled to offer an apology and explanation.

The apology will surely be accepted when you offer the explanation that it was only after our March meeting in Boston, when the date of the Philadelphia exhibition was fixed for June 23 and 24, that I engaged passage for myself, Mrs. Burpee and sons on the Olympic June 28, so that we could attend the Exhibition of the National Sweet Pea Society of England, which we were compelled to miss last year.

Kindly explain also how deeply I regretted the necessity for deciding with you and other fellow members, after conference two weeks ago with members of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, that, owing to the lateness of the season, it would be necessary to postpone our exhibition at least a week.

While on the "briny deep," I shall be with you all in spirit and shall look forward eagerly to receiving, July 4, upon arrival at Southampton, a cablegram telling of the success of this third annual exhibition. I feel quite sure that under your able management, and you are well entitled to be called "the father of the National Sweet Pea Society," assisted by our vice-president and other officers, together with such willing helpers as Messrs. Craig, Pennock, Rust, Watson, Michell, Earl and Kerr, the exhibition will be a decided success.

Such work as you and your colaborers have done so effectively at the two previous exhibitions of our infant society is of lasting value in bringing to the notice of the trade and of growers generally the importance of the sweet pea as deservedly the most popular of all flowers grown from seed.

But should I continue in this strain I might tire you with expressions of my love for the sweet pea, even more than if I could have been able to deliver in person "President Burpee's Address," for which the program has me booked.

Only two words more in closing. At our meetings we have never discussed politics. Your present president, therefore, does not know the political opinions of his fellow members. Whatever their politics may be, however, I think that most of our members will agree that the Ex-President of the United States acted wisely in urging as his successor President Taft, who certainly, despite all criticisms, will make good as an honest, intelligent executive.

Now would it be asking too much for me to suggest that upon reading this letter (if you think it worth reading), some member put in nomination the name of William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., and that another member should then move that the nominations for president be closed. Mr. Sim needs no introduction. As vice-president he has been most earnest and effective in his work for the advancement of the interests of our society and I feel sure that this suggestion of your retiring president will meet with the hearty approval of all.

The secretary's report showed the society to be in excellent condition. Then came the paper entitled "The History of the Sweet Pea," by Leonard Barron, managing editor of the Garden Magazine, read by A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, which was given a rising vote of thanks. Mr. Beal also told of the trials of the sweet peas at Ithaca.

Visit to Fordhook.

The beautiful weather that had favored the Sweet Pea Society continued throughout the afternoon of the second day, when the visitors were the guests of W. Atlee Burpee & Co. at their farm and trial grounds at Fordhook, near Doylestown, Pa. The party left the Reading terminal early in the afternoon and spent nearly four hours most delightfully at Fordhook. Mr. Earl and his staff met the party on arrival and by their genial good fellowship made everyone feel thoroughly at home and in the best possible mood for enjoying the afternoon. Mr. Kerr, who had come out with the party, devoted himself to their entertainment, telling about the sweet pea novelties and standard varieties, their habits, their strong points, their requirements and comparison one with the other. Mr. Earl called especial attention to the benefit the sweet peas had derived from the Skinner system of irrigation, which had saved the crop this spring. There are ten acres of land in all irrigated in this way and it has proved of the greatest value during the two seasons it has been in use. The ease with which it can be adapted to any special requirement is one of its strong points; Mr. Earl says that nothing can be compared with it. The sweet peas bore eloquent testimony to the cultural skill that had been lavished on them; the flowers on the vines fully equaled those on the exhibition tables, affording the additional advantage of studying the habit of growth of each variety.

There were many other beautiful flowers. The pansy beds resembled a flowered carpet. The phloxes and the snapdragons were especially fine. Then there were the perennial beds and the trial beds for grass seed; the tomatoes, most important among the vegetables. The wavy fields of ripened wheat were beautiful.

Douglas Earl assisted his father in showing the visitors over the farm. He took especial pride in the Crimson Ramblers planted at every post, which will in time reflect the beauty of the arch-covered path that adorns the approach. Douglas Earl's bright interest in all that is being done for the advancement of horticulture at Fordhook indicates where we may look for progress in the future.

When the guests had left the dining-room and were gathered on the porch Mr. Turner thanked Mr. Earl heartily on behalf of those present for the delightful afternoon they had all enjoyed so much. Mr. Earl replied that it was a pleasure to have the members of the National Sweet Pea Society at Fordhook and that he would be glad to see each and all of them there at any time.

Those Present.

Among those present were noted the following from outside Philadelphia:

Angus, Walter, Chapinville, Conn.

SECRETARY BUNYARD'S REPORT.

[Presented at the annual meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, held at Philadelphia, June 29 and 30, 1911.]

When I helped to organize the National Sweet Pea Society three years ago, I stated at the first meeting that it would and must be a success. Up to this time it has not fulfilled my highest expectations, but we have made substantial progress, have learned something and have placed the society on a sound foundation. Aided by the experience of the past, we hope to be still more successful in furthering the aims and objects of the society.

Up to and including this exhibition, we have held four shows—two in New York, one in Boston in connection with the S. A. F.'s National Flower Show, and the Philadelphia exhibition. All of spicuous among them being a mammoth deep crimson zinnia which attracted much attention for its size and richness of coloring.

The exhibit of the Pett patent flower vase demonstrated how flowers can have fresh water daily without disarranging them, the flowers being firmly held in place by a wire lattice in a cornucopia-shaped holder with screen bottom which fits into the vase filled with water. The advantage of this holder is that the flowers can be removed without disarrangement and fresh water put in for them. M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., brought an exhibit of Aphine, knowing full well that it is a true friend of the sweet pea.

The Awards.

The full list of awards is as follows:

Finest collection of sweet peas, 12 vases, 12 vars.—Miss M. T. Cockroft, Adam Paterson, gardener, first; Herbert L. Pratt, Henry Gaut, gardener, second.

Best vase of one variety of Spencer type introduced in 1911—John W. Pepper, first.

Best vase of grandiflora type—S. M. Goldsmith, William R. Seymour, gardener, first; Herbert L. Pratt, second.

Best vase of Spencer mixed varieties—Miss M. T. Cockroft, first.

Best vase of Magnificent mixed—Mrs. Geo. H. McFadden, David Aiken, gardener, first.

Collection of sweet peas, not less than 25 stems—John W. Pepper, first.

Vase of Ruby Spencer—Herbert L. Pratt, first.

Best vase of Mrs. Routzahn Spencer—Miss M. T. Cockroft, first.

Best vase of White Spencer—Mrs. R. B. Ellison, first.

Best vase of varicolored—Herbert L. Pratt, first; G. W. Young, second.

Best vase of 50 pink or rose, Spencer or Unwin type Thomas McKean, Robert Abernethy, gardener, first; Miss M. T. Cockroft, second.

Best vase of a new variety—W. Atlee Burpee & Co., first.

Best vase white—Miss M. T. Cockroft, first; Mrs. J. B. Trevor, second; S. M. Goldsmith, third.

Best vase pink—Herbert L. Pratt, first; Mrs. R. B. Ellison, second; Henry Goldman, third.

Best vase deep rose—Herbert L. Pratt, first; Miss M. T. Cockroft, second; S. M. Goldsmith, third.

Best vase lavender—Mrs. R. B. Ellison, first; Miss M. T. Cockroft, second; Herbert L. Pratt, third.

SECRETARY BUNYARD'S REPORT.

[Presented at the annual meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, held at Philadelphia, June 29 and 30, 1911.]

When I helped to organize the National Sweet Pea Society three years ago, I stated at the first meeting that it would and must be a success. Up to this time it has not fulfilled my highest expectations, but we have made substantial progress, have learned something and have placed the society on a sound foundation. Aided by the experience of the past, we hope to be still more successful in furthering the aims and objects of the society.

Up to and including this exhibition, we have held four shows—two in New York, one in Boston in connection with the S. A. F.'s National Flower Show, and the Philadelphia exhibition. All of these have been an expense to the society, no charge for admission being made. The only source of income is from the active memberships, life memberships and the guarantors who have generously come to the front when needed. We have today 110 active members and twelve life members.

The Exhibitions and Their Results.

Personally, I know that good results have accrued from our exhibitions. Perhaps the most material results are from the Boston exhibition. The winter flowering sweet peas shown by William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., excited more than general interest and admiration, so much so that several florists in the vicinity of New York are building houses especially to grow sweet peas this winter.

The great difficulty in holding exhibitions in this country is its vastness. What would be a good date in Philadelphia would be too early for New York and a good date for New York would be too early for New England, and that applies also to the west; so that the exhibition really resolves itself into a local show, which is a good reason for changing the place of meeting from year to year. Of course, this year has been exceptional, owing to weather conditions. It has been suggested by one of our exhibitors that the date should be set at this meeting and should be either the last week in June or the first week in July. This would give growers the opportunity to sow their sweet pea seed to conform with these dates. It is much easier for a grower to hold off for a week than to force his plants into bloom. I trust that the convention will seriously consider this matter.

Signs of Progress.

Our society has helped to popularize the Spencer varieties of sweet peas Anton Zvolanek an entirely new race of sweet peas, some of which equaled and others even excelled the beauty and type of the Spencers. Mr. Zvolanek deserves great credit for his work, and I hope that in the near future this society will be able to accord medals to hybridizers and raisers of new varieties. I understand that W. Atlee Burpee & Co., at Fordhook, are also working along these lines and have some promising seedlings. Credit is also due to the gentlemen who have helped to finance our society, not only from its inception, but also at a time when guarantee funds were needed for prizes, etc. I wish at this time to thank the generous donors of prizes, and your president, W. Atlee Burpee, for his time and moral support so generously given.

A Selection of Varieties.

If I were asked to name the best Spencer, Unwin, grandiflora and winter flowering sweet peas today, I would give the following list, apart from the varieties introduced this year:

SPENCER VARIETIES.

Asta Ohn Spencer, pure lavender, tinted pinkish rose, self color.
Aurora Spencer, orange, rose or salmon striped on white.
Apple Blossom Spencer, standard bright crimson rose, wings white tinged with pink.
Captain of Blues Spencer, bluish purple with distinct margin of lilac.
Countess Spencer, the original Spencer, clear, bright pink.
Helen Lewis, standard crimson orange, wings orange rose.
Flora Morse Spencer, delicate blush with pink margin.
George Herbert, rose carmine.
John Ingman, rose carmine with rose veins.
King Edward Spencer, pure, bright red or crimson scarlet.
Lovely Spencer, standard light blush pink, with blotch or rose at the base.
Othello Spencer, deep velvety maroon.
Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, primrose and buff, with margin and edge of light salmon.
Mrs. Walter Wright Spencer, rosy purple, self color.
Primrose Spencer, pure light primrose yellow.
White Spencer, pure white.

Dreer's Aquatics at the National Sweet Pea Show.

among growers, private and commercial, and while some of the grandifloras are still popular, they are fast being displaced by the Spencer and Unwin types.

At Boston there were exhibited by

UNWIN VARIETIES.

Frank Dolby, lavender and mauve.
Gladys Unwin, clear, bright pink, a little deeper at the edges, almost self color.
E. J. Castle, bright rose crimson, with veins of deeper rose.
Mrs. Alfred Watkins, bright pink at base, shading to blush and buff at edges.
Nora Unwin, pure white.

GRANDIFLORA VARIETIES.

Bolton's Pink, orange or salmon pink, veined with rose.
Burpee's Earliest White, pure white.
Dorothy Eckford, pure white.
Edward VII, pure bright red or crimson scarlet.
Extra Early Blanche Ferry, standard bright crimson rose, wings white tinged with pink.
Helen Pierce, marbled blue on ivory white.
Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon, clear, light primrose.
Lady Grisel Hamilton, standard light mauve, wings lavender.
Lord Nelson, standard indigo and violet, wings indigo.
Lovely, deep pink, shading to very light pink at edges.
Miss Willmott, orange pink, with veins of deeper orange rose.
Mrs. George Higginson, Jr., clear azure blue, the lightest and clearest blue in sweet peas.
Prince Olaf, light blue, striped on white.
Queen Alexandra, very bright red, almost a true scarlet.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEAS.

Canary, primrose yellow.
Christmas Pink, standard rose, wings white.
Christmas White, pure white.
C. H. Totty, sky blue.
Flamingo, crimson scarlet.
Christmas Captain, blue and purple.
Florence Denzer, pure white.
Greenbrook, white, slightly touched with lavender.
Mrs. Alex Wallace, lavender.
Mrs. E. Wild, rose crimson.
Mrs. Wm. Sim, salmon pink.
Mrs. W. W. Smalley, satiny pink.
Snowbird, pure white.
Wallacea, lavender.
Watchung, pure white.

While experts may differ with me on my selection, people will not go far wrong in planting the foregoing varieties.

Cornell University, where, under the care of Professor Craig and A. C. Beal, the trials of our society have been held, has just issued bulletin No. 301, entitled "Sweet Pea Studies." This has been mailed to all members through the courtesy of the university, under frank without cost to the society. Thanks are due for the energy and work of the above gentlemen. If any member has not received a copy, I would ask them to kindly notify me at once.

Care in Naming and Disseminating.

Referring to the foregoing selection of sweet peas, I think we are somewhat blessed in this country by not having such an interminable quantity of new varieties placed on the market as they have in England every year. Unless it has real merit over existing varieties, a new variety has no place in the American seed catalogue or in the garden; neither do we have the same conflict of synonymous varieties under different names. Our growers in California, where eighty per cent of the sweet pea seed of the world is grown, are exceptionally careful, not only as to the new varieties they disseminate, but also as to roguing their stocks; neither do they send out new varieties, to their knowledge, unless they are thoroughly set. Among the most distinct breaks of recent years are the varieties Stirling Stent and Earl Spencer. In reality these are Henry Eckford Spencers, and this, I believe, would be a better name. Many colors we have today cannot be bettered. The colors the hybridizers are aiming for are a real buttercup yellow, the scarlet of the geranium and the blue of the Delphinium Belladonna.

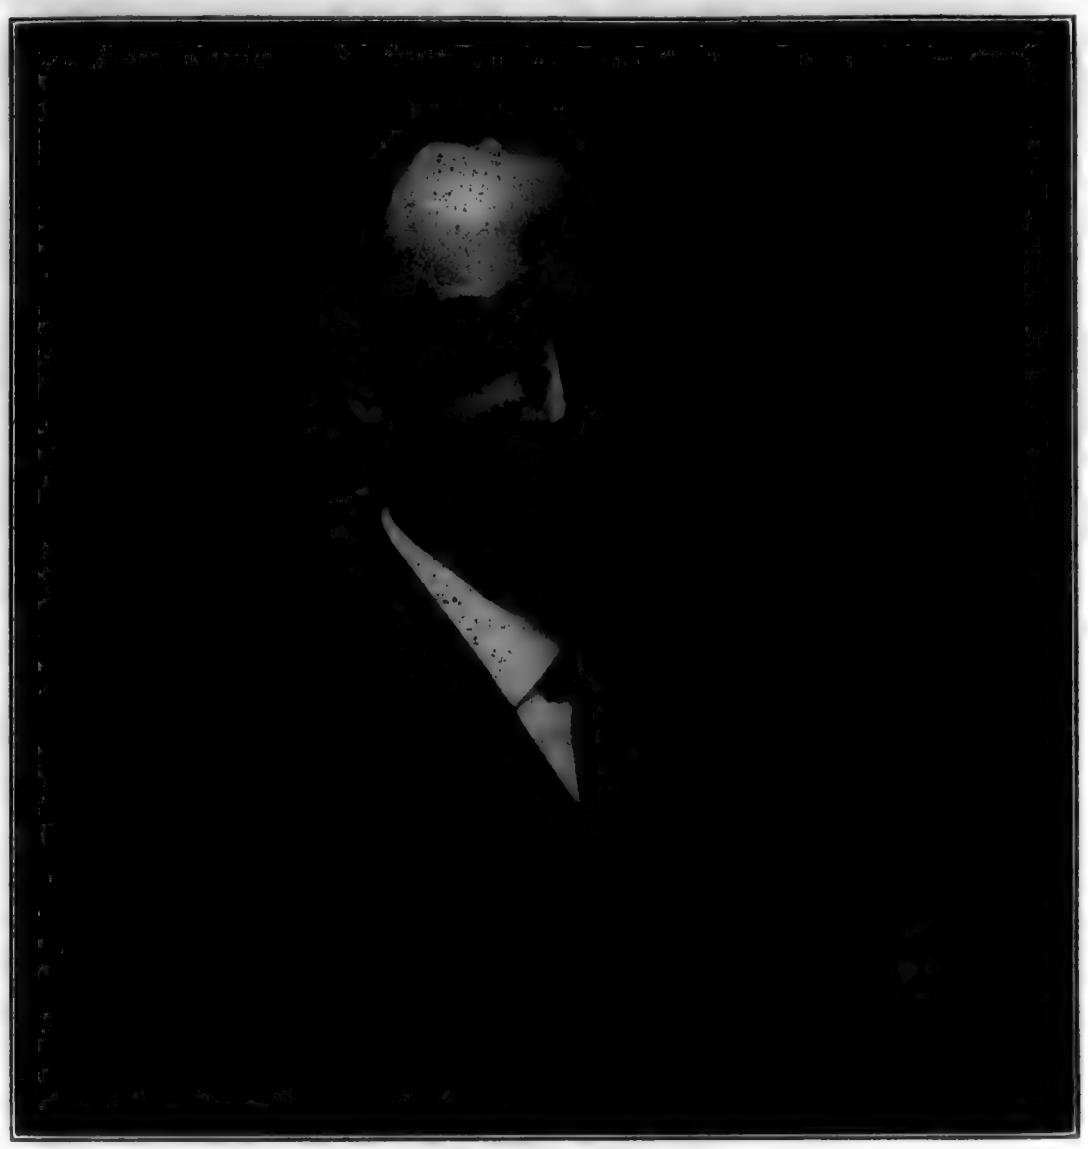
In the meantime the hybridizers should concentrate their efforts upon the improvement of the stock with reference to the size and substance of the flower, number of flowers on a stem, length of the stem and strength and habit of the plant, and should aim to produce an American breed of flowering sweet peas that will stand our hot summers, so that not only in name, but in fact, they will become the poor man's orchid and the rival of that flower.

OBSERVATIONS ON SWEET PEAS.

[A paper by Edwin Lonsdale, of Lompoc, Cal., read at the annual meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, June 29 and 30, 1911.]

We are all aware that the sweet pea, by its own intrinsic worth, has forged to the front and now heads the list among annual flowers, aided to some extent, of course, by its numerous ardent admirers. The sweet pea is rarely out of place, and is almost as much at home blooming in the city yard as it is in the more pretentious gardens of the suburbanite or on the broader acreage, farther afield, among the more wealthy.

The late and highly respected Henry Eckford is everywhere accorded the honored title of "Father of the Sweet Pea," having by painstaking and well directed effort, in cross-fertilizing and selecting, improved it in many of the great essentials, which include size, color and form, but it was the advent of that beautiful variety, Countess Spencer, which marked the greatest advance in the modern sweet pea, and the tendency to sport or vary, which this modern type has a predisposition to do, is not the least among its interesting qualities.



The Sportive Tendency.

Someone has said that this sportive tendency "is a blessing in disguise," and I believe it. Most assuredly it has added zest to the growing of sweet peas generally in recent years, for many enthusiasts in these days are continually on the lookout for new color shades, new color combinations and an additional eighth of an inch to the standard. The tendency of the modern sweet pea to throw sports has caused many enthuiasts to observe more closely for color and other variations, and thus has added materially to their pleasures in sweet pea growing.

We hear sometimes the carping critic bewailing the fact that there are too many varieties, and some have gone so far as to take the trouble of preparing lists of too-much-alike varieties, but we must always bear in mind that each color selection frequently has characteristics all its own, which are often influenced by different soil or climatic conditions, so that it behooves us to try all varieties and hold on to those which answer our own individual purposes best. Florists everywhere find sweet peas, both in the winter season and also when grown outdoors in summer, always useful to cut from and never out of place, and the newer Spencers, with their larger and more wavy standards, lend themselves most gracefully to all floral art. This type also has another advantage for garden and floral decorations, on account of its failing to set seed so freely as does the older grandiflora types, thus prolonging its season for producing flowers.

Suggestions as to Varieties.

Among crimsons, nothing in general cultivation is superior to King Edward Spencer, as it lights up so well under the influence of artificial light at night. For a delicate pink, the best selections of the original Countess Spencer are still among the most choice. For maroon, Othello answers the purpose well. White Spencer is one of the best in that color. For a cream, Primrose Spencer at its best is at the head of the list. So far as I have seen, in the light lavender shade, there is nothing better than the newer Florence Nightingale.

W. Atlee Burpee.
(President National Sweet Pea Society.)

The foregoing list is of course recommended for outdoor growing in summer time.

For winter blooming an entirely distinct type is made use of, among which may be mentioned: Earliest White, or Florence Denzer, and Mont Blanc. For cream, Earliest Sunbeams is good. Christmas Pink and reselected Earliest of All Blanche Ferry are quite popular among the pinks. For rosy lavender, Mrs. Alex. Wallace, and for violet purple, Le Marquis are grown. The winter blooming class is not of the Spencer type, but these, I am reliably informed, are on the way to arrive quite soon.

The crops of sweet pea seeds at this writing are quite uncertain, especially at Floradale, where, on account of weather conditions, planting was from four to six weeks later than in 1910.

PROPAGATION OF FICUS.

Please give us information as to time and manner of the propagation of Ficus elastica. S. G.

In summer propagation can be effected by making cuts, slanting ones are best, six to twelve inches from the tops of any of the shoots. The cuts should be two to three inches long and between eyes. Rub some fine charcoal in the cut and put in a fine-pointed stick, like a toothpick, to prevent its closing. Then wrap a handful of sphagnum or wood moss around the cut. Tie it securely with raffia or soft twine and keep constantly moist. The tops should be cut off and potted as soon as roots are seen pushing through the moss. Place in small pots. Tie up the leaves for a time and spray frequently until established, growing them in a close, moist house. Where there are large, bushy plants at command, this is much the best method of propagation, as if the moss is kept moist no cuttings should fail to root.

In winter, any time after Christmas, when a steady, brisk bottom heat is at command, top cuttings can be taken and rooted in a propagating bench, where the bottom heat is 75 to 85 degrees. Tie up the leaves and keep the bed constantly moist. The writer has found cuttings to root better where some chopped sphagnum and fine charcoal were mixed with the sand. Another method of propagation is from single eyes with one leaf. The leaf must be tied up and when potted should be staked. This is a favorite plan of propagation in Belgium, but it takes longer to produce plants and is for that reason little used here. A brisk bottom heat is, of course, necessary with single eye cuttings also.

CUTTING BACK HYDRANGEAS.

I have a lot of hydrangeas from 5-inch and 6-inch pots, which failed to flower this spring, and I have just planted them out. They are quite tall, having stood close together until now. Should I cut them back, and if so, how much? F. O.

Cut them back to within six inches of the ground. This work would have been better done a month ago, but if the plants are in a position where they can get some water in dry weather, they should make quite good growths before the middle of October, when they will require lifting and potting.

these have been an expense to the society, no charge for admission being made. The only source of income is from the active memberships, life memberships and the guarantors who have generously come to the front when needed. We have today 110 active members and twelve life members.

The Exhibitions and Their Results.

Personally, I know that good results have accrued from our exhibitions. Perhaps the most material results are from the Boston exhibition. The winter flowering sweet peas shown by William Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., excited more than general interest and admiration, so much so that several florists in the vicinity of New York are building houses especially to grow sweet peas this winter.

The great difficulty in holding exhibitions in this country is its vastness. What would be a good date in Philadelphia would be too early for New York and a good date for New York would be too early for New England, and that applies also to the west; so that the exhibition really resolves itself into a local show, which is a good reason for changing the place of meeting from year to year. Of course, this year has been exceptional, owing to weather conditions. It has been suggested by one of our exhibitors that the date should be set at this meeting and should be either the last week in June or the first week in July. This would give growers the opportunity to sow their sweet pea seed to conform with these dates. It is much easier for a grower to hold off for a week than to force his plants into bloom. I trust that the convention will seriously consider this matter.

Signs of Progress.

Our society has helped to popularize the Spencer varieties of sweet peas among growers, private and commercial, and while some of the grandifloras are still popular, they are fast being displaced by the Spencer and Unwin types.

At Boston there were exhibited by Anton Zvolanek an entirely new race of sweet peas, some of which equaled and others even excelled the beauty and type of the Spencers. Mr. Zvolanek deserves great credit for his work, and I hope that in the near future this society will be able to accord medals to hybridizers and raisers of new varieties. I understand that W. Atlee Burpee & Co., at Fordhook, are also working along these lines and have some promising seedlings. Credit is also due to the gentlemen who have helped to finance our society, not only from its inception, but also at a time when guarantee funds were needed for prizes, etc. I wish at this time to thank the generous donors of prizes, and your president, W. Atlee Burpee, for his time and moral support so generously given.

A Selection of Varieties.

If I were asked to name the best Spencer, Unwin, grandiflora and winter flowering sweet peas today, I would give the following list, apart from the varieties introduced this year:

SPENCER VARIETIES.

Asta Ohn Spencer, pure lavender, tinted pinkish rose, self color.
Aurora Spencer, orange, rose or salmon striped on white.
Apple Blossom Spencer, standard bright crimson rose, wings white tinged with pink.
Captain of Blues Spencer, bluish purple with distinct margin of lilac.
Countess Spencer, the original Spencer, clear, bright pink.
Helen Lewis, standard crimson orange, wings orange rose.
Flora Morse Spencer, delicate blush with pink margin.
George Herbert, rose carmine.
John Ingman, rose carmine with rose veins.
King Edward Spencer, pure, bright red or crimson scarlet.
Lovely Spencer, standard light blush pink, with blotch or rose at the base.
Othello Spencer, deep velvety maroon.
Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, primrose and buff, with margin and edge of light salmon.
Mrs. Walter Wright Spencer, rosy purple, self color.
Primrose Spencer, pure light primrose yellow.
White Spencer, pure white.

UNWIN VARIETIES.

Frank Dolby, lavender and mauve.
Gladys Unwin, clear, bright pink, a little deeper at the edges, almost self color.
E. J. Castle, bright rose crimson, with veins of deeper rose.
Mrs. Alfred Watkins, bright pink at base, shading to blush and buff at edges.
Nora Unwin, pure white.

GRANDIFLORA VARIETIES.

Bolton's Pink, orange or salmon pink, veined with rose.
Burpee's Earliest White, pure white.
Dorothy Eckford, pure white.
Edward VII, pure bright red or crimson scarlet.
Extra Early Blanche Ferry, standard bright crimson rose, wings white tinged with pink.
Helen Pierce, marbled blue on ivory white.
Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon, clear, light primrose.
Lady Grisel Hamilton, standard light mauve, wings lavender.
Lord Nelson, standard indigo and violet, wings indigo.
Lovely, deep pink, shading to very light pink at edges.
Miss Willmott, orange pink, with veins of deeper orange rose.
Mrs. George Higginson, Jr., clear azure blue, the lightest and clearest blue in sweet peas.
Prince Olaf, light blue, striped on white.
Queen Alexandra, very bright red, almost a true scarlet.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEAS.

Canary, primrose yellow.
Christmas Pink, standard rose, wings white.
Christmas White, pure white.
C. H. Totty, sky blue.
Flamingo, crimson scarlet.
Christmas Captain, blue and purple.
Florence Denzer, pure white.
Greenbrook, white, slightly touched with lavender.
Mrs. Alex Wallace, lavender.
Mrs. E. Wild, rose crimson.
Mrs. Wm. Sim, salmon pink.
Mrs. W. W. Smalley, satiny pink.
Snowbird, pure white.
Wallacea, lavender.
Watchung, pure white.

While experts may differ with me on my selection, people will not go far wrong in planting the foregoing varieties.

Cornell University, where, under the care of Professor Craig and A. C. Beal, the trials of our society have been held, has just issued bulletin No. 301, entitled "Sweet Pea Studies." This has been mailed to all members through the courtesy of the university, under frank without cost to the society. Thanks are due for the energy and work of the above gentlemen. If any member has not received a copy, I would ask them to kindly notify me at once.

Care in Naming and Disseminating.

Referring to the foregoing selection of sweet peas, I think we are somewhat blessed in this country by not having such an interminable quantity of new varieties placed on the market as they have in England every year. Unless it has real merit over existing varieties, a new variety has no place in the American seed catalogue or in the garden; neither do we have the same conflict of synonymous varieties under different names. Our growers in California, where eighty per cent of the sweet pea seed of the world is grown, are exceptionally careful, not only as to the new varieties they disseminate, but also as to roguing their stocks; neither do they send out new varieties, to their knowledge, unless they are thoroughly set. Among the most distinct breaks of recent years are the varieties Sterling Stent and Earl Spencer. In reality these are Henry Eckford Spencers, and this, I believe, would be a better name. Many colors we have today cannot be bettered. The colors the hybridizers are aiming for are a real buttercup yellow, the scarlet of the geranium and the blue of the Delphinium Belladonna.

In the meantime the hybridizers should concentrate their efforts upon the improvement of the stock with reference to the size and substance of the flower, number of flowers on a stem, length of the stem and strength and habit of the plant, and should aim to produce an American breed of flowering sweet peas that will stand our hot summers, so that not only in name, but in fact, they will become the poor man's orchid and the rival of that flower.

OBSERVATIONS ON SWEET PEAS.

[A paper by Edwin Lonsdale, of Lompoc, Cal., read at the annual meeting of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, June 29 and 30, 1911.]

We are all aware that the sweet pea, by its own intrinsic worth, has forged to the front and now heads the list among annual flowers, aided to some extent, of course, by its numerous ardent admirers. The sweet pea is rarely out of place, and is almost as much at home blooming in the city yard as it is in the more pretentious gardens of the suburbanite or on the broader acreage, farther afield, among the more wealthy.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

NASTURTIUM NOTIONS.

Fine for Mantels and Windows.

Nasturtiums arranged in a bark or moss-covered pan, fitted to the shelf, make a good decoration for some of the rough stone mantels often seen in bungalows and country homes. Here, as in the panels, long branches may trail downward and a few may be caught and fastened in an upright position. Make one end of the pan a heavy mass of the cut flowers and scatter along toward a lighter group, with ferns, at the other end.

Bank a mantel of mission finish with plants or long branches, as in the preceding design, and train them liberally over the mirror frame and the edge of the glass, not encroaching on the center. Or, if a wide shelf is met with overhead, fill a second pan with heavy trailers or plants and let them shower over the lower pan. The same kind of a pan may be fastened over the top of a window with fine effect.

While almost any flower is happily placed within the reflecting surface of a mirror, it seems as though nasturtiums were made for mirrors. Even in table decorations work in a mirror in some way with them, if possible.

While low bark and twig baskets are good appearing receptacles for nasturtiums, they are not practical unless supplied with pans. Gourds would be good for cut nasturtiums, with rustic surroundings.

There are two main points in the use of nasturtiums for decorative purposes—first, to give them opportunities for trailing or climbing, and second, the massing of color, which should begin with a heavy group of the deeper colored flowers and should stretch away to finer streaks and spots of color before it fades into the yellow green of the foliage. In a decoration which contains no other flower but nasturtiums, a few odd pieces of green, ivory or dark brown crockery may be employed for the flowers, but only a few.

An outdoor daylight wedding decoration done in nasturtiums would be a delightful departure. Use a rustic summer house for a canopy and cover the roof, inside and outside, with nasturtiums and nasturtiums. No suggestions would be necessary for this. They would arrange themselves in a network at the back and sides, and come fairly tumbling down the poles that support the roof.

For Centerpieces.

Table centerpieces of nasturtiums are just as easily thought out. For a dainty luncheon or dinner piece erect a 12-inch gilded rod at each end of the table. Stretch between these rods, at convenient distances apart, Nile green or orange yellow ribbon of No. 3 to No. 5 width. If the table is long, a third or perhaps a fourth rod will be needed along toward the center. In a plateau of moss in which the rods are erected, sink a few low vases and fill these with long-stemmed nasturtium flowers and green, with some branches. Catch up the ribbon here and there and tie it with dainty bows, in the fashion of vines to a trellis. Cover the vases with moss and decorate the rods with trailers. Scatter foliage and flowers out sparingly from the center line and ends.

If the table is unusually wide, two such slender lines of ribbon and rods might be run its full length, with a heavier massing of flowers between. Or, for a large, square table, two cross lines might be used. For a round table make a square enclosure of the same style, with rods at the corners, ribbon stretched between the corners and the whole center filled with a growing bed of nasturtium plants, with extra flowers added.

Screens and Backgrounds.

Gilded wire netting might be used in place of the ribbons for the table decoration. A large panel of gilded netting, with nasturtium decorations, might also be used in other decorative features, as a screen for musicians, a background for a reception or wedding party, a dining-room screen or a corner or window decoration for a store.

Nasturtium colors are good mixers for themselves. There is a salmon pink which jars slightly with the yellow and orange in daylight, but one is safe with most of the ordinary mixtures. However, there are delightfully fine lines of color distinctions between the yellows and creams. The oranges and creams, the extremes of the colors, make the softer harmonies, while the canary yellows are a host of color effect all to themselves. G. B.

A GOOD ROADS WINDOW.

When the National Good Roads Association met in Birmingham, Ala., a few weeks ago the Amzi Godden Seed Co., which not only runs a seed store, but also does a large retail cut flower business, took advantage of the opportunity for a timely window display, which was photographed, and the photograph is reproduced herewith. While some araucarias and a few other items of the florists' stock were used in the window, it was principally a display for the seed and implement departments. The "good roads" divided fields of three kinds of grass. The one in front is fancy red top about one inch high, while the one at the right is timothy not more than one and a half inches high. Where the figure of the negro with the cultivator is shown was radish about two inches high. The attention attracted amply repaid for the effort.

NOTES ON HARDY PERENNIALS.

Delphiniums.

What a glorious showing the delphiniums, or hardy larkspurs, as they are commonly known, have just been making in the hardy herbaceous borders! What a gap there would be in the hardy garden were these stately and beautiful plants removed! They are so easily raised from seed and respond so readily to good culture that it is astonishing that more florists do not grow them. The flowers are splendid for cutting and anyone who has a few clumps or rows of them can easily get his money back with added interest from the sale of plants alone, for there are increasing numbers of amateurs who are growing hardy perennials, and few plants other than delphiniums will more quickly charm them and cause them to purchase.

While good plants can be raised from root division and cuttings, seed sowing is the simplest method, as a few packets of seed will give many hundreds of plants. It is not yet too late by any means to sow a good batch of seed to secure plants for flowering next year. Sow either outdoors or in a coldframe under lath shades, where, with an occasional watering, the seedlings will soon appear. Then transplant to beds or nursery rows, allowing six inches between the plants, choosing always a cool or cloudy day for the operation, when the soil is moist. If kept well stirred among, the plants will be quite strong before autumn and should again be transplanted, allowing twelve inches between the plants, or, if preferred, they can be closely set in coldframes over winter and planted out in early spring.

D. Belladonna is one of the most beautiful imaginable shades of blue and an excellent grower withal. Cashmerianum, pale blue; formosum, dark blue with a white eye; formosum cœlestinum, beautiful pale blue; King of Delphiniums, deep blue, semi-double, white eye; Queen Wilhelmina, soft lavender, flushed with rose, and Amos Perry, rosy mauve, flushed with sky blue, semi-double, are splendid varieties for anyone wishing for a boiled down selection, but a packet of each of dark and light blue seed from a reliable seed house will give varieties equal in quality to many of the best named ones.

In addition to the tall hybrid larkspurs, the Chinese larkspurs, D. Chinensis, should not be overlooked. These are dwarfer in habit and have much finer cut foliage. They also bloom much earlier from seed, flowering in two or three months. These are procurable in shades of deep gentian blue and pure white and are among the most easily grown and most beautiful of perennials for cutting. There is the scarlet delphinium, D. cardinale or D. nudicaule, also a yellow one, D. Zalil, sometimes called sulphureum, with sulphury yellow flowers, but neither of these will be found of great commercial value.

Delphiniums enjoy deep, rich soil, well drained, and in such they make really marvelous growth. As they are somewhat brittle, it is best to stake them, as wind storms are liable to damage them. If cut down when the first lot of flowers have faded, and fed a little, they will send up quite a good second crop in August. To secure a really beautiful effect in the hardy garden, plant the dark or light blue delphiniums in association with Lilium candidum. These flower together and the effect is almost indescribably beautiful.

Cut worms and white grubs, the larvæ of the May beetle, are fond of delphiniums, the former in May and early June and the latter later in the season. The use of lime, gas lime and soot in the soil will help to keep these away. Some of the choice named varieties if not transplanted every two or three years are subject to blight; otherwise delphiniums are among the cleanest of all perennials. They also have a future for forcing purposes. At least one wide-awake Boston grower had them in quantity in April this year and had no trouble in disposing of all he grew to the up-to-date retail stores. There would seem to be an opening in the way of hardy perennials for increasing our variety of spring flowers, the paucity of which our English visitors at the late S. A. F. national show commented upon. With such flowers as double and single pyrethrums, phloxes like Miss Lingard, peonies and delphiniums, all of which would be welcome even a few weeks ahead of their natural flowering time, there would seem to be a field for some bright, enterprising growers to branch out into. W. N. Craig.

Double Delphiniums.

TROUBLE WITH MAGGOTS.

In doing our summer propagating in hotframes we have had considerable trouble with maggots. After the cuttings have been in for a few days the maggots burrow through the sand in such quantities as to leave the sand so loose that the cuttings almost turn over. Can some one suggest something that can be applied to the manure that will destroy the maggots before the sand is put in the bed? W. B.

Carbon bisulphide applied to the manure before the cuttings are put in will destroy the maggots and any other larvæ. It is often used in greenhouse benches to destroy grubs and worms, but in pots, pans or confined spaces it will injure the plants, unless used carefully. Bore holes in the manure. After the holes are formed pour a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide into each hole. Make the holes twelve to eighteen inches apart and cover up as soon as the liquid is poured in. Don't smoke while using this chemical; it is highly inflammable. C. W.

LEAF MINER ON BEGONIAS.

What is the trouble with my begonia leaves, samples of which are enclosed, and can you give me a remedy for it? G. G.

The leaves were much shriveled, but seemed to have been attacked by a leaf miner. These little creatures work inside the leaves, almost skeletonizing them. Spray with a rather strong nicotine solution. Keep this up and you will gradually clean them out. Poisons could be used, but they would disfigure the foliage and probably burn them at the same time, and they are only of service if gotten on the leaves before the miner tunnels into the inner tissues of the leaves. Nicotine seems to soak into the tissues and kills the miners working there. Dipping the plants in nicotine water would be effective if you have only a few plants in pots. C. W.

CARNATIONS

POOR GROWTH IN THE FIELD.

My carnation plants in the field have not done at all well, owing to the dry weather. Would it be a good plan to take the plants up, put them in the houses and keep topping them till August 15? Would that make them good plants for winter? E. H. M.

One would have to see your plants to know whether they would make good plants by winter if benched at this time. If they are merely a trifle undersized, and not making much growth now, they would likely pick up by fall if planted inside and encouraged along.

If, however, they have suffered from drought ever since they were planted out and have made no growth at all, then I would not advise you to plant them in. My experience has been that it does not pay to house plants which are much undersized, for blooming. By the time the plants pick up enough strength to produce high-grade blooms the season is half gone and your profit on the season's crop is gone. It would be better to buy plants from some reliable source to plant your beds; they will make you more than their cost and give you much more satisfaction to grow. A. F. J. B.

CHICKEN MANURE IN BENCHES.

I have about twelve loads of old chicken manure. Would it be suitable for use in carnation beds? If so, in what quantity? The soil is light and sandy. C. W. R.

Instead of mixing the chicken manure with the soil, I would advise you to save it for top-dressing your carnations this winter. Mix it with about twice its bulk of soil and let it lie until you want to use it, but see that it does not heat. Turning the pile occasionally will prevent heating. When applying it, put on a good, big handful to each row, halfway across a 5-foot bench.

A. F. J. B.

PLANTS DROWNED OUT.

I should like to get as much information as possible in regard to holding old carnation plants over, as mine were drowned out. My old stock is not first-class, but I shall be obliged to keep a considerable number of them. Can the old stock be taken up and transplanted? W. S.

I fear that in trying to carry over your old carnation plants, with no preparation before this date, you will only invite disaster and disappointment. To carry over plants the second season, they should be cut back for a new start while the weather is yet comparatively cool. To cut them back hard now would kill most of the plants, and to replant them without being cut back would have about the same effect. You could let them stand where they are, merely mulching and watering them through the summer, but you would find by fall that you would have a tangled mass of growth which would be hard to handle. The blooms would be inferior and few.

My advice to you would be to buy what plants you need to fill your beds. They will more than repay you the cost before half the season is gone.

A. F. J. B.

SOIL DEFICIENT IN PHOSPHATE.

I have a rich, black loam soil here and am preparing it for carnations. There is not much sand in it and it is lacking in phosphate. I am planning that when I fill the bed I will apply a half inch of sand and a light coat of ground rock phosphate; also a peck of lime to a bed 7x80. Do you think that would be about right? E. P. M.

If you know that your soil is deficient in phosphate, then your idea of adding ground rock phosphate is correct, but I doubt the wisdom of adding it at the time of planting. I would suggest that you turn over the compost heap, and add the ground rock while you are turning it. The sand could also be added better at that time. The idea is to get these materials thoroughly incorporated with the soil, else little good will result therefrom.

Leave the lime out until your plants are growing. Then you can tell by the growth and strength of the stems whether the soil is deficient in lime.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATION POT PLANTS.

Years ago Uncle John Thorpe used to argue that a splendid future as a pot plant lay before the carnation. Not many florists have worked along this line, but Henry Eichholz, of Waynesboro, Pa., thinks there are few flowering plants growing in pots that have the many merits of his carnation Christmas Cheer. It certainly has the popular Christmas color and as exhibited at several S. A. F. conventions and numerous flower shows it always has demonstrated a freedom of bloom that left little to be desired. Mr. Eichholz has sent The Review two plants of Christmas Cheer, as he says, "to show its usefulness as a summer pot plant." The plants are in 5-inch pots and well filled with bloom, some fifteen or twenty flowers and many buds on each plant. The growth stands two feet above the pot.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Achimenes.

Achimenes are invaluable summer flowering plants, not so much known as their merits would seem to deserve, but to anyone who has a call for blooming plants in the hot months they are extremely useful. Whether grown in pots or pans, they should have a light, neat stake to each stem before the growths become twisted. If these stakes are painted green, they will never be noticed and they need not be as high as the flowering stems. Keep the plants in a house where they will not get any direct sunshine, or the foliage will soon be disfigured. Also avoid spraying them overhead, except it be with an occasional nicotine solution to keep thrips in check. As the pots get filled with roots, feed them twice a week with weak cow manure water. Never allow the plants to become dry, or you will ruin them for the season.

Tuberous Begonias.

Probably none of the greenhouse bulbous plants blooming in summer is as showy and lasting as the tuberous-rooted begonia. Immense advances have been made in the strains of these of late years, so that new flowers five to six inches across excite no comment at all. To grow these well the plants want a light, airy house, not heavily shaded. If the glass is too thickly obscured with whitewash, the growths will become drawn and the plants will lack the stocky habit which should be characteristic of them. Spring seedlings should now be in 4-inch or 5-inch pots and, in order to get them strong, it is as well to pinch off the flowers for a while and shift them into 6-inch and 7-inch pots before flowering them. Older tubers succeed best in 8-inch pots. In smaller sizes they do fairly well, but the best we have are always in the larger sizes, and some short but moderately stout stakes should be placed to support the easily broken flowering stems.

Thrips are the bane of begonias and all other summer flowering bulbous plants of this character and either fumigation or spraying must be strictly attended to, or they will be ruined. If a greenhouse is not at command, splendid plants can be grown in cold-frames, the sashes being shaded to break the sun's direct rays. Begonias like a rich but porous soil and should not be potted too firmly. They enjoy fairly strong liquid manure twice a week when flowering.

Mignonette.

It is yet too early to make a sowing of mignonette under glass, but the benches can be filled with soil when opportunity occurs and it will do no harm to let a crop of the inevitable weeds occur and be destroyed before the seed is sown. If you did not save some specially good seed yourself, purchase a good strain now.

General View of the Rose Show at Tacoma, Wash., June 23.

(From a photograph, copyrighted 1911, by Benj. A. Reed.—The splendid displays by the Tacoma florists occupied the space under the balcony.)

The present is a good time to make an outdoor sowing of mignonette for fall flowering. Outdoor mignonette never produces such spikes as we get under glass in late winter, but it comes in serviceable to the average country florist who has a constant call for flowers, and scented flowers like mignonette are always popular. Give a rich piece of ground and do not sow the seeds thickly.

Transplanting Perennials.

Take the opportunity on cool, cloudy days, when the ground is moist, to transplant hardy perennials and biennials. Be sure that the roots are moist when transplanted and firm them well. If an early rain seems improbable, a few cans of water applied carefully will give the little plants a start, but the surface soil should be well loosened about them later with hoe or cultivator. It is sometimes necessary to transplant when soil and atmospheric conditions are not ideal. When this is so, dip the roots of the seedlings in clay and water, or any other soil will answer to make a puddle. The loss from seedlings thus treated will be trifling compared with others which were undipped.

Propagation.

In summer, while the propagating house is often untenanted, is a suitable time to increase the stock of show pelargoniums. English ivy, variegated vinca, crotons, dracænas, pandanus and dieffenbachias. A number of deciduous flowering shrubs which root freely from half ripened wood, including such varieties as syringas, deutzias, ligustrums, loniceras, spiræas and many others, can be propagated in this way; also gardenias, allamandas, abelias, oleanders, begonias, such as Gloire de Lorraine and other fibrous rooted sorts, hydrangeas, fuchsias, etc. Greater care is needed, of course, in July than in January. A close, moist atmosphere, with frequent sprayings overhead, is necessary for the bulk of the plants named, and of course the shade must be heavier than in late winter or early spring. Greater vigilance is also necessary after the plants are potted. A dozen times a day they may need a light spraying to keep them fresh on hot days. Then again, if it is dull, they may not need any moisture at all.

Compost Piles.

There will now be a constant drain on the compost pile, and no matter how big and imposing it may look in early spring, it usually shrinks to small proportions before fall potting is done. With the pressure of other duties there is a likelihood of the compost heaps being somewhat neglected, in that they are allowed to become overgrown with rank weeds, which will soon eat away much of their richness. Keep the compost pile clean and you will find it to be money well invested.

Outdoor Work.

Apart from the necessary emptying and refilling of benches preparatory to planting various winter crops, the outdoor department will now require considerable attention. The carnations and violets can hardly be overcultivated and a hand weeding once a fortnight is also necessary. Asters and other annuals will soon suffer if the ground is allowed to bake about them. After every rain stir up the soil as soon as possible, to conserve the moisture. Even if it does not rain for a month, it is indeed surprising what persistent tickling of the surface will accomplish. The more the soil is stirred, the faster the plants seem to grow.

ROSES AT BAGATELLE GARDENS.

Readers of The Review are familiar with the annual trials of new roses that are held at the Bagatelle Gardens in Paris and will be interested in the results this season, especially as E. G. Hill Co. was again a winner:

"The judging of these took place June 14, under conditions that were as favorable as could be expected, considering the long spell of dry, hot weather that has prevailed. The varieties of 1910, seventy-seven in number, came first under review, and two gold medals were awarded, one to Beaute de Lyon (Pernet-Ducher), and the other to Jonkheer J. L. Mock (Leenders). The first-named belongs to Mr. Pernet-Ducher's series of hybrid briars. Jonkheer J. L. Mock is a hybrid tea with large, well formed red and pink flowers. In addition to the medals, three Certificates of Bagatelle were awarded as follows, in the order stated: Viscountess Enfield (Pernet-Ducher), salmon-rose, in the way of Lyon rose; May Millers (E. G. Hill Co.), a salmon flesh hybrid tea, and William Speed, one of Messrs. Dickson's hybrid teas. An extra certificate was awarded to the climbing Wichuraiana Desire Borgera (Barbier)."

THE TACOMA ROSE SHOW.

The first annual show of the Tacoma Rose Society was opened in the state armory Friday afternoon, June 23. Everything was in readiness at 2 o'clock and over 3,000 vases of the finest roses, comprising about 2,000 separate entries and showing 150 varieties, were on exhibition.

The armory was decorated by the Florists' Club after the general plan suggested by E. R. Roberts. A 20-foot circle of tropical plants in the center screened the orchestra from view. Around this, and filling the main floor space, the rose exhibits of the amateurs were arranged, while the displays of the local florists occupied all the space under the balconies.

Among those exhibiting in the latter class were: The Smith Floral Co., Northwestern Floral Co., Mrs. M. E. Hayden, California Florist, Van Slyke & Seamons, Henry Benthein, A. A. Hinz, Louis F. Tschunko, John Watson, H. W. Manike and the Fern Hill Greenhouses.

La Salle, Ill.—Miss Ella J. Porter has removed to a newly remodeled, handsomely arranged store in the Schlaegeter building, on First street.

FANCY CALADIUMS.

In the summer months, when flowering plants are not overabundant, the fancy-leaved caladiums are useful for decorative purposes. There are such a variety of beautiful colorings in the leaves that it is a wonder they are not more cultivated. For some reason there appears to be a decline in the popularity of colored-leaved plants, both here and in Europe. At the recent Temple show in London, where caladiums used to be a star feature, only one group was this year shown. Probably, as in the case of many other plants, this is merely a temporary reaction and a few years hence their popularity will be reasserted. These caladiums need some shade, but it should not be heavy if the fine colorings of the leaves are to be seen at their best. They rather enjoy a close, moist atmosphere, but stand dry conditions well. As the roots fill the pots, liquid manure twice a week will be of great benefit. As subtropical bedding plants, these caladiums are little used in the north, but even there they make a good growth outdoors, especially if used as a groundwork below taller plants, which will throw them a little shade, and if the beds are occasionally soaked with water. However, entirely apart from bedding purposes, they are among our most valuable summer decorative plants.

Many fail to carry them successfully through the winter. The roots want a warm, dry place, with a minimum temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, and if laid on their sides after the foliage has died down, where they are out of the reach of moisture, there should be few losses.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Extreme dullness now rules in the flower market. June business was generally admitted to be the best in a number of years, but with the advent of July and the passing of weddings, graduations, college commencements, etc., all life has gone and there is likely to be little doing until September.

Sweet peas contiuue to sell as well as anything, and the best still bring 75 cents and $1 per hundred. The outdoor crop of these is not especially good and those who have first-class peas are in luck. Carnations are small and the number going to the rubbish barrels is on the increase. Colored varieties, especially red, are almost unsalable. Roses are good for the season. Beauty, Killarney, Maryland, Chatenay, Ward and Richmond are excellent. Prince de Bulgarie has jumped into favor as a summer rose and sells well. Carnot also is in demand.

Gladioli are overabundant. America is the most popular variety. Bachelor's buttons and sweet sultan are small flowers which are in fair demand, also swainsonas. There is little call for valley, lilies or callas and absolutely none for such flowers as snapdragon, feverfew, stocks, etc.

For asparagus the demand has fallen off, and the call is light for adiantum. Early closing of the wholesale markets and commission houses went into effect July 1.

Various Notes.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., is sending some fine shipments of Rose Prince de Bulgarie to a number of the leading retailers, and it has become extremely popular.

F. H. Houghton closed his Boylston street store June 30 and will locate elsewhere on or about October 1.

Noted in H. R. Comley's window on Park street last week were Agapanthus unbellatus, clivias, Shasta Daisy King Edward VII and miltonias.

Montrose Greenhouses still are cutting some fine Killarney and White Killarney, Richmond and Ward. The Killarney are of a splendid color.

Mann Bros. have this season had a fine lot of Iris Anglica. This iris follows Hispanica and should be more largely grown. They have an abundance of gypsophila, coreopsis, rambler roses and other seasonable flowers.

P. J. Donahoe, the popular manager for the Boston Rose Co., and Miss Buckley, of Roxbury, were married June 28. The honeymoon is being spent in New York and vicinity. Their many friends remembered them well with gifts and wish them many long years of wedded bliss.

Julius H. Zinn's window was prettily arranged July 1, with blue cornflowers, hardy delphiniums and ferns, with a tank of white nymphæas in the center.

N. F. Comley is giving up the greenhouses he has been hiring in Bedford and in which he grew 50,000 carnations and quantities of vegetables last season. In future he will concentrate all his energies on his Lexington plant.

The Boston Flower Exchange baseball team, accompanied by many friends, took the 2:30 p. m. boat for Nahant July 1 and played the Roland aggregation. The weather was ideal and everyone enjoyed the sail, the game and the other good things.

H. M. Johnson, of Lynn, a comparatively new grower, is having grand success outdoors with Spencer sweet peas, which he has been marketing for several weeks.

Harvesting Freesia Purity at Rudolph Fischer's.

Julius Heurlin, of the Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, is away on his annual European trip and witnessed the coronation procession in London, June 22.

Herbert Capers, at the Boston Co-operative Market, is handling fine outdoor sweet peas from the Halifax Garden Co. and still receives excellent Bouvardia Humboldtii.

At Carbone's store on Boylston street Rose Prince de Bulgarie is in great request. I noted among other flowers the pretty lavender-blue Trachelium cærusleum, also Gladiolus nanus in variety, including the white Mathilda. Business in Italian ware continues good. Mr. Carbone is at present in Europe selecting goods for the coming season and will not return until October 1.

S. J. Goddard is busy throwing out his carnations and preparing to get his new stock, which looks well, planted as soon as possible. He is still cutting some extra fine flowers.

Caledonia Grove, West Roxbury, where the Gardeners' and Florists' Club picnic will be held, will undoubtedly bring out the largest crowd ever seen at a club picnic. Many offers of special prizes have been received and the program will soon be ready.

The various seed stores started early closing on Saturdays, July 1. Business held up well all through June and employees will be glad of some respite.

A. S. McDonald and Edward Wood, of Lexington, have a fine line of cut rambler roses at 2 Park street at present. Mr. Wood's sweet peas are also extra good.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, and Wm. Patterson, of Wollaston, have had a fine cut of Canterbury bells of late. The single pink finds most favor, next to that, white and lavender. The hose-in-hose variety sells more slowly, and no one wants the doubles at all.

Patrick Welch is enjoying the ocean breezes at Old Orchard, Me., but we think he will emerge from there and be heard from at the Baltimore convention.

Arnold & Petros keep their store window attractive even in the present hot weather, using ferns, crotons and a variety of green foliage plants, with only occasional vases of light-colored flowers.

J. Newman & Son, on Tremont street, have had a fine June business. Their window never looks the same on two successive days; always something new to see.

W. N. Craig.

HARVESTING FREESIA BULBS.

The accompanying illustration shows the scene at R. Fischer's bulb farm at San Gabriel, Cal., during the harvest time for Freesia Purity. The field shown contains ten acres. Japanese labor is employed, the bulbs being plowed out and then brought to the surface with a special short-handled hook made for the purpose.

Kansas City, Mo.—A. St. Clair Elberfield, of the Alpha Floral Co., has secured a 96-year lease on a 2-story brick building, with a frontage of fifty feet, at 1220 and 1222 Grand avenue, on the basis of a valuation of $200,000. The annual rental will be $10,000. Extensive improvements will be made in the leased property, with the ultimate intention of making it the firm's headquarters.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The inevitable July slump in prices arrived on schedule time. After an excellent week, consequent upon innumerable school commencements and the numerous late June weddings, the bottom dropped out Saturday, July 1, and a patient acceptance of the midsummer condition of the market was everywhere manifest.

Little good stock of any kind is arriving and the small amount that came in last week was quickly absorbed at excellent prices. The most of the rose stock now is short-stemmed and colorless. A few selected Beauties brought 30 cents, but the balance go at almost any quotation. Of the other roses, Maryland seems now to be the favorite, and 3 to 4 cents will be top this week for the best of the tea roses—a depression of fifty per cent from a week ago.

Carnations are seldom high grade. Most of the stock arriving is weary and needs no urging to go to sleep; $1.50 per hundred is the acknowledged top at present for the best of them. There is a great abundance of outdoor stock, including cut spiræas, hydrangeas, iris and gladioli. The latter sells at from $1 per dozen down, mostly down.

Lilies do not go above 4 cents and 2 cents to 3 cents is the prevailing price. The New York market has been flooded with them since Easter. Valley sold well, at good prices, all through June.

Last week was sweet pea week in other cities than Philadelphia. In New York the demand was persistent, and many of the baskets for the graduates were made of them. Prices held firm until Saturday. Orchids are not so abundant and for selected flowers 60 cents to 75 cents was at times obtainable. Gardenias are quite abundant, with prices low. The street men handle large quantities of sweet peas and carnations.

Club Picnic.

The annual outing of the New York Florists' Club, Wednesday, June 28, was the usual success, the committee announcing a balance in the treasury. Nearly 300 attended, a good crowd, considering the intense heat and the early date. The general belief is that it will be best to postpone these annual reunions of the club until the middle of July.

This was the New York Florist's Club's eleventh celebration. The music was modern and abundant, the games well contested, and several hundred dollars was distributed in prizes.

The committee worked harmoniously and indefatigably, and deserves much commendation. President Nugent made the welcoming address. The start was made an hour earlier than usual, and a long sail up the sound, nearly to Glen Island, was greatly enjoyed. Refreshments on the boat were varied and abundant. Boxes of candy were provided for the ladies and children, and the young folks tripped the light fantastic. The return trip was ended at 9:30 p. m. and no accident marred the universal happiness and good fellowship of the occasion.

Chairman Fenrich, of the outing committee, was unable to attend because of jury duty, but Messrs. Young, Scott, Chadwick, Schultz, Donaldson, Kessler and Langjahr did themselves great credit by the careful attention to detail and the fulfillment of all promises, including many novel features in contests and comfort.

The dinners were up to the Wetzel standard and the supply was unstinted. Every lady and gentleman present took part in the bowling matches.

The number of handsome ladies present made the division difficult for the beauty committee, but when the venerable little Mrs. Mary A. Holt carried off the honors, every lady present agreed with the committee. The four babies under two were all beautiful and each received a special prize. The president distributed the prizes in the pavilion at the close of the dinner, thereby avoiding the usual confusion on the return trip of the boat, as in other years.

Some families carried away enough money in prizes to pay their expenses several times over.

The ball game was not a howling success and sadly lacked prearrangement.

Long races should be eliminated—a quarter-mile stunt is too far with the thermometer at 100 degrees in the sun. In the ladies' races there were a few tumbles, but no casualties. In the special race between Scott and Miesem, Scott "bit the dust."

The fat men's race was dry, with Traendly and Nugent "retired."

Various Notes.

The early closing movement is on, and most of the wholesale houses will close during July and August at 4 or 5 p. m.

The Greek florists will combine with their brethren in the candy and other trades and expect a crowd of 750 people at their outing, Thursday, July 6.

The Horticultural Society of New York held its regular monthly exhibition at Bronx Park, last Saturday and Sunday. The extreme heat interfered with the attendance, but the display was fully up to the high standard of this society's exhibitions. The weekly Saturday lectures draw better audiences than last season.

Arthur Hunt, of A. H. Langjahr's, is spending his vacation at the Plaza Sanitarium, in this city, where he has undergone a serious operation.

The holiday season has begun in earnest and many of the employees in the wholesale section are away. The annual improvement in the stores has also begun and everything will be shipshape by September 1.

J. K. Allen has been handling large quantities of cut hydrangeas. He will spend his summer vacation at Oxford, N. Y. Miss Smedley, the bookkeeper, leaves July 8 for a two weeks' holiday in the mountains.

Walter Siebrecht and Mrs. Siebrecht are enjoying their outing in the Catskills.

The Geller Florists' Supply Co. has added another store to its conveniences. It is close to the old quarters, which will be used for storage. The fittings are the work of the Forster Mansfield Co. Mr. Geller and family have moved to their country home on Long Island for the summer.

The plant market is closed at Fifty-ninth street. Mr. Birnie considers the sanitation bad there for man, beast and plants, and is not enthusiastic as to its continuance in that locality. There are too many restrictions, too much red tape and politics and too little appreciation of those who alone can make the market a permanent success.

Russin & Hanfling are enlarging the front of their store on West Twenty-eighth street. Mr. Hanfling is now in Europe making the firm's annual purchases.

The agitation in behalf of a parcels post has had a wide effect, resulting in a revolutionary reduction in express rates, amounting in some cases to fifty per cent. The new tariff goes into effect August 1.

One o'clock is the general Saturday closing hour for all the seed houses in the city.

July 23 is the date fixed for the fishing excursion of the employees of the wholesale cut flower houses. The managers are Robert Jackson and Harry Riechers.

The stork paid its fifth visit last week to Phil Kessler, of Woodside.

The monthly meeting of the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association was held Wednesday, July 5, at which time final arrangements for the annual outing were to be completed.

Mrs. Frank McMahon, wife of the rose grower, died June 28, after an operation.

John Weiler and Miss Elizabeth Reib were married July 1.

Bowling.

Rutherford sent seven of its crack bowlers over to New York Friday evening and the match—two games—resulted as usual. New York wins everything it tries, and expects to stand high at Baltimore.

The scores follow:

OBITUARY.

J. A. McPheron.

J. A. McPheron, pioneer nurseryman of Carrollton, Ill., died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Clough, in that city, June 22. The funeral took place at Carrollton, June 25, and he was placed by the side of Mrs. McPheron, who preceded him one year and five days. Mr. McPheron was past 85 years of age, and with his wife had celebrated their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary. Besides his love for horticulture, he was a great lover of music and for years taught vocal music. He was the father of R. A. McPheron, proprietor of the Cottage Greenhouses at Litchfield, Ill., and J. Clint McPheron, florist, at Carrollton, Ill. There are four other children.

Paul De Longpre.

Paul De Longpre, known throughout the civilized world as "the king of flower painters," died June 29 at his home in Hollywood, near Los Angeles, Cal., at the age of 56 years. He had been ill for several months. He is survived by his wife and two daughters.

Los Angeles, Cal.—R. F. Vogel, 4714 Santa Monica boulevard, is building a greenhouse, at a cost of $1,000.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

CHARGE enough to make it possible to give the best service you are capable of furnishing.

WHEN you telegraph an order add the code word "Transmit," which means "Mentioned in your advertisement in the Florists' Review."

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

AN advertiser not given to the use of slang in affairs of business is offering Melody as "the Ultima Thule in roses." If that occurs to you as being "the limit" you will be sure of it after consulting Webster.

THE weather has been unusually hot all over the middle west in the last few days, reducing the volume of business to the lowest level. Ordinarily, this week is about the dullest of the year, even with normal weather, for firecrackers and flowers never did go well together; when people are buying one they neglect the other. The demand should now improve rather than retrograde.

THE WEATHER.

Statement July 4 by the weather chief in Washington:

"The present hot wave is more extensive and more intense than any in our records. It affects almost all of the Mississippi valley and the east.

"There is no immediate relief in sight. The hot wave is caused by an abnormally high barometric pressure over the Atlantic ocean. This condition has existed since June 13.

"Nothing like it in intensity has been known to meteorological science in the experience of the students of this generation."

NOT LIKE SOME OTHERS.

The Florists' Hail Association, during its entire lifetime, has paid losses promptly. Not everyone is sufficiently appreciative to write the officers in thanks, but whenever one does so it serves to lighten the labors of the day. The following letter, addressed to Joseph Heacock, treasurer, is sent in by Secretary Esler:

We desire very much to thank you for your prompt settlement and courteous treatment in adjusting the loss incurred by us during a recent hail storm at this place. It was that prompt attention not common to insurance companies.—Kemble Floral Co., per Arthur H. Smith, Boone, Ia., June 24, 1911.

IN FAVOR OF FATHERS' DAY.

Please put me down as heartily in favor of pushing for a Fathers' day on the second Sunday in November. Not only do I favor the celebration of such a day, but I am in favor of that particular date, as it comes just six months after Mothers' day and it would also help wonderfully in this Colorado town in opening up our fall business. In our territory everyone is slow in taking hold of the greenhouse flowers at that time of year. If we could get the newspapers aroused to encourage it and could secure the appointment of that day as Fathers' day, with the chrysanthemum as the flower, it would give our business a start in the fall and our customers would wake up at once to the fact that the frost had not done away with all the flowers and good cheer. L. J. Reid.

EXPRESS RATES.

July 1 brought two important announcements with regard to express transportation, a vitally important factor in the florists' business. In the first place, the Interstate Commerce Commission announced that it will make a thorough investigation of all matters relating to the express business, and those who have given the subject any study feel sure this can not but bring out facts that will lead to changes in favor of the shippers. At the same time the companies announced that August 1 they will do away with the double graduation of express rates between exclusive points and put in effect instead the single graduation, which has always been in effect between common points. The change will take place on the lines of all the companies with the exception of the Long Island railroad. An example of how other rates will be changed is, where a shipper was charged $1 for shipping a package which has to travel over two companies, the charge will be but 85 cents.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The week of July 4 usually is named as the dullest of the year, and this time the week has the added handicap of excessive heat. With such weather as has prevailed since June 30 it is a wonder that there is any business at all, or any stock. But, on the contrary, there has been, on most days, a quite fair demand. It has come principally from out of town, and the orders have not been large, but it has served to show that the ice men are not now the only ones who can do business in summer—good flowers now sell every day in the year in this market.

The heat has been so excessive that it is not strange that flowers average poorer than they have in years—the wonder is that there are any good flowers at all. The first days of July again broke the heat records. Sunday was the hottest July 2 in the history of the weather bureau, and July 3, 4 and 5 were worse. Coming after such a six weeks as we have had since the first hot wave in May, the effect was to about finish off the carnations and still further decrease the size of the roses. There are so few really first-class carnations that there has been an advance in the price of the best. The first asters appeared with the hot wave, however, and it will not be long before the carnations can be spared.

Beauties continue in good supply, but the cut is nearly all long-stemmed; buyers who need medium or short Beauties would better order early in the day, or they stand little chance. Of course the quality is not up to what it is in cool weather, but it is remarkably good when one considers the temperature in the greenhouses. The same can be said of the other roses. The Killarney

Long-stemmed Fancy KILLARNEYS

FINEST ROSES YOU CAN FIND IN SUMMER

We are handling a large cut of Killarneys grown especially for the summer crop. Most of them run to medium and long stems, and you know that the longer the stem the larger and finer the flower is. The Pink Killarneys have the best color we ever have seen on summer roses. If you are not using these roses, order some at once—you will find they are better than any others you may be using, and that will make you a steady customer.

Specially strong on the 6c, 8c and 10c grades

BEAUTIES

Special crop—mostly long stems

Year after year we have supplied the trade with the finest Beauties available in summer. Not only has the quality of our summer crop been exceptionally good, but our growers have been able to maintain a steady supply—we have been able to furnish the best Beauties all the time. If you are familiar with this crop, you already are buying of us. If you don't know these Beauties, we shall be glad to have you get acquainted—there will be profit in it for both of us.

Valley

Order Valley of us and you will draw on a never-failing source of supply. We have the best grade.

Cattleyas

For quality these will stand with the best seen anywhere in this country and we always can supply.

EASTER LILIES

You can get here all the Lilies you need. We have a big supply of fine home-grown stock; these are just the thing for funeral work, also decorations.

Glads

America, Augusta and other finest varieties.

Daisies

Shastas that are sure to please; big flowers and a big supply.

¶We now have a crop of outdoor Sweet Peas, all colors, that are fine, clean flowers on good stems

HEADQUARTERS FOR ALL GREENS

Here you get the best Fancy Ferns, all the Smilax and Asparagus strings you want, Sprengeri and Plumosus bunches, Mexican Ivy and Galax. No order too large for our facilities and no order too small to receive our careful attention.

are really better than one would expect to be able to get after the mercury in the thermometers had been boiling over intermittently for six weeks or more. The greatest trouble is to find roses that have enough stem. The greater part of the receipts are short, small and open. A few fine Kaiserin are seen, but the variety has been discarded by most of the growers, they being willing to put their dependence in White Killarney. The shipping orders almost all call for roses, as they are the best flowers now to be had.

Gladioli are in increased supply and a few auratums have arrived to reinforce the Easter lilies. In the last few days these have begun to sell much better, for the heat seems to have no effect on their quality. Valley is abundant; the weddings are over. Sweet peas are about down and out because of the heat; such as are holding up are selling well. Cattleyas are not overabundant. There are quantities of field daisies and also some fine Shastas.

Greens are in fair supply and are selling as well as could be expected at a season of the year when a large part of the demand is, of course, for funeral flowers.

June Weather.

The month of June, 1911, was the warmest June of official record in Chicago. Two decidedly warm periods marked the month—June 1 to 11 and June 19 to 26—during which time maximum temperatures of 90 degrees or higher were recorded on six days. The rainfall was deficient by nearly one-third of the normal amount, and about four-fifths of it occurred during the last half of the month. Sunshine was considerably in excess of the normal, amounting to seventy-nine per cent of the possible.

July started with another heat wave, in which the mean temperature ran for several days nearly 20 degrees above normal.

June Business.

The business for June was a disappointment, all because of the weather. The first part of the month there was a flood of stock, and the latter part of the month correspondingly little. All through the month the quality of the greater part of the supply was poor, because of the heat. Early in the month prices averaged as low a return as flowers ever have made in this market, and later the supply was so light that the better prices made no considerable sum of money, so that on the whole June does not compare favorably with the month last year, when June was especially good. The year's increase in glass was reflected in the production of flowers, but not in the money received, but practically everyone believes the outcome was due solely to the heat and that with normal weather conditions business will be better than ever.

The Market.

With July 1 the season of 1910-11 practically came to an end and, by all reports, the latter part of June was a dandy, notwithstanding the weather, which was anything but pleasant. Carnations suffered the most; in fact, the bulk of stock coming in these days must be moved quickly, for the flowers are getting so soft and small that it is no pleasure to handle them. There are some good summer roses, which find ready sale; the same can be said of sweet peas, which are not overabundant. This market is being well supplied with lilies, which seem to have struck it just right. During the last fortnight there was a good demand for Beauties, and the supply was up to the demand. The supply of gaillardias, Shasta daisies, coreopsis and other outdoor cut flowers helps to fill any vacancy caused by the giving out of some of the indoor stock.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business is at the low water mark. There is some local demand and a fair amount of shipping, with only a moderate supply of good flowers. The heat has been fearful and with the glorious Fourth, our one real holiday of the year, has retarded business. Easter lilies are good and extremely plentiful—too plentiful for the demand—and prices are low. Valley and Beauties have sold fairly well on some days; also good Maryland and Kaiserin. Cattleyas are rather dull. Nice Shasta daisies are to be seen. Sweet peas are abundant. There are some presentable carnations. The market is burdened with poor roses. A few asters have appeared. Dagger ferns are most active among the greens. Water lilies have but moderate support from the buyers.

Horticultural Hall.

The Glorious Fourth found the planting complete at the east end and in the parterre, a big piece of work successfully accomplished. Oglesby B. Paul will tell you that it will be another month before the effect of the winter's plans, so carefully made in the office, can be judged. Xavia E. Schmidt will tell you that the plants are not all he would like them to be; the immense quantity that he was obliged to prepare in a certain time, and with a limited force at his disposal, interfered with their quality, but they are there and growing, and in a little while all else will be forgotten. The impression given by the changes, unfortunately unassisted by expert guidance, is that there have been modifications rather than changes. Bolder effects have been attempted on the parterre. Groups of cannas, alternating with variegated agaves, form the circles from which the festoons are hung. The festoons themselves have departed from the light coloring that has prevailed during the last few seasons. They are formed of dark varieties of alternantheras, with an occasional lighter band. The circles in the center of the parterre are filled with solid colors, with here and there a border. Flowering and foliage plants are used in turn. The canna, presumably of dwarfer sorts, has gained a foothold here. There was one solid bed of ageratum, used heretofore as a border only. Crotons are a feature of the parterre. The few beds devoted to these showy foliage plants are particularly pleasing, full and well colored.

The feature of the planting at the east end is the cactus. The beds filled with large cacti and echeverias were wonders in their way. The perfection of design and precision in execution excite admiration. These beds are in the foreground, on the drive facing the main entrance to the hall, while behind the landscape is brightened with the gay colors of the beds of flowering plants, relieved by the rich green of well kept turf. The whole formed a cool picture, pleasant to see.

A Spectacular Event.

MELODY

In selling this rose early in the season we did not recommend it as a summer bloomer, our feeling being that it was an unusually good winter forcer. Now after a month or more of hot weather we find it a splendid summer rose, holding its color and form in fine shape. As a cut flower it has been and is selling extra well and at present we are often unable to take care of all orders that come in to us. Unquestionably we recommend it as the very finest yellow rose and one of the best money makers on the market. For a grower retailing his own cut flowers it hasn't an equal in the rose line today.

DOUBLE PINK KILLARNEY. It has no equal commercially. Own root, 2½-inch, $20.00 per 100; $150.00 per 1000. Grafted, 2½-inch, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

PRINCE DE BULGARIE. Entirely different from any rose grown. Own root, 2½-inch, $15.00 per 100; $120.00 per 1000. Grafted, 2¼-inch, $20.00 per 100; $180.00 per 1000.

tween those who make The Review what it is on the eastern seaboard, that each shall respect the other's district. For instance, W. N. Craig will call J. Austin Shaw up on the long distance telephone and apprise him that a certain Boston potentate is on the five-hour train for New York, whereupon J. Austin will desert Twenty-Eighth street for the Grand Central station, where he will smilingly meet the aforesaid Boston potentate on his arrival, learn that portion of his business which may be considered public property, and describe it in his best style. So it is with some hesitation that the subject of the present sketch is approached. It seems clear sailing, however.

A Philadelphia seedsman left New York June 28 on the good ship Olympic. Note well, he had left New York. A Philadelphia merchant with a branch house in Greater New York, and with a genius for advertising, invited the passengers of the Olympic to send their messages or orders by wireless at his expense. The Philadelphia seedsman, himself an advertising genius, was quick to see and grasp the opportunity. An accident to his eye-glasses and, at 3:15 p. m., W. Atlee Burpee sent a message through the clouds to John Wanamaker, ordering a duplicate. John Wanamaker was abroad, but those who have received from him the Wanamaker spirit were on the alert. Genius met genius. An aviator was engaged by telephone, the box containing the glasses was rushed to him by motor and at 4:15 p. m. a biplane was hovering over the Olympic as she swept toward the sea. The aviator dropped the box. Unfortunately, it missed the Olympic's deck; here was the only hitch in the whole affair, and the first attempt at ocean package delivery had been made. The vessel had gone too far to make another attempt possible and the incident closed with a congratulatory message by wireless from Mr. Burpee to Mr. Wanamaker on the enterprise displayed in his attempt.

THE FLORISTS' SUPPLY HOUSE OF AMERICA

CREPE FLOWERS

Now that good flowers are scarce in the wholesale markets, you will find Crepe Flowers are a great addition to your stock. They are perfect reproductions of natural flowers—very showy and make up beautifully. We recommend them to you as a profitable investment for the summer months.

CREPE ROSES in all colors, lifelike in their colors and in form. They are admirable in every respect.
CREPE SWEET PEAS—possess that fairy-like charm and variety of color that make them fashion-favored flowers.
CREPE ORCHIDS. The rich, tropical effect of the orchid is reproduced with startling fidelity.
CREPE WISTARIA—afford a grace and color not found in any other flower. The clusters are extremely effective.
For GREEN, use PREPARED ADIANTUM FRONDS. They are perfect and they are durable.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Pink ramblers, sweet peas and Lilium candidum are the favorites this week. Of course there are the same old reliables, such as carnations and roses, but since July is here, the tastes of patrons, as a rule, run to things that are summery and that is what the above-mentioned are. There are some splendid Crimson Ramblers on the market now, but Dorothy Perkins is the best seller and has the best blooms.

English iris is selling fairly well now, but peonies have gone for another year. Lilium candidum takes the place of L. Harrisii at present and makes nice funeral bunches. Carnot roses are plentiful, but not especially good. Lilies of the valley are somewhat scarce, but the price remains the same as during the spring. Cattleyas are scarce and bring 75 cents each, retail.

Garden flowers find favor with flower buyers during June and July; however,
